Governor A. B. "Happy" Chandler this week laid aside his executive duties and began his first active work among the voters of the state in a campaign which he enthusiastically believes will win for him the Democratic nomination for Kentucky to the United States Senate.

The pre-campaign tour, which has already been launched by the Governor, will not be a speech-making one. This week, he will travel through the counties of central, eastern and southeastern Kentucky, renewing old acquaintances, greeting supporters and handshaking with all and sundry who came his way.

Dispersed in the our will be a number of speaking engagements the Governor has already accepted sometime ago. All of these are at school commencement, civic gatherings or other meetings not of a political nature.

His trip which has been arranged by his campaign headquarters will take him through a majority of the counties of central Kentucky as far east as the headquarters of the State Road for Kentucky Colonies and to the Tennessee border in southeastern Kentucky.

On Friday and Saturday of the week Governor Chandler will be in Louisville for the annual Derby festival. On Friday night he will make the principal address at the Derby banquet for Kentucky Colonies, and on Saturday he will witness the running of the Derby. Governor Chandler will make the speech of congratulation to the owner of the Derby winner and present the solid gold trophy which annually is a Jockey Club to the winner of this most famous of all American turf classics.

Kiddie Revue Largely Attended

Friday Night—
Participants Enthusiastically Received

The Kiddie Novelties Revue of 1938 presented by the pupils of Mrs. Wm. Crouse last Friday at the gorgeous New James Theatre, was attended by a near capacity crowd and was well received by the audience.

These revues are growing yearly in popularity. This one drawing the largest number yet.

The kiddies as well as the older ones, dressed in most elaborate costumes and did their acts with finesse, proving that many hours of work had been spent in preparation. As a whole we thought it a very good show, of course we might be able to pick some high-light, but that would be only one person's opinion, so we'll omit it.

The production was in three-acts. The first was the "Dance Express" with a miniature airplane as part of the stage setting. The second was "Musical Moments" with students "swinging it" on the piano. The third and final was "A Bitter Endeavor" with a big red apple as a stage effect and the "Big Apple" was a featured number.

It was a grand show and all seemed to enjoy it immensely.

How Do Institutions Start?

All of us are aware of the passing of institutions, but an equally interesting study would concern itself with the origins of institutions. Just why do certain things become the rule, and others equally interesting fail to materialize? So old is humanity and so lost in pre-history are the origins of many of our customs that it is nearly impossible to reconstruct the actual conditions that went into the making of traditions. For example, how did language start, or more specifically, how did a given language become differentiated from its nearest relatives? We have plenty of data to show how such kindred languages as French and Spanish gradually developed from the parent Latin, but the Latin itself was originally a part of some other language stock and became differentiated through many decades or centuries. When one thinks of this, he finds himself as puzzled as when he tries to trace his family line back a thousand years. Pretty soon he discovers himself kin to more people than there were in the world at the time at least, theoretically. Try to think of a time when humanity had no domesticated animals, no cultivated plants. Even the turkey, formerly regarded as the last fowl to be domesticated, is now known to have been tamed by the Indians long before the motor car is only a further adaptation of the wheel. Who invented the wheel? Radio was there long before they have been always been there and have been used crudely in other times. Electricity is our servant and it is all about us, but the remotest savage came under the spell of lightning and knew as much about it as we. Inventors, after all, are mere adapters of ideas long known to humanity but inadequately used.

We laugh at rigmorales that children and primitive people know and use, but our simplest ideas and customs have usually evolved from just such conglomerations. Simplicity of speech, of manner, of religion, of political organizations, of social life has come laboriously and was preceded by more complex methods.

MOTHER'S DAY DEDICATION
I dedicate this to my mother who passed away on Mother's Day ten years ago.

God lent an angel to the earth
She came in lowly guise
She was not even beautiful
To our unseeing eyes
She swept and dusted, cooked and darned for all the heedless throng; and ever as she worked and hummed
A little tuneless song.

She always had a healing word
For people in distress;
And though her hands were worn and rough
Their touch was a caress.

As last her hair grew thin and gray
Her work took over-long
And often times we did not hear
That little tuneless song.

God lent his angel to the earth
To ease its frequent strain
But when he saw how tired she grew
He took her home again.

We missed her almost everywhere
For with our open eyes
We knew at last just who she was
We knew just who she was.

Sewing is done, three days one week and four days another. Supervisors visit the project every day or every two weeks to inspect garments made. Each seamstress has her duties to perform. There are recess periods and aside from these, orders and discipline is maintained. This is a worthwhile project and the county has been most generous in its support of same. Secal from this neighborhood enjoyed the Homemakers meeting at Mrs. Cecil Alexander's on Tuesday and we want you to know we are very proud of our club. The girls are still small, and if not detected, may quickly destroy most of the plants. It is an excellent plan to visit the plant bed every few days to be sure insects are not causing damage. Perhaps the best way to destroy cutworms in tobacco beds, especially when the plants are small, is to use a poison bran bait. This is made by mixing together 25 pounds of wheat bran and one pound of paris green, adding sufficient water to make a thick mush. The addition of 2 quarts of molasses is recommended by some entomologists. The tobacco cutworms absorb the bait soon and die. The plants are killed in the evening. Usually it is very effective."

The fleas which may be controlled by spraying or sprinkling the bed with 3-4-50 Bordeaux mixture at the rate of one quart per square yard. Bordeaux mixture is still the most effective insecticide for destroying the beetles. It should be diluted with about 20 percent by weight for some light infestation. If the beetles are not killed by Bordeaux mixture, dusted over the plants at the rate of one-half pound to each 100 square yards of bed. 100 feet of bed or 75 feet of 12-foot bed.

If commercial forms of Bordeaux mixture is obtained follow the directions given on the container. A mixture of lead and Bordeaux mixture is a good repellent for fleas.

Sheep Shearing Time
Kentucky

This is sheep shearing time in Kentucky, with most of the fleeces coming off in the first half of May. While wool is low in price, it nevertheless warrants careful handling and preparation for market, says Richard C. Miller in a statement from the College of Agriculture at Lexington. A few warm days in May usually cause a flow of oil known as yolk which makes the wool in good condition to shear.

Sheep should not be sheared when the wool is wet as wool put up in this condition may be badly damaged. Shearing is best done on a clean floor, tarpaulin or bluegrass do. The floor should be swept clean of all objectionable matter after the shearing and each sheep. Caution is necessary to avoid the mutilation or amputation of a test which might render a ewe unprofitable as a breeder.

Flea Beetle and Cut Worm Cause Damage

A number of tobacco growers are reporting damage to plant beds caused by flea beetle and cut worms. The following information is given in Kentucky Extension Circular No. 77 on management of tobacco plant beds:

A number of insects are particularly fond of tobacco plants. The most troublesome one is cutworm and fleabeetles. Cutworms often feed on the bed and the plants are still small, and if not detected, may quickly destroy most of the plants. It is an excellent plan to visit the plant bed every few days to be sure insects are not causing damage. Perhaps the best way to destroy cutworms in tobacco beds, especially when the plants are small, is to use a poison bran bait. This is made by mixing together 25 pounds of wheat bran and one pound of paris green, adding sufficient water to make a thick mush. The addition of 2 quarts of molasses is recommended by some entomologists. The tobacco cutworms absorb the bait soon and die. The plants are killed in the evening. Usually it is very effective."

The fleas which may be controlled by spraying or sprinkling the bed with 3-4-50 Bordeaux mixture at the rate of one quart per square yard. Bordeaux mixture is still the most effective insecticide for destroying the beetles. It should be diluted with about 20 percent by weight for some light infestation. If the beetles are not killed by Bordeaux mixture, dusted over the plants at the rate of one-half pound to each 100 square yards of bed. 100 feet of bed or 75 feet of 12-foot bed.

If commercial forms of Bordeaux mixture is obtained follow the directions given on the container. A mixture of lead and Bordeaux mixture is a good repellent for fleas.

Sheep Shearing Time
Kentucky

This is sheep shearing time in Kentucky, with most of the fleeces coming off in the first half of May. While wool is low in price, it nevertheless warrants careful handling and preparation for market, says Richard C. Miller in a statement from the College of Agriculture at Lexington. A few warm days in May usually cause a flow of oil known as yolk which makes the wool in good condition to shear.

Sheep should not be sheared when the wool is wet as wool put up in this condition may be badly damaged. Shearing is best done on a clean floor, tarpaulin or bluegrass do. The floor should be swept clean of all objectionable matter after the shearing and each sheep. Caution is necessary to avoid the mutilation or amputation of a test which might render a ewe unprofitable as a breeder.

All tags and filthy locks which were not removed before shearing should be removed before the fleece is rolled and tied. The fleece is spread upside down after removing from the sheep and the sides turned in and the fleece rolled in a compact bundle. Tying is done with paper twine, usually only enough to hold the fleece intact. The tying of wool with sisal or binder twine is the practice of some sheep raisers. It is a poor practice, as the fibers from these twines become entangled with the wool, cannot be separated and being of vegetable origin do not take the same dye as wool and show up as a serious defect in the finished cloth.

Wool should be packed in standard size burlap sacks, made especially for the purpose. Ewes, wethers, lambs and black, burry sheep, tarry and dead wool should be packed separately. Wool should be stored in a dry place until ready for market.

Lesson for May 8

CO-OPERATING IN SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 8:34-41.
GOLDEN TEXT—For he that is not against us is on our part—Mark 9:40.
PRIMARY TOPIC—When We Want to Be First.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Not in Our Class.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Working with Others for Christ.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Co-operating in Service.

That there is strength in united and co-operative effort is a truth so obvious that in the affairs of the home and of the office we would not attempt to make progress with "a house divided against itself." But with strange and destructive inconsistency some who are engaged in the propagation of the Christian faith, and often the very folk who speak much of love and fellow-ship and sacrificial service, fight one another with cunning and often bitterness of spirit, and all in the name of Christ whom they profess to serve.

No one who is awake to the real issue involved would ask any true believer to co-operate in Christian work with those who hold the name and outward symbols of the followers of Christ, deny His deity and His Word. But surely there is need for loving co-operation between all those who truly love the Lord, who believe in Him and in His Word. Why should we permit non-essentials to divide us when the world is dying without Christ and without hope? May this lesson bring many true Christians who may not see eye to eye on some point of church polity or interpretation of fellowship and united strength for God.

I. A Dispute by the way (vv. 30-34).

Jesus had taken His disciples from the Mount of Transfiguration by secluded roads through Galilee so that He might instruct them in the all-important truths regarding His death and resurrection. One could hardly conceive of a more propitious arrangement for their growth both in knowledge and grace. Did they profit by it? No; they not only did not understand what He told them but they used their time to dispute "among themselves who should be the greatest" (v. 34). Possibly James, Peter, and John were a bit puffed up by their experience on the Mount, or perhaps the others were jealous because Jesus had taken them with Him. Or perhaps it was just another unprovoked expression of the sinful pride that is so close to the surface of the human heart and mind. Ambition to be great for God is commendable, but how small is the man who seeks to vault himself in personal vainglory.

II. An Example of Humility (vv. 35-37).

"True greatness . . . consists not in attaining the first place in the notice and praise of the world, not in being served by many, but in being willing to stoop down to a humble place, not for the sake of self-assertion, not in timid diffidence, but in order to serve others for the sake of Christ" (Erdman). Note carefully that it is the receiving of a little one in the name of Christ that brings to us the glory of His presence with us. Every deed of kindness and love is commendable and has its own reward, but there is a vast difference between it and humble service in the name and for the glory of Christ. How unfortunate that the church has gotten itself into so much social service and has sometimes forgotten to do the work of Christ in His name.

III. A Lesson in Co-operation (vv. 38-41).

John, quick to apprehend spiritual truth, sees in the teaching of Christ concerning the little child the condemnation of something he had done. "If indeed it be true that to receive a child, an ordinary everyday child, is to receive Christ, and to receive God," said John within himself, "what did I do when I forbade that man who in the Name was casting out a demon? Verily the light had broken in upon him" (Morgan).

The man who casts out demons, or who gives the disciple of Jesus a cup of water, in His name—that is with true faith in Christ, and in His power, and for His glory—must be a believer. He may not belong to our group or circle, he may not speak our language, he may not use our methods, but if he is serving Christ we should not forbid him or speak evil of him. God has at times called a man to witness for Him, who has done so in a manner distasteful to others, and these in turn have aligned themselves against him and hindered his full usefulness in the gospel. One of the great evangelists of the last generation used methods which shocked many church folk. They stood against him, and yet that man was used to win hosts of business and professional men that the church had scarcely touched, into earnest Christian testimony and service which continues to this day. You and I may not like one another's appearance, or voice, or methods, but let us love and co-operate with one another for Christ's sake!

International Relations

MANY eminent people in the political and economic spheres have for years been endeavoring to place before a waiting and anxious world constructive ideas for establishing friendly international relations on a secure and practical basis. But, so far, none of the material methods which have been experimented with have succeeded in breaking down the fear of aggression, or the thoughts of bitterness in the human heart. That these world-wide errors need to be overcome is certain, if the world is to experience the lasting peace and prosperity which humanity has so long desired.

That there is a sure way of solving this most important of all world problems is unquestionable, since there is no unsolvable difficulty. The Apostle John in profound yet simple language, which a child can understand, clearly shows us this way. Tenderly he pleads (1 John 4:7, 8), "Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love."

Some may say that love is all very well in its very ideal place between friends and relatives, but of what practical use is it to experience the lasting peace and prosperity which humanity has so long desired? Further, it is sometimes argued that ideals, ambitions, and characteristics vary so widely in each country, that it is impossible for even the closest neighbor to understand another nation's differing needs and aims, and how to deal with them.

But are we not conclusively told that love, understood in its relation to Love, God, can overcome all barriers, and form that lasting link necessary for world peace? It is the unselfish desires and united aims of men which break down the temporary obstacles of language and material tradition. In the first century of the Christian era Paul discerned this fact, for he wrote, "Whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away." But "charity [love] never faileth" (1 Corinthians 13:8).

Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, writes on page 340 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures": "One Infinite God, good, unifies men and nations; constitutes the brotherhood of man; ends wars; fulfills the Scripture, 'Love thy neighbor as thyself'; annihilates pagan and Christian idolatry—whatever is wrong in social, civil, criminal, political, and religious codes; equalizes the scales; annuls the curse on sin, and leaves nothing that can sin, suffer, be punished or destroyed." Since the knowledge that God is Love, is indeed the Father of all, forebushadows the gloriously liberating effects mentioned in this Unimpaired message, it is not impracticable, but divinely potent and natural. This broader realization of true brotherhood, wherein each one seeks his own progress in the good of another, because all are brethren, will solve every national and international problem relating to frontiers, colonies, and economic supplies.

When in a human family there are discontent, lack of affection, and a general disregard for the progress and welfare of each member, it is easy to see that the whole structure of that family's success and well-being is liable to totter. Selfishness and joylessness have undesirable effects on health and happiness. But if one and all have a common basis for true affection and selfless service, the family will prosper, and will steadily increase in health, freedom, and tranquility.

Thus it should be with the great universal family—the brotherhood of nations. Each one should work for the general good, realizing that all the children of God have their rightful place in the divine plan, wherein there is fullest liberty, peace, and true prosperity for all. Since God is good, good is inexhaustible and permanent, and is given in equal measure to all by the loving Father. But in order that boundless good may be fully utilized for the benefit of every nation, man must be clearly understood as not material and imperfect, embodying mortal passions and hatreds, but as wholly spiritual and perfect, the reflection of God and the embodiment of all right ideas.

When love, reflecting the divine, governs the hearts of men and is practised in daily life, every human difficulty will be dissolved. The full understanding of the ever-present of divine Love is destined to dispel all sense of discord, whether of an individual or a collective nature, banish fear and distrust, and put an end to political intrigue and the desire for alliances and counteralliances. As humanity awakens to recognize "one Father with His universal family, held in the gospel of Love" (ibid., p. 577); good will and lasting peace will be established on earth. — The Christian Science Monitor.

Herb's Witch Doctor's Ally
Herbs seem to be the witch doctor's most potent ally. One preparation, made from the leaves and roots of a species of willow, is used successfully on diseases varying from purpura to typhoid in dogs. And it is said to have just as much effect on whites as it has on African natives.

Rabies, Hydrophobia Same Disease

Hydrophobia develops in only one out of seven persons bitten by a dog which has rabies. Rabies and hydrophobia are the same disease; it is called rabies in animals and hydrophobia in man. It is caused by a germ carried in the saliva, which enters the body through the wound and spreads along the course of the nerves. The symptoms usually develop in about three weeks.

LOUIS (HIX) NOEL

PASSES APRIL 29th

Again the death angel has visited our community and took from our midst one of our dearest loved and best citizens, Louis (Hix) Noel. He was called to rest in his eternal home Friday morning, April 29th. He had been sick for some time and knew the end was near at hand, and said he was ready to go. He joined the church early in life and was a good, faithful member.

He leaves to mourn his passing, his wife, Mrs. Anna Ellis Noel; one brother, Billy Noel; several nieces and nephews, and other relatives and friends.

His funeral was preached by Rev. J. A. Lee at the Oakland Baptist Church of which he was a member. He had selected his own pallbearers; and they were Chas. Brown, G. Beall, Frank Beall, Wm. A. Miller, Raymond Ellis, and Bryan Cleveland. Funeral arrangements were in charge of C. L. Carlton & Son.

Beautiful thoughts are those that bear on the wings of love a silent prayer.

Over the river where loved ones you'll see, I know his peace will abide with thee. He stood with thee when the shadows did fall. Where day was done and the night birds called. When morning comes and the shadows flee. I know that he still abides with thee.

The offices of this well established live stock commission house are located conveniently at the Union Stock Yards and are popular with farmers who truck their fat stock to the Cincinnati markets. Here you are assured of best prices at all times. If you are a member of this association you are sharing in the savings of one of our greatest contributions to agricultural progress. Kirby 2017.

The members of the commission service have connections with markets and in constant touch with the ups and downs of the prices. This is the knowledge that makes the commission's services invaluable with the average farmer.

Before the advent of the modern live stock commission house the farmer fared but poorly. The in formation concerning the best stock market to day or tomorrow was not available and he took just what he could get at his small town cattle buyer.

Since that day the co-operative associations have advanced rapidly in favor by live stock producers. The nominal commission fee was more than made up by the extra prices the farmer received for his stock.

In conclusion, we desire to refer the well directed Producers' Co-Operative Commission Association in Cincinnati to all our farmers and urge everyone to consign all stock to this great organization.

CHAPTER IV—Talking over the smoking with Sorely, Ruth is a creature of Jeff's story of shooting at the assassin rather than at her father, and just as she arrives at Pat Sorely's camp, she finds only a note to Pat from Sorely. Meaningless, Jeff rides into Tall Hill and sends word to Sorely to come. He is told to see him. He shows Howard a picture with his picture, and the picture of Clint Duke, wanted as the leader of a band of outlaws and robbers. The rest of the band arrives.

horse had a broken front hoof. Another was very lame and stepped a long way.

"I've seen both of those tracks before," Chiswick said. "The horses that made them belong to Morg Norris and Mile High." Gray replied, "Where do we go from here? My idea is to follow them into the canyon or along the rim."

Chiswick called to the rest of his posse and the others joined him. Brand recovered his rifle from the red-headed man.

"Norris and his crowd are in the canyon, boys," Lee said. "We're going to get them. But get it right. We have no evidence as to why they are here. So we can't cut loose at them promiscuously. Maybe they'll show their hand before we reach them. Anyway, till I give the word there isn't to be any gunplay. We're law-abiding citizens."

"How many of them are there?" asked Buck Courard, chewing tobacco stolidly. He was a short, thick-set man with an imperturbable face.

"Five of them, far as we know," Lee answered. "We're kind of in a hole, boys. If we jump up in a bunch of wolves before the smugglers arrive, they can give us the horse-lash and say they just rode out for a picnic. If we don't show up till after the Mexicans, the smugglers are liable to be rubbed out. We'll have to just jog along and hope for the best."

Gray dawn was beginning to sift into the darkness and bleed it with light. Lee held the lead, Jeff Gray at his heels.

Day poured down into the canyon. In an incredibly short space of time nothing was left of the blackness of night but a swirling mist. The men could see one another, not as shifting shadows but as individuals. All of them were conscious of a definite relief.

The leader drew up his horse. "Getting close to the rock slide," he said evenly. "They may be there or they may not. We're fixed so we have to guess at what these fellows want." Lee's glance rested for a moment on Gray. "Maybe I'm Gray flung a bullet at the nearest of the marksmen. The man whirled, caught a glint of light, and gave a cry of warning, fired once wildly toward the men pouring round the bend, and turned to run. He caught at the bridle of one of the plunging horses and tried to mount. His foot could not find the stirrup nor could he fling himself astride the back of the animal. A bullet struck the pommel of the saddle to which he was clinging. With a yell of terror he let go and flew down the gorge dodging in and out of the rocks as he went. Though the face of the man was covered by a bandanna except for the eyes, Gray recognized him as young Howard.

Taken by surprise, the other bandits thought only of flight. One man slipping to a horse, pulled himself to the saddle, and galloped off. Another plunged to the ground, as if he had stumbled, but did not rise again. The remaining two, peering in the rocks, answered the fire of the attackers.

"Get to cover, boys," Lee ordered. "We'll drive them into the open. Don't take any chances."

A saddled horse, snorting with fear, came out from the big boulders close to the spot where the two masked men crouched. The nearest outlaw seized the bridle and mounted. His companion clambered on behind, and the animal dashed down the canyon.

"Bring up the horses," Lee called to his son Frank. "We'll take after these fellows."

He moved forward to check the casualties. Two Mexicans were dead, as was also one of the outlaws. None of the Chiswick party had been hurt. The unexpected attack had sent their foes into panic.

Gray turned over the body of the dead man lying in the sand. He recognized the face of Sid Hunt, the cowboy he had seen in Yell Sanger's store when he first arrived in Tall Hill.

The crook-nosed man helped him to the dead man's rifle and cartridge-belt. He caught one of the horses left by the outlaws and started down the gulch.

"Better wait for the orders of the old man," Brand advised. "I'll just ride ahead and keep in touch with these fellows," Gray called back.

He passed a laden pack-mule. Part of the load was silver, he guessed. The mule had been in his fright and was picking at the shrubbery.

After he was through the boulder field, he put his mount to a trot, regardless of the brush which caught at him as he plowed into the chapparal. He was riding the gray gelding upon which he had seen Morg Norris leave town.

Presently he saw in front of him a man on foot. Sometimes the man was running, sometimes walking. In the space of three or four minutes he looked back a dozen times. Fear of death was riding him hard. As Gray drew nearer, the fugitive took refuge behind a mesquite.

"Don't you come any closer," he warned, his voice quavering with terror. The man was Lou Howard. During his flight he had dropped the rifle because it interfered with speed.

"Reach for the sky," Gray ordered. "No funny business or I'll drill you through."

A bullet whistled past his head and moved forward. In his hand was a forty-four, ready for action. The rifle he had left beside the horse.

"Don't yell!" shrieked Howard. "You keep back."

"Quick!" "I'm up," snapped Gray. The hands of Howard went up, the weapon in one of them.

"Don't kill me," he begged. Gray dismissed him. "You'll be safer tied up," the captor said. "Keep you from being killed by one of the boys when they get to you. Move over this way."

The crook-nosed man took the rope from the saddle and tied up Howard swiftly and thoroughly. He left him lying in an open place on the trail.

A quarter of a mile farther down the canyon there ran into a steep rocky gulch narrow as a Titan's sword-cleft. Far up this Gray could see two men and a horse. One of the men was riding, the other clambering along the trail after him.

Gray was now out and shing on them. It would be hot work for a man breathing that stiff slope, especially if he were in a desperate hurry. The haste Gray took for granted, since there were two riders and only one horse, with vengeance hard on their heels.

He turned up the gulch after them. In the tiny space, water poured down this rocky bed, but vegetation had small chance in such terrain. Whatever soil there might have been had long since been washed down into the gorge below.

The horse took the narrow bed of the trough like a cat, its muscles standing out hard as steel while it reared from one foothold to another. A bullet ricocheted from a flat rock above Gray and plowed into the rubble close to the front horse's hind legs, but the sound of the explosion came down in booming echoes. One of the men near the top of the gulch had fired at his pursuer.

Gray did not stop. He did not move the fire. The fugitives were answering again. They were not looking for a fight. What they wanted was to reach the flat country just ahead of them where they could disappear into some of the hill folds.

A bullet struck the pommel of the saddle to which he was clinging. With a yell of terror he let go and flew down the gorge dodging in and out of the rocks as he went. Though the face of the man was covered by a bandanna except for the eyes, Gray recognized him as young Howard.

Taken by surprise, the other bandits thought only of flight. One man slipping to a horse, pulled himself to the saddle, and galloped off. Another plunged to the ground, as if he had stumbled, but did not rise again. The remaining two, peering in the rocks, answered the fire of the attackers.

"Get to cover, boys," Lee ordered. "We'll drive them into the open. Don't take any chances."

A saddled horse, snorting with fear, came out from the big boulders close to the spot where the two masked men crouched. The nearest outlaw seized the bridle and mounted. His companion clambered on behind, and the animal dashed down the canyon.

"Bring up the horses," Lee called to his son Frank. "We'll take after these fellows."

He moved forward to check the casualties. Two Mexicans were dead, as was also one of the outlaws. None of the Chiswick party had been hurt. The unexpected attack had sent their foes into panic.

Gray turned over the body of the dead man lying in the sand. He recognized the face of Sid Hunt, the cowboy he had seen in Yell Sanger's store when he first arrived in Tall Hill.

The crook-nosed man helped him to the dead man's rifle and cartridge-belt. He caught one of the horses left by the outlaws and started down the gulch.

"Better wait for the orders of the old man," Brand advised. "I'll just ride ahead and keep in touch with these fellows," Gray called back.

He passed a laden pack-mule. Part of the load was silver, he guessed. The mule had been in his fright and was picking at the shrubbery.

After he was through the boulder field, he put his mount to a trot, regardless of the brush which caught at him as he plowed into the chapparal. He was riding the gray gelding upon which he had seen Morg Norris leave town.

Presently he saw in front of him a man on foot. Sometimes the man was running, sometimes walking. In the space of three or four minutes he looked back a dozen times. Fear of death was riding him hard. As Gray drew nearer, the fugitive took refuge behind a mesquite.

"Don't you come any closer," he warned, his voice quavering with terror. The man was Lou Howard. During his flight he had dropped the rifle because it interfered with speed.

"Reach for the sky," Gray ordered. "No funny business or I'll drill you through."

Piner P. T. A. Meets Monday Night

The Piner P. T. A. held a meeting at the Piner School Auditorium Monday, May 2, with Mrs. Herbert Hoffman as president.

Prof. H. H. Mills of Homes High School, Covington, gave a talk on the origin and purpose of P. T. A. tracing back to when P. T. A. was a Mother's Club. Mr. Mills told of how he started his career as a teacher in Piner's first high school at which time it was housed in a one-room dwelling, with about 12 pupils, of which one received her diploma on graduating night, four years later.

Impossible to make his aim, he took a train for Covington, Ky., on Christmas and never came back, but he was glad to see how Piner had traveled the upward road, after twenty-four years.

He gave some interesting data to the faculty on leaving promises to be with us again next year. The Whip-Poor-Will were calling in the clear night air, which he said reminded of his home on Bowen Creek—so all in all he enjoyed his visit, even as we enjoyed his talk presented.

Prof. L. M. Gabriel of the Kenton county school board was present and promised to give us plans of program for P. T. A. the next year, hoping to have a more successful year in 1938-39.

Miss Edna Conkel director of the Radio Barn Dance Show, which the P. T. A. is sponsoring was also present, and gave a talk about the program, which will be given May 11 and 12 and 13. She urged that everyone who can play, sing, dance, whistle, yodel, or do any original act of any kind, or impersonate any Radio Star, meet her either this Thursday Friday or Monday night in the school auditorium anytime after 7 p. m. for an audition. The cast will wear overalls and red bandanas, and bring dresses.

The P. T. A.'s say this is the biggest thing they have ever attempted and the people of Kenton County will not only enjoy being in the show but the audience will have plenty of good old time music, fun and laughter. Characters are wanted to impersonate Art Link, Little Clifford, Lulu Belle, Skyland Scotty, Pat Buttram, Porky Martin, Henry Burr, Eddie Allen and many others.

Be sure to get your tickets in advance and for further particulars call Mr. Taylor at Piner school.

New James Theatre News

Bargain night, which is held on Monday night, proves to be one of the most popular nights at this Theatre. This special night was started four weeks ago with 300 people attending the first, 375 the second night, 475 people attended the third showing, and on last Monday night, the showing of Will Rogers in "Judge Priest" assembled one of the largest crowds ever to be together in Walton. 900 people came to see this show, six hundred twenty-five had seats and standing room for the rest. The show and the balance waited until ten o'clock for a second show. Bargain night was started in order that everybody might have at least one night of enjoyment each week for so small a price—10 cents for everybody, but everybody waits, eager for this night of entertainment.

Monday night isn't just another show night, but each picture is selected for this special occasion. A picture that will be enjoyed by old and young alike. As long as the people want there special bargain nights and attend, as they have, you can expect these nights to continue and of seeing the best pictures of the week on these special occasions.

On Monday night, May 9th, they have selected one of the best pictures produced in 1937. It is "Jungle Princess." Some few people saw this picture before, but the majority have not, those who have seen the masterpiece are more eager to see it the second time than they were the first. There isn't a dull moment in the whole picture and we suggest to make a special effort to get it. The whole for attendance has been set at 1,000 admissions, won't you help make this possible, two shows will be had the first at 6:45 and the second at 8:30, set this night aside for your one night each week of enjoyment, you will well be paid in entertainment. Aside from this special picture you will also see some of the best pictures made playing there this week. Goldwyn follies on Friday night. Bad man of Brimstone Saturday night, Rosalie on Sunday night, and Merry We Live on Tuesday night.

Each picture is well worth twice the admission, and we suggest if you possibly can, make a special effort to see all the shows this week. Editor's Note—I had the pleasure of seeing the Jungle Princess and I can recommend this picture as one of the best production I ever had the pleasure to see.

Barkley's Weekly News Letter

Majority Leader Discusses New Spending Program

By ALBEN W. BARKLEY

Washington, D. C., April 19th.—The President's message and his fire-side chat have brought forward again the question whether the Government should take steps by the loan or expenditure of money to stimulate work and industrial production.

In considering the President's recommendations we must divide them into two categories. First the continuation of present activities and second the inauguration of new activities now under way.

Under the first category comes such present programs as the WPA, the Farm Security Administration, the Civilian Conservation Corps, Highway Construction and one or two others.

Portions of the press have carried box car head lines announcing that the program involved the expenditure of Five Billion Dollars of new money in addition to what has been expended annually for recovery purposes.

The truth is that only about one and one-half billion dollars will be new expenditures. The WPA has been in existence since direct relief was discontinued and has been spending about one and one-half billion dollars per year for work projects.

The amount recommended by the President for next year represents a very small increase over the present program.

The same is true of highways. The hundred million dollars recommended in his message merely brings the appropriation up to what we have been expending recently for road building.

The same is true of farm security and civilian conservation corps. The President recognizes that these activities ought to continue. The amount recommended for farm security is only slightly above present expenditures for that purpose and the fifty million dollars recommended for the CCC camps is only enough to retain present camps without adding new ones.

The billion and one-half million available for RFC loans does not involve new appropriations but merely a broader authority in making the loans. The money is on hand and is available to those who can qualify for the loans. This law has already been passed and signed by the President so it is not involved in the new program in any way.

These are an increase of thirty-five millions for flood control and twenty-five million for public buildings, both of which are greatly needed in certain portions of the country. The thirty-seven millions for flood control is an addition to the sixty-three millions heretofore recommended and would bring the total amount for flood control to one hundred million dollars for next year's expenditures.

The new sums involved in the President's recommendation merely will be a revival of the PWA program which was suspended last year together with an additional amount for housing and slum clearance.

The net result means about one and one-half billion dollars over present programs and these additional sums will go into construction work in various portions of the country which will give employment to labor, stimulate heavy industry and increase transportation, it does not matter whether you call it priming the pump or putting additional money into circulation or what you may call it. The object of the expenditure is to give work to people who are unemployed and to stimulate greater activity in industrial production both of which go hand in hand.

There will be opposition to this program. There are some who do not think the Government ought to spend money for any purpose except to pay the salaries of public officials. It is not the desire or purpose of the Government to enter any field in competition with private enterprise, but where private enterprise is for the time being inactive, the Government must attempt to provide means of employment and at the same time add permanently to the value of each community by the construction of works and projects, such as highways, streets, sidewalks, school houses, public buildings, waterworks, sewers and other similar projects which are useful, or needed and are desirable in the life of the community which may obtain them.

If the work is needed, if the labor is employed, if industry is stimulated, the result will be beneficial. If we increase employment and stimulate industry, we are adding to the national income and the national wealth and making it easier to pay both public and private debts.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to our relatives, friends and neighbors for their kindness and sympathy shown in the loss of our dearly beloved husband and father.

Mrs. Davis, married on her deathbed, late Monday, to Cecil Davis 25, 208 East Thirty-eighth Street, Latonia, coal and feed dealer of Walton, Ky., died four hours later.

The marriage with the young woman making her responses from her death bed, was performed at the Otto home at 3:30 p. m. by the Rev. Alfred G. Schnake, pastor of Christ's Evangelical Church, Ft. Thomas. He also will officiate at the funeral.

Although Mrs. Davis had been ill her parents said they had no idea she was near death at the time the ceremony was performed.

The date had been set for May 9 before she became bedfast and the young couple was determined that it should not be postponed.

Miss Otto had been ill in bed for a month. She was graduated in 1932 for Highland High School, Ft. Thomas, where as a student the previous year she won the State Latin prize.

THIS and THAT

By MAOL-CHOLM

Cal Ogden of Covington, caught a 4 1/2 pound large mouth bass in the Walton Reservoir, Monday morning. Ward Rice recently caught one that weighed 5 pounds. Some nice fishes, eh!

Last Saturday another large crowd was on hand for the Walton Merchants drawing. The lucky folks were Miss Hazel Chapman, Miss Cora Aylor, Mrs. Wm. Works, Miss Emma Johnson, Miss Louise Conrad, Z. A. Works and O. C. Long. It seems the ladies are luckier than the men.

We were surprised and terribly shocked at practically the same time Tuesday. We learned of the marriage of Cecil Davis to Miss Dorothy Otto, and was surprised—and at the same time, this was quite a shock. We can imagine no greater sorrow for a man than to have a bride of only a few hours taken. Cecil is a very good friend of ours, and we offer our sincerest sympathy.

Well, folks, this is the last issue for your scribbler with the Advertiser. We were offered, and finally accepted, a position in Eaton, Ohio and will go to work there Monday. We sort hate to leave the old town and the paper we have been with for so many years, but we think it for the best. Our wish is that you will be as thoughtful and considerate of Mr. Jump and his employees as you have always been with us. And we wish Mr. Jump, unlimited success in this little city. Well, so long. I'm sure you won't miss "This and That."

Hamilton High Class Makes Trip

Seniors From All Parts of State Visit State Teachers College

The Senior class of the Hamilton High School, composed of Dale Williamson, Corrine Williamson, Pauline Aylor, Bessie Hodges, Mary Calvin Altha, Margie Miller, and Robert W. Carroll, enjoyed a two-day tour of Kentucky last week. Leaving home early Friday morning the youngsters motored to Richmond State Teachers College where they attended the activities of Senior day held annually for High School Seniors from all parts of Kentucky.

The morning hours were spent touring the buildings and grounds of the college campus under the leadership of an interesting little student guide. At the noon hour a delicious lunch was served all the visiting seniors by the college, which was readily appreciated after the tour of inspection which covered many miles. Immediately after lunch the whole body gathered in the stadium for a most interesting and varied program, put on by the various departments of college work including games, stunts, wrestling matches, R. O. T. S., drill work and football. The college band rendered stirring selections during lapses of the program, and at the conclusion everyone admitted having spent an enjoyable afternoon, even though the sun was several degrees too warm for complete comfort.

Following the program at the college the Hamilton boys and girls enjoyed a late afternoon trip out to the foothills of the Kentucky mountains, visiting Big Hill, and the Deer Stable, near Sand Gap, Ky. That evening, upon return to Richmond for the night, they took in the movie "Adventures of Tom Sawyer," and returned to their rooms at the Hotel Eastern, eight very tired but happy youngsters.

After an early breakfast, Saturday morning they started for Cumberland Falls, going by way of Berea, London, and Corbin. Many stops were made for the purpose of making kodak pictures, study of various rock formations, and natural plant life, etc. A short visit at the falls and

Delegation Goes To Homemakers District Meeting

Changes Made In Game and Fish Code

Fishing In Navigable Streams During Month of May

From a synopsis of the Game and Fish Code as passed by the General Assembly at its recent session, we take the following excerpts which we think may be of interest to a number of our readers.

Fishing in May—Permissible only in navigable streams, but not above the last lock and dam, with pole and line. A navigable stream is one in which the government has locks and dams. However, no fishing may be done this year until the 31st of May when the bill becomes a law. This bill did not carry an emergency clause, thus does not become a law until May 31st. Fishing is permitted in ponds, as usual.

Open Season on Birds—Quail or Bob White, Nov. 24 to Jan. 9; Mourning Dove, Sept. 1 to Oct. 31; Woodcock, Nov. 25 to Dec. 15. Bag Limit—Quail, 12; Mourning Dove, 15; Woodcock, 4; Ducks, 10; Geese, 5. Open Season on Wild Animals—Mink, Opposum, Raccoon, Red Fox, Skunk and Muskrat, Nov. 1 to Dec. 31; Squirrel, July 1 to Oct. 1; Rabbits, Nov. 24 to Jan. 9. Bag Limit—Squirrels, 6; Rabbits 8.

The party started the long journey home, stopping at several interesting points, such as High Bridge Harrodsburg, and Danville. Nearing home they found they had traveled over five hundred miles, that they were very tired, that they had consumed a huge stack of hamburger sandwiches (to say nothing of all the soft drinks and ice-cream, etc.) but every one voted the trip a great pleasure and wished they might have had a longer time to spend at the various places of interest.

Mr. and Mrs. Garland Huff chaperoned the boy and girls on this trip. William Allen, a graduate of a few years ago, also accompanied the group, taking some of the passengers in his car.

Forty Boone County Women Make Trip To Winchester, Friday

A trip through the bluegrass country, where each level field was doing its share of producing the finest of tobacco, thoroughbred horses and small grains; this was the panorama that was twice enjoyed by the delegation of Homemakers when they journeyed to Winchester on May 28th for the sixth annual Bluegrass Convention. Some forty women from Boone County registered at the Orlan Church of Winchester where at 10 o'clock six hundred women from the six counties comprising this district, were led in community singing by Mrs. Rucker Lewis of Clark County.

During the proceeding exercises a panel discussion was held during which the questions confronting the clubs were aired. Mrs. Walter Ferguson represented Boone County touching on the economic problems.

Roses and iris mingled with other seasonal flowers graced the long tables where in the Methodist as well as the Christian Churches this attendance was served. The boys band of the Winchester High School played during this hour their selections being from the pen of Stephen Collins Foster, coupled with the true southern hospitality shown by these hostesses, caused quite a stir of emotion among the luncheon guests.

Mrs. T. M. Johnson of Warren State President of Kentucky Homemakers, delivered in the afternoon a most welcome address on the thrills she has received along life's highway.

Miss Fannie Brooks, a speaker of renown, she being affiliated with the University of Illinois, gave the principal address. Her subject was "Living While We Work" and she brought out the importance of healthful bodies being maintained by the application of modern conveniences in the home.

Miss Mary Hood Gillaspie, Home Demonstration Agent of Boone County received much applause for her work done among the women of this section.

Revolutionary Calendar Used Only Twelve Years

The Revolutionary calendar, known as the French calendar, was established after the Revolution. It was in use only 12 years and never really took root. It was adopted in 1793, and abolished by Napoleon in 1805. It reckoned the year from September 22, the anniversary of the republic's formal establishment in 1792, according to a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

There were twelve 30-day months in this calendar. That left five days over, and a sixth every fourth year. The extra days were called the sansculottides, and were dedicated to festivals. The regular ones honored, respectively, the virtues, genius, labor, opinion and rewards, while the leap year day was "the day of the Revolution."

The months took their names from the seasons; the first was the month of vintage, the second the month of fog. With their equinoxes and the Gregorian date on which each began, they were:

Vendemiaire (vintage), September 22 to 30.
Brumaire (fog), October 22 to 30.
Frimaire (snow), November 21 to 30.
Nivose (rain), January 20 to 29.
Pluviose (rain), January 20 to 29.
Germinal (seed), March 21 to 30.
Floral (blossom), April 20 to 30.
Prairial (pasture), May 20 to 30.
Messidor (harvest), June 19 to 28.
Thermidor (heat), July 19 to 28.
Fructidor (fruit), August 18 to 27.

There was no month. Instead, the month was divided into three periods of ten days each, called decads.

Decad 1: 1st, 11th, 21st, 31st.

Decad 2: 2nd, 12th, 22nd, 32nd.

VERONA — KENTUCKYVerona Tigers Win
First Game of Season

The Verona Tigers won their first game this year by defeating the Mt. Zion Ramblers, 9 to 5. Although 12 of the Tigers were sent back to the bench by the strikeout route, they were able to club out 11 hits and win. They scored two in the first three in the third, three in the sixth and one in the seventh. McClure and Bingham pitched for Mt. Zion. Meanwhile Raymond Beach and Bill Claster were scattering 11 hits and giving Mt. Zion but 5 runs. Pitching excellent ball for the first four innings, Beach weakened in the fifth and seventh and allowed the Ramblers to score five runs. He loaded the bases with no one out in the sixth, but prevented any scoring. C. Woods and Karna divided seven hits between them. Three of the hits were doubles. Bingham of Mt. Zion fanned three Veronians in a row in both the fifth and seventh innings.

For Verona, Beach had three singles; Hoppeport had a single and a three-bagger; Jimmie Chapman and James O'Malley had two hits and a walk. James Chapman "carried the bacon" across home plate three times. W. Ryan and "Sparky" McClure both made fine catches for Verona. Bill Claster, who pitched the last two innings for the winners had four assists in those innings.

The score for Verona was 9 runs 11 hits and 1 error; for Mt. Zion 5 runs, 11 hits and 3 errors. Ryan and Roberts were the umpires.

Next week the Verona Tigers play

Chisel Bridge in their second league game. Play will start at Verona at 3:00 p. m. Come out and watch those Verona and Walton boys play (or try to play) high class baseball. Only about forty paid to watch the game between the showers last Sunday.—Harold Vest, Scorekeeper.

Half A Hair's Breadth

"I can't use an expression like 'a hair's breadth,' or even 'a grain's whisker' around the Grinding Department at the Hudson Motor Car factory. Such expressions would only denote 'sloppy workmanship.' E. Bradley, who is foreman of the Grinding Department, thinks like a micrometer. To him the human hair, or even the grain's whisker, have breadth and bulky dimensions.

Bradley, who has been with Hudson for over fifteen years, can operate any machine in his department. To illustrate what he means by working to close dimensions, he proceeded to grind the connecting rod bearing on a Hudson Turbine crankshaft, using the hydraulic crank-shaft grinder employed in regular production. This machine grinds the bearings to within three-thirtieths of one-thousandth of an inch. This means that the bearings cannot be out of round more than this amount or taper more than the same dimension. Three-thirtieths of one-thousandth of an inch is less than half the thickness of a thin human hair.

Bradley states that the manufacture of automobiles in these days calls for accuracy formerly unknown even in the finest laboratories. The diameters of piston pins, for example, cannot vary over two-thirtieths of an inch. The hole for the piston pin in the piston is diamond-bored and held within a limit of three-thirtieths of an inch. Through-out the Hudson and Hudson Turbine plane cars, there are a number of points where these close manufacturing tolerances are maintained in order to promote quietness and long life.

Pitcher Plant Is First

Among Gangsters of Soil

Foremost among the gangsters of the plant world rank the pitcher plant. More than two centuries ago this striking, odd and very beautiful plant attracted the attention of gardeners. A Dr. Sarracenia, of Quebec, who was a naturalist as well as a physician, is responsible for its botanical name. However, the common name of "pitcher plant" is the name of a familiar to our ears. It is also called the devil's cup, the huntsman's cup, the side-saddle plant, the trumpet plant, etc., writes Louise Adrich-Meisinger in the New York World-Telegram.

It is found in marsh lands in many parts of the United States and in many varieties. The large, handsome, often curiously mottled leaves are closed at the bottom and usually take the shape of a pitcher, which accounts for the name "pitcher plant."

They sometimes have a wing or keel on one side and are from one to two feet long. These leaves are covered with honey glands, which attract flies, moths, ants and other insects. The leaves are also covered with fine hairs, pointing downward, which very effectively prevent the escape of any hapless intruder who ventures over the rim. The insect soon falls down into the bottom of the leaf and is gradually absorbed in the digestive fluid which is accumulated there.

Some species are sufficiently large and powerful enough to hold their own against the most unfortunate enough to have been lured in to their fatal deaths.

Tay Bridge in Scotland

Once Longest in World

The first Tay bridge, over the estuary of the Tay river near Dundee, Scotland, was opened to traffic on September 25, 1877. With a length of two miles, it was at that time the longest railroad bridge in the world. The foundation stone was laid in July, 1871. The bridge consisted of 35 spans, varying from 67 to 395 feet in length. The widest ones, near the center of the bridge, had a height of 88 feet clear above high water.

The engineer was Sir Thomas Bouch, who was afterward blamed for the inherent defects which produced the disaster, relates a writer in the Detroit News. In a high gale on the night of December 28, 1879, the central spans were blown down by a train carrying about ninety passengers were crossing. There were no survivors. It was claimed that the allowance for wind pressure was very much less than was necessary for a bridge in that exposed location. A novel by A. J. Cronin, "Hatter's Castle," makes use of the incident of the disaster.

A new bridge was erected between 1883 and 1888, about twenty years after the destruction of the first. It has 73 piers and the double line of rails is 92 feet above high water.

Bristol Hotels Numerous

Almost every city and town of importance from Paris to Belgrade has its Hotel Bristol. Go to Scandinavia and you find one at Oslo in Norway; go to Italy and they dot the peninsula at Milan, Genoa, Rome and Rapallo. There's one in Lisbon; one in Gibraltar; Austria has them in Vienna and Salzburg; Holland at Arnhem; Belgium at Brussels, and Switzerland at Berne, Geneva and Lugano. They can be found in Rumania and Hungary; Germany boasts well known Hotels Bristol in Berlin and in Dresden; while France has over two dozen from Rheims to Monte Carlo. Curiously, there does not appear to be a Bristol hotel at Bristol in England.

First Newspaper Extras

Alfred M. Lee, author of the Daily Newspaper in America, states that extras are older in this country than dailies. He mentioned a Sunday extra of the South Carolina Gazette, a Charleston weekly, dated April 20, 1783. After the appearance of dailies, beginning in 1783, extras were sometimes issued to set forth news brought in by a ship from abroad, or, later, "hot" developments in a sensational murder trial. The latter was common during the late 1830s, especially in New York city and other large cities such as Philadelphia.

Mongolian Pheasants

Mongolian pheasants are typified by the broadness of the culmen around their throats and a black "tie" down their breast. They are strong, heavy birds, equal in size to the English ringneck pheasant, but with a much heavier build. The Chinese birds also are pure bred and of healthy stock. The species is very similar, except that the Chinese bird shows a great deal of yellow and the Mongolians are of the red variety.

'Possum Is a Provler

Although the damage that a 'possum can inflict on bird life through destruction of eggs and young is not to be compared to that by a mink or weasel, this slow moving, intelligent marsupial destroys many nests of ground birds. There isn't much that the 'possum will pass by in the way of food. Bird eggs, insects, berries, nuts, acorns, ripened corn on the stalk, almost anything attracts the 'possum when he starts prowling over a farm.

"45 Fathers" To Be Funniest Picture Ever

One father? She's got forty-five! One jam? She's in four hundred and fifty! One laugh? There's at least forty-five hundred of them in "45 Fathers" fun-packed Twentieth Century-Fox picture starring Jane Withers, and featuring Thomas Beck, Louise Henry and the inimitable Hartmanns, eccentric ventriloquists and Broadway satirists of the dance, which will be at the James Theatre, Walton, on Monday night, May 16th, with showings at 6:45 and 8:30.

A group of millionaires draws lots to determine "which lucky man is going to have his life brightened by this sweet little girl?", and then about for help as Jane starts throwing things around and the ventriloquizing Hartmanns start throwing their dancing, voices and discretion to the winds in the funniest picture Jane ever made.

The highly amusing screen play by Frances Hyland and Albert Ray based on a story by Mary Bickel first finds Jane with the Hartmanns aboard a vessel bound for New York where she is to be adopted by the members of a millionaire explorer's club of which her father was a member.

A series of hilarious situations get under way when the inexpressible trio, after arriving in New York find their way to the club where the solemn members are thrown into an uproar as Jane goes on a riotous rampage.

Taken by Richard Carle, "Lucky" winner in the drawing, to his nephew's home, Jane, in spite of her uproarious antics, takes time out to study the interest of Louise Henry an attractive but scheming society girl, in Thomas Beck, and proceeds to rescue him from the entanglement.

With the audience limp from laughter, the picture rises to still greater heights of merriment when it reaches the climax in which Jane aided and abetted by the Hartmanns throws a heart-balm trial into a carnival of laughter by exposing the snobbish society schemers with wild ventriloquistic tricks.

Remember?

The local 1938 commencement makes us old timers recall the days when we were young... and when we proudly participated in high school graduation ceremonies. Photos posed by NBC artists.

Remember the sweet young thing who read the Class Will, who bequeathed your gum-chewing technique to little Johnny Jones of the freshman class? Miss Betty Winkler impersonates her here.

Then came the class prophet who predicted that 20 years hence you'd be a famous explorer... or something. Betty Caine, dressed like yesterday's graduate, shows how the prophet looked as she glanced into the dim future and made her awe-some prognostications.

Frances Allison impersonates the vaudeville star. Remember? She was the brightest girl in the class.

Then came the commencement speaker (played by Bill Thompson) who challenged you to face the world. Serious, purposeful, he might have been a rising young lawyer or a professor of economics from the university.

Then the climax, when the superintendent or the president of the school board gave you a diploma... and school days were over! Here is Sid Ellstrom in the official's role. School days! Grand old days, weren't they? 29-4t

Emanuel Swedenborg Man of Supernormal Powers

It is doubtful that any man, in all human history, has been as prolific a creator in as many fields as Emanuel Swedenborg, born in 1733, and known as the "Swedish Aristotle." He was a scientist, inventor, engineer, craftsman, linguist, traveler, philosopher, psychologist, biologist, financier, legislator, statesman, musician, poet, editor, a noble and a democrat. These accomplishments were achieved during the first half of his active life.

During the second half, says John O'Neil in the New York Herald Tribune, he was a mystic and theologian, and exhibited supernatural powers which were tested by Swedenborg's king and queen and such distinguished philosophers as Emmanuel Kant. He foresaw events and foretold the date of his own death in a letter to John Wesley, founder of Methodism. His published works comprise eighty-three large volumes, an incomplete record of his eighty-four years of life.

Swedenborg's official position was assessor extraordinary of mines, and his creative contributions to technology were extensive. He established scientific assays of ores. He put the metallurgy of copper and iron on a practical basis, designed efficient furnaces and rolling mills, and made the Sweden process their own iron instead of exporting the ore.

But Swedenborg's great discoveries and inventions in physical science and engineering were eclipsed by his work in biology and psychology.

Swedenborg was born in Stockholm, son of Dr. Jasper Swedenborg, interior professor of theology at Upsala and bishop at Skara. When he received the patent granting him nobility, his name was changed to Swedenborg. His illumination, or spiritual experiences, came at the age of thirty-two, but he continued his scientific work for many years after. He died in London in 1772 at eighty-four.

John Hancock Was Feared as "Terrible Desperado"

John Hancock, born more than 200 years ago, was one of the most daring of the Boston Patriots during the early history of the colonies and the Revolutionary war, writes Leslie Hartley in the Washington Star.

Esteemed as a leader in the Massachusetts colony, he was hated and feared as a "terrible desperado" by the British, who ordered his seizure on a charge of high treason. Warned of these orders when Paul Revere made his famous midnight ride from Charlestown to Lexington, Hancock escaped. As he fled across the fields shot was fired that was "heard around the world," and the first battle of the American Revolution had begun—the battle of Lexington, April 19, 1775.

In the stirring days which followed, Hancock played an important role. Elected president of the Continental congress, he was serving in this capacity when the Declaration of Independence was signed, and his name, in bold letters, was the first signature on the historic document. Later he was elected the first governor of Massachusetts and held this office, with the exception of the years 1793-1795, until his death in 1793.

Naming Baton Rouge

The name Baton Rouge means "red stick." All authorities agree that the name was first used by Iberville and his companions when they made their voyage up the Mississippi river early in 1699, but authorities differ as to the reason for this name. According to one account the name was derived from a gigantic cypress tree on the east bank of the Mississippi within the limits of the present city. The wood of the cypress tree has a reddish tint. According to another report, the name was derived from a red pole set up on the bank of a small stream by Indians, either for sacrificial purposes or to mark the boundary between the hunting grounds of the Houmas and the Bayougoules. The exact date of the settlement of Baton Rouge is not known. The earliest mention of the settlement is from the journal of Father Charlevoix, who states that he went to Baton Rouge to say mass on New Year's day, 1722.

"Down But Not Out"

It is said that the expression, "A man may be down, but he's never out," which is used as a slogan by the Salvation Army, was first employed during the Boer war. Upon one occasion while food and clothing were being distributed to people who had been made homeless and penniless by the war, somebody referred to the unfortunate victims as "down and outers." A Salvation Army worker snapped back: "A man may be down, but he's never out." The expression contains so much optimism and hope in plain and simple words that it has survived. "Down and out" itself comes from prize-fighting circles.

Temple of Diana

The temple of the goddess, Diana, at Ephesus, Turkey, was completed in the fifth century, B. C. There were many other temples just as large, but this was unequalled in beauty. It had 122 marble columns and was filled with rare works of art. The temple was destroyed by the Goths in the year 262 A. D.

Afrail of the Dark—Part I

With electric lights nearly everywhere and with automobile lights flashing even on remote country roads, the nights are not so dark as they used to be and not half so scary. The fear of the dark itself may some day become a lost institution. I wonder whether the younger generations fully realize the fears of other days when night was a terror to small children and to many grown people. I cannot count the times I was especially afraid of dogs or snakes or Gypsies, but I was mortally afraid of invisible things, such as spooks, or "haints," and ghosts. The stories that were a part of our childhood when people came in to sit until bedtime, increased, rather than diminished our fears of the dark. Just how much the story-tellers believed the strange yarns they spun I have no way of knowing, but I have always suspected that they made good time, going home after some of the hair-raising tales they told. The children, I distinctly remember while trying to regard the whole crop of yarns as just "play-like," were afraid to move afterwards. On hot nights, after such an orgy of story telling, we would cover up head and ears, with a jeans quilt, if such were available, to shield ourselves from things that might devour us or swallow us whole. We faintly died of thirst, that great enemy of childhood, rather than to the water bucket for a drink; we felt too old to ask Mammy to get it for us. But along with our own fears we had a persistent desire to scare others, either with stories or with practical jokes.

The most common device for scaring the weak or heart was known locally as a "tick-tack" or a dumb-bell. A five gallon lard can, a string and some rosin were the materials used to construct this engine of terror. A hole was made in the bottom of the lard can, a string inserted, a flat-hoek fastened to the other end to hook to a window casing or the corner of the house and the lump of rosin was rubbed along the string. This produced a noise that would wake the dead. Another device that I have known was a thinly whittled paddle of wood fastened to a string and whirled rapidly. A neighborhood that I knew of was fairly scared to death by this contraption by some boy who had previously scattered the news that a wolf had been seen in the woods. As wolves were actually still seen in certain parts of the state at that time, the trick was a clever one. Dogs were frightened as much as people and refused to enter the premises where it howled in the cornfield.

Haunted houses excited fear, but every neighborhood has some daredevil who secreted himself in suspected houses and helped carry out the neighborhood tradition. Those who were in on the trick got too much fun out of it to reveal the secret; the others indulged in the most primitive types of fear, probably not even daring to find out the truth. Graveyards were places to tell out people's travails. All sorts of foolish things were resorted to, bringing a clod of dirt from a new grave, plucking a flower from some well-known grave, or sleeping on a grave to win a wager. These neighborhood fun-makings are probably still going on, but with matches and flashlights and car lights they must not seem half so scary as they used to.

TESTING DISCIPLINE
BY SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 10:17-31.
GOLDEN TEXT—Rom. 12:13.
PRIMARY TOPIC—A Young Man

JUNIOR TOPIC—What a Rich Man
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR
TOPIC—Proving Our Loyalty to Christ
by Service.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT
TOPIC—Marks of Discipleship.

"The almighty dollar"—how triumphantly it rules in the affairs of nations and of men who make money. The world's measure of success is how much one can "make," and "no questions asked" as to how one made it, if he but will. He is a success if he can land him in jail. Even that is no longer a disgrace, for men who have defrauded others serve a term in jail to "pay their debt to society," and then return without shame to enjoy the use of their ill-gotten gains. Skill in the arts and sciences is rated according to its financial value. Beauty and beauty are commodities of the market place. Liquor is permitted to destroy our people because it provides a profitable business.

The minds of men and women of decency and intelligence revolt at the whole situation. Let us encourage them as we improve the opportunity today to present God's moral and spiritual standards.

I. Self Before God (vv. 17-22).

The rich young ruler had many advantages and virtues. He was young, life was before him, vivid was his imagination, full of the power of youth. He was educated, and developed intelligence is an honor to any man. He had position, which can always be used for good. He had money, which when rightly gained and used, is a powerful and honorable possession. Above all, he had the priceless jewel of good character. He was a man who kept the commandments, that he came before the Lord in humility seeking truth, and that Jesus "loved him" (v. 21).

Almost any father would be proud to own this young man as a son. Many churches would welcome him to membership and even to leadership. Jesus dealt with him honestly, and he went to the root of his difficulty, which was that he loved himself and his possessions more than he loved God. Therefore he must give them up before he could really follow Jesus. Sad indeed was his refusal. He came running (v. 17), but he went away sorrowful (v. 22).

What stands between you and a full surrender to Christ? Face it honestly. Be thankful if your pastor or a friend frankly points it out. Shun those who would "pat you on the back" and assure you you are all well. A cancer will kill unless it is cut out. The surgeon's knife may hurt, but it is an instrument of good.

Note that the statement of Jesus in verse 18 is not a denial of His deity, but a definite claim that He is God. He says in effect, "If you call me good you must recognize that I am God."

II. God Before Self (vv. 21-27).

The disciples, who evidently shared the common opinion that money could do almost anything, were surprised to hear that riches were really a hindrance to spiritual life, because (v. 24) of the tendency of men to trust in their wealth and forget their need of God.

Jesus does not leave the rich man without hope, for he goes on to say that what is impossible for men and even for the rich man himself is entirely possible with God. He is able to do more on the heart of even a rich man than he will yield to Christ in humble obedience to Him and will put God and his cause above self and his possessions.

Two things need emphasis in this connection. First, let those of us who have little of this world's goods be thankful that we have, at least, been delivered from this temptation. It may well be an expression of God's love and grace toward us. Second, let us thank God for every man of wealth who has given himself and what he has into God's hands. Inestimable is the good that has been done by faithful stewards who have not trusted in their riches but in God, but who have trusted God and consecrated their riches to His service. May their number increase.

III. The Last Before the First (vv. 28-31).

The ways of God are confusing and humbling to the flesh. The way up in spiritual things is to go down (Mark 9:35). Those who are first in the eyes of men are often last in God's sight. Others whom men count as least stand highest in God's sight because they are faithful and true to Him. The world looks at the missionary of the cross and says, "He has sacrificed everything," and knows nothing of the "hundredfold" reward even in this life. "And in the world to come, eternal life" (v. 30).

TO RIDE THE RIVER WITH.

WILLIAM MACLEOD RAINE

CHAPTER IV—Talking over the shouting with Sory, Ruth is incredulous of Jeff's story of shooting the assassin rather than at her father, and later pleads with Lee to listen to her. When Lee arrives at Pat Sory's camp, he finds only a note. The note says: "Measwell, Jeff rode into Tall Holt and made word to Sory. He said he was to see him. He shows Howard a poster board picture, with the name of Clint Dade, wanted as the leader of a band of outlaws and robbers. The rest of the band arrives."

CHAPTER V—Jeff shows the outlaws the poster and asks their confidence, and tells them that he is a fugitive. He asks them to allow him to stay. Another raid on the camp is planned. The outlaws are in pursuit, and to send his son Frank to look for a reconnoiter. Pat Sory finds Gray's horse's hoofmarks on the trail with the suspected riders.

CHAPTER VI—Jeff calls on Frank and warns him Norris and Lou are threatening him, and tells him to be suspicious that Morg was the one who shot at him. Frank rode into the camp, and his father wants him at Sory's, and despite warning, starts out. Sory starts, and Gray helps Frank hold off the killers until he and Frank can escape.

CHAPTER VII—The unexpected attack had sent their foes into panic. Gray turned over the body of the masked man lying in the sand. He recognized the face of Sory's son, the cowboy he had seen in Yell Sanger's store when he first arrived in Tall Holt.

The crook-nosed man helped himself to the dead man's rifle and cartridge-belt. He caught one of the horses left by the outlaws and started down the gulch.

"Better wait for the orders of the old man," Brand advised. "I'll just ride ahead and keep in touch with these fellows," Gray called back.

He passed a laden pack-mule. Part of the load was silver, he guessed. The mule had got over its fright and was picking at the shrubbery.

After he was through the boulder field, he put his mount to a canter, regardless of the brush which caught at him as he plowed into the chaparral. He was riding the gray gelding upon which he had seen Morg Norris leave town.

Presently he saw in front of him a man on foot. Sometimes the man was running, sometimes walking. In the space of three or four minutes he looked back a dozen times. Fear of death was riding him, he thought. Gray drew nearer, the fugitive took refuge behind a mesquite.

"Don't you come any closer," he warned, his voice quavering with terror.

The man was Lou Howard. During his flight he had dropped the rifle because it interfered with speed.

"Reach for the sky," Gray ordered. "No funny business or I'll drill you through."

A bullet whistled past his head. He swung from the saddle and moved forward. In his hand was a forty-four, ready for action. The rifle he had left beside the horse.

"Don't you!" shrieked Howard. "You keep back."

"Get 'em up," snapped Gray. "Quick."

The hands of Howard went up, the weapon in one of them.

"Don't kill me," he begged. Gray disarmed him.

"I'll be safer tied up," the captor said. "Keep you from being killed by one of the boys when they get to you. Move over this way."

The crook-nosed man took the rope from the saddle and tied the Howard swiftly and thoroughly. He left him lying in an open place on the trail.

A quarter of a mile farther down the canyon there ran into a steep rocky gulch narrow as a Titan's sword-cleft. Far up this Gray could see two men and a horse. One of the men was riding, the other clambering along the trail after him. The sun was now out and shining on them. It would be hot work for a man breathing that still, stifling air, especially if he were in a desperate hurry. The haste Gray took for granted, since there were two riders and only one horse, with vengeance hard on their heels.

He turned up the gulch after them. In the rainy season water poured down this rocky bed, but vegetation had small chance to take terrain. Whatever soil there might once have been had long since washed down into the gorge below.

The horse took the narrow bed of the trough like a cat, its muscles standing out hard as steel while it reached from one foothold to another. A bullet ricocheted from a flat rock above Gray and plowed into the rubble close to the front hoofs of the gelding. The sound of the explosion came down in booming echoes. One of the men near the top of the gulch had fired at his pursuer.

Gray did not stop. He did not answer the fire. The fugitives were moving again. They were not looking for a fight. What they wanted was to reach the flat country just ahead of them where they could disappear into some of the bill folds that ran down to the plateau.

The men and the horse vanished above the brow of the gulch. Gray gave his mount no rest. He had to reach the summit while they were still in sight. The animal he rode was strong and willing. It had plenty of bottom. Heaving with exertion, the gray came to the top of the rocky gash.

His rider had a shaky moment when the horse clawed its way to level ground. Enemies might be waiting there for him, though he did not expect it. The men were too intent on safety.

His glance swept swiftly the country in front of him. The men had gone. One of the draws in front of him had swallowed them up. Which one, he could not guess.

One point stuck out like a sore thumb. In this country a man without a horse was in poor plight. The first consideration of these fugitives would be to get another mount. They would strike for the nearest place where a pony could be picked up with safety.

The answer struck Jeff Gray almost with the force of a blow. That nearest place was the L C ranch-house. These ruffians knew that Lee Chiswick and his men had fallen upon them in Live Oak canyon. Nobody would be at the ranch except women. Almost certainly the outlaws would ride straight to the L C.

Ruth spent some anxious, restless hours. She found herself on the front porch a dozen times, her gaze sweeping down the road to look for the returning party.

With Nelly's help she laid in a supply of cooked food for the returning warriors. Whether successful or the reverse, they would certainly be hungry.

After all, it was Nelly who first saw the approaching rider. "Someone coming this way," she called to her mistress.

Swiftly Ruth went to the door. A horse was cantering heavily up the road. The distance was too far for identification of either man or beast, but there was something unusual about the gait of the animal. Unless very tired it ought not to make such heavy going. Presently she made a discovery. A second rider sat behind the first.

A pulse began to beat in Ruth's throat. Something was wrong. Perhaps the man in the rear was helping the man in the front. They were sending him home. She ran down the steps and hurried toward those approaching the house.

They were close upon her before she realized they were not from her father's party. She stopped, abruptly, looking at them intently. The man in front she did not know. The other swung to the ground and came toward her.

There was evil in the jerk of his eyes.

"Up with you again, she cried. "There has been trouble."

Her eyes were big with fear. The color had died out of her face. She was not thinking of him but of those with whom he had fought. They too might be wounded—or worse.

"Ambushed by yore rotten kin," he snarled. "Shot down when we weren't lookin' for it, when we didn't have a chance."

Ruth looked into his bleak eyes, the focal points of a cruel, savage face, and knew what it was to be afraid. She turned and walked to the house, the man beside her.

He caught hold of her arm just above the elbow, his fingers tightening with all the pressure they could exert.

"Let me alone," Ruth told him. "Take your hand off me."

"It's my way," he retorted, desperately, already aware of the futility of such appeal to him.

"I'm not curly Connor," he replied, with a careful smile. "What I want I take. You're going with me, understand. Maybe if you're good, I'll make you Mrs. Morgan Norris." The smile went off his face as the light came from a blown candle.

"Where's the other wench gone?" he demanded, harshly.

Nelly had slipped out of the room a minute earlier, as inconspicuously as a shadow. Evenly her mistress deplored, already aware of the futility of such appeal to him.

"I'm not curly Connor," he replied, with a careful smile. "What I want I take. You're going with me, understand. Maybe if you're good, I'll make you Mrs. Morgan Norris." The smile went off his face as the light came from a blown candle.

"Where's the other wench gone?" he demanded, harshly.

Nelly had slipped out of the room a minute earlier, as inconspicuously as a shadow. Evenly her mistress with an evil laugh. "What orders are given will come from me, sweet heart."

With an effort she wrenched herself free. If you did not let me down her arm where his strong fingers had bit into the flesh.

"No," she challenged, head up and eyes undaunted. "You don't harm me. If you did, you'd be trapped and wiped out like a wolf."

"Would I? We'll see about that," he purred softly.

He was playing with a dangerous thought, one that had just come into his mind. Could he use her, as a protection and as a means of revenge? If he took her with him would he increase or decrease the peril of the situation in which he stood? He was not sure whether he had been recognized; if so, he might have to get out of this part of the country. Mexicans from across the border engaged in illicit traffic, were at no premium in Arizona, but Lee Chiswick could use the killing of two of them to stir up a lot of trouble.

Norris went into the house with her. "This man wants to take some food with him, Nelly," said Ruth. "Nelly looked at him out of startled eyes. She made as if to speak and changed her mind.

"Get a move on you," he snapped. "I'm in a hurry."

While Ruth packed the food they had just been cooking the outlaw astride a chair in the kitchen with his arm across the back of it. He watched her with narrowed eyes. A small fire flamed smokily in the hearth. The man lived in his passions—in his hatreds and in his desires. This girl appealed to both of them. Through her he could strike at the whole Chiswick tribe. He could jeer at them to this daughter, while they combed the hills to find her. It would be a magnificent feat. That was one side of the picture. The other would be to hand with it. The slender grace of her figure, its fine spirited race-horse look, stirred a tumult in him. Lee Chiswick came into the kitchen. "I roped and saddled two cow-ponies," he said.

"We'll need four," Norris answered. "Four, what for?" Kansas asked. "We're going to take these girls with us."

The other three in the room stared at Norris, Kansas with incredulity, the young women with gripping fear.

"The hell we are!" Kansas retorted. "You gone crazy from yore wound?"

"They will be a protection to us," Norris insisted.

"Like heck they will," his companion snorted. "What's eating you, Morg? This whole country would rise up and wipe us out. Use yore brain."

The eyes of the killer glittered in his voice. "Saddle two more horses."

Kansas felt a chill run down his back. "Good God, Morg—"

"Make tracks, fellow," Norris interrupted, his stabbing gaze fixed on the other.

"Kansas backed out of the room. "All right, Morg. All right. Just as you say. I sure ain't lookin' for trouble with you."

Ruth said to Norris, keeping her voice steady with an effort. "You wouldn't do that to two little girls. Scowling at her, he answered harshly. "Don't fool yourself."

"But it's like your friend said. The whole country would hunt you down and stamp you out."

"I can look after myself, I reckon," he told her; and added, "I need you along to keep me company."

"In this Western country men respect a decent woman," she urged.

She asked, dreadfully, "What if he was. She said, "I don't know. But he had been with me."

She said, "I don't know. But he had been with me."

She said, "I don't know. But he had been with me."

She said, "I don't know. But he had been with me."

said, "I expect she has gone to the smoke-house for a slab of bacon."

"You'll have to take some heavier clothes, both of you," Norris mentioned, accepting the explanation without question. "Go to your room and pick them. I'll drill along with you."

She shivered. "I'll have my father give you anything you like if you'll go now with your friend. I'll see he does not pursue you."

"That fellow can't give me anything," he cried, with a furious oath. "I'll do the giving when we meet a bullet through the heart. I'll go and shove along to yore room for the clothes unless you want to go as you are."

He dragged Ruth to her feet and pushed the girl in front of him from the room.

Kansas backed out of the house and bawled his way to the stable. He took the same route he had used for the other horses and went to the corral. No expert, it took him several minutes to catch two of the horses. He threw a rope over the full of hatred as he threw, missed, and gathered the rope again. He despised himself for taking this lying down.

Hate of Norris seethed in him. He made up his mind, as soon as he was out of this jam, to cut loose from the Tall Holt bunch and go back to Texas.

Chandler Hits At Pump-Priming

Says Spending Will Not Pave Way to Prosperity

Governor Chandler speaking at Danville, Ky., April made the following criticism of what he termed the Federal Government Pump-priming and Relief Policies.

"Contrary to the beliefs of some it isn't possible to spend your way to prosperity.

FEW TO GET JOBS AGAIN

"Much is said today of unemployment. I believe many of these unemployed aren't going to get jobs again. This problem must be faced and society must not be burdened by a government that is rearing a generation which believes it is the government's duty to provide for it."

The Governor, speaking before students of Centre College warned a person or organization must not spend more than it takes in.

"If it does, it inevitably will end in bankruptcy," he said. "Kentucky is one of the brightest spots in the nation today because it is run on a sound business basis."

SEEKS TO END DEBTS

"This administration is seeking to eliminate the debt which would ordinarily fall upon you—the future taxpayers," he told the students.

He advised students to take an active interest in problems of government.

"Take a position, take a stand and do your part toward contributing to a better government," he said.

Governor Chandler reviewed the activities of his administration and traced his record in office.

Chandler's speech today was the first in a ten-day speaking tour.

1938 AAA Tobacco Bases Adjusted

The County Committees of the Agricultural Conservation Association spent two days the past week adjusting Boone County's 1938 tobacco bases to meet adjustment requirements set up by the Washington office. The 1938 base for the county as a whole was adjusted from 3367.7 acres to 3300 acres, a reduction of 67.7 acres.

It is understood that a few additional acres will be set up by the Washington office for new growers. However, no definite acreage for these growers has been announced for the county.

The committees reported the problem of adjusting bases was the most difficult job encountered during the year. Every effort was made to set up the most equitable distribution possible among individual producers. Growers should receive official announcements through the mail on their 1938 tobacco bases by the last of this week or the first of next week.

Boone County farmers have planned a series of livestock marketing tours to the Cincinnati Livestock Yards on May 18th, 26th and 27th. The marketing, grading and slaughtering of lambs will be given special study on the tours.

Friday, May 27 has been set for farmers in Grant, Petersburg, Hebron, Constance and Taylorsport districts. It is not necessary that one pick the particular date for his district.

Farmers Conduct TVA Phosphate Demonstration

Thirty Boone County farmers will use 80,000 pounds of TVA demonstration phosphate in pasture and legume crop demonstrations this year, according to Jack Dye, assistant County Agent.

Farmers cooperating in this program are selected by the TVA. Major portions of their newly seeded grass and legume fields will be treated with 47 percent super phosphate. Parts of the field will be treated with agricultural limestone and certain parts will receive no treatment. Each demonstrator will have a major portion of his field treated with lime and phosphate, a check plot with phosphate only, a check plot with lime only and a check plot with no treatment.

Farmers cooperating in this work will make a study of yield differences and will give reports at the end of the year. Farmers conducting these demonstrations are: J. C. AFTER THOUGHTS

By GEORGE

This week folks we have resurrected our old friend George, and will again continue to contribute the column is just more to fill up space and would welcome any kind of items that you would contribute and the writer will receive due credit.

After about six weeks' absence we are again glad to greet all our old friends of this column (if we have any) and will try and make new ones wish us luck.

We have lost a valued member of our staff this week and the Bulletin, of Eaton, Ohio, has gained a very fine young man, Malcolm Simpson, by this time is a full-fledged member of the Bulletin. Mr. Johnson you have made a very fine acquisition in our opinion.

This week we have another small staff, but we are getting our paper out just the same and with everyone's help we can keep the present force and continue to give you a good paper.

We see where the Research Scientist of Duke University have found the cure for "morning-after hangovers". We can give the best cure for one and that is not to indulge in strong drinks.

Rhe Radio Barn Dance at Piner last Wednesday, Thursday and Friday was well presented and afforded a good, clean entertainment as those that were in attendance will tell you.

Those "bargain night" at the New James Theatre are very popular and we think that Mr. Falls has something there.

The weather has started out this week and is beginning to look like it will warm up and we will get out of the clutches of "Blackberry Winter" before long. We are not a bit sorry of it either.

We have a lot of different kinds of weeks throughout the year, and this week is no exception, as we have National Tree Safety Week and National Air Mail Week.

We were shocked to hear of the accident that snuffed out the life of Paul Renaker, former Town Marshal. Weaken Paul real well and he was a likeable chap you never know when accidents like this will happen. The family has our sympathy.

It seems strange, but it is true. At the start of the present Senior Class, when they were Juniors it contained 14 students, and there are just four of this 14 to be graduated. Some of these ten we learned have quit school, while others have transferred to other schools and will be graduated from those schools.

P. T. A. TO MEET FRIDAY AFTERNOON

The last regular meeting of the Walton-Verona Parent-Teachers Association is to be held at the school gym, Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. As this is to be the last meeting of the current school year, all members are urged to attend.

METHODIST LADIES AID

The Ladies Aid Society of the Methodist Church met at the church in an all-day session on May 14th. There were five members and four visitors who enjoyed a covered-dish dinner at the noon hour. Four other members arrived for the afternoon meeting.

Mrs. W. O. Rouse presided over the devotional and business periods, while Mrs. Lulu J. Hudson was the committee for the program of the day. Mrs. Hudson had prepared a varied, but interesting program. One number of special interest was a true story of a missionary on a cannibal island.

There was no water other than salt water so the missionary wanted to dig a well for drinking water. The story related the trials and hardships the missionary had to encounter and endure, but by his faith and persistence he did get fresh water. Then the cannibals were astounded and influenced to accept the missionary's teachings. Which brings to mind the proverb, "Where There's a Will There's a Way."

Members and guests present were: Mrs. R. O. Hines, Mrs. Shirley Guard, and small son, Thomas Everett; Rev. D. E. Bedinger, Mrs. Bedinger; Mrs. Ella S. Green; Mrs. W. O. Rouse, Mrs. Sallie R. Miller, Mrs. Virgie Norman, Mrs. Stella Marshall, Mrs. Ida Simpson, Mrs. Lulu J. Hudson, and Emma Jane Miller.

Next meeting place open for invitation.—Secretary.

Mountain Laurel Festival of Ky.

The eighth annual Kentucky Mountain Laurel Festival, which was ranked one of the Kentucky Derby in state-wide interest, will be held in Pine Mountain State Park, one mile from Piner, on May 27. Late on the afternoon of May 27, a new Laurel Queen will be selected from a group of fifteen Kentucky college beauties to reign over the remaining festivities of the weekend.

The program really begins Thursday night, May 26, when the prospective queens and their escorts arrive to become honored guests of the festival association. An informal reception and dinner will be held that night and the young women, who come from every section of the Commonwealth and from two nearby states, will be given an opportunity to get acquainted with one another. Friday morning at 11:30 a festival parade will be held in Piner, with Governor A. B. Chandler and the college representatives in the reviewing stand.

Friday afternoon in Laurel Cove the huge natural amphitheater in Pine Mountain State Park, judges will select the most beautiful girl and a few minutes later, preceded by a court of more than 100 beautiful girls of the Cumberland Valley and a retinue that would do justice to any queen, the new queen will be crowned by Governor Chandler. She will reign as queen until the following year. During the ceremonies at the park the University of Kentucky radio entertainers and the Marjorie Hall Studio of Dancing Lexington, will provide entertainment. Eastern State Teachers College's band will play as the afternoon program opens at 3 o'clock, and Dr. H. L. Donovan, president of the festival, will present the new president, to be elected at a luncheon at noon Friday.

The new queen, Governor Chandler, will lead the grand march Friday night at the grand ball at the auditorium here. The radio group and dancers also will entertain. The music will be provided by Johnny Hamp and his orchestra. Saturday will be devoted to tours of the Cumberlands but there will be no formal program. Walton-Verona To Hold Commencement

Four Pupils To Be Graduated Friday May 27th

The smallest graduating class in several years will be graduated from Walton-Verona High School, when the Commencement Week starts Sunday, May 22, with Rev. C. C. Brown, former pastor at Walton Baptist Church, and at present holds pastorate at Verona and Erlanger churches, will preach the Baccalaureate Sermon at the school gymnasium, Sunday night. On to the fact that the class is small the Valuedictory address and Salutatory address will be delivered Sunday and will eliminate class night from the program.

The commencement exercises will be held at the gym, Friday night, with Dr. R. E. Goggens of the State Department of Education, delivering the address. Dr. Goggens received his A. B. and M. A. Degrees from the University of Kentucky and his Doctor's Degree from Columbia University. He has been a teacher and County Superintendent before going to the State Department of Education, where he has charge of the issuance of the teacher's teaching certificates.

The graduates are as follows: Eileen Stephenson, Jean Roberts, Ralph Marsh and Homer Lee Osborne.

J. W. Clements and family, of Rome, Ga., enroute to Cincinnati had the misfortune of what might have been a serious accident when their five-year-old daughter fell out of the rear of their car, about three miles south of Walton. The parents heard the rear door open and looking to see the cause found that their little daughter had fell from the car. They immediately picked the child up and rushed it to the office of Dr. Ryle, local physician, who examined the child and found that she was only badly bruised and badly shaken up.

They remained over at the Phoenix Hotel, until Monday, when the child was able to be taken to Cincinnati.

Mrs. Elmes Dryer and two sons, Jack and Gene of Covington, were Sunday guests of Mrs. Edna Stampler and Mrs. Art Stampler.

Mrs. Lottie Powers left Monday for Greenville, Ohio, to nurse Mrs. George Ransker, who is ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. B. F. Moscafe.

Thirty-two undergraduates majoring in dairying have been employed for the summer.

Bureau Of Roads Should Supervise

W. P. A. Road Funds According to Senator Joseph Robinson

Representative Robinson of Kentucky urged the House to vote against expenditure of Federal highway money by the Works Progress Administration.

"The WPA," he said, "has never had the equipment, material and so forth to build road highways. It is a makeshift proposition. Let state nowhere and go nowhere and scarcely anything is finished."

Robinson recommended that Federal highway funds be expended solely under the supervision of the Bureau of Public Roads.

"Have you ever seen yet a completed highway built by the WPA," Robinson asked. "If great sums of money allotted to WPA for road work had been turned over to the Bureau of Roads and expended in the Federal Highway Act, we would have built from three to five times as many miles of better highways and would have provided more work for the unemployed at decent American wages, and in the end would have substantial, usable, and lasting highways instead of makeshift roads."

Robinson said it was "impossible to estimate the tremendous benefit" from the Federal aid road program.

"The federal government," he said, "has never undertaken any public improvement which has meant so much to the general welfare of the people. It lifted the homes, the farmers, the school, the churches, the mail carriers out of the mud and put them on water-proof and durproof highways."

"It has saved billions of dollars of wear and tear, upkeep, tires oil and gasoline of motor vehicles. Nothing has been done to this country for the same number of dollars that has brought so much prosperity, pleasure and happiness to the people."

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Doan of Piner entertained Sunday with a splendid dinner: Mr. and Mrs. Everett Hicks and Mrs. J. R. Rhoad of Cynthiana.

The Willing Workers Sunday school class enjoyed a covered dish supper at the Christian Church, Monday evening. They were entertained by Mrs. Lulu Rues and Newton Stealy.

Rev. and Mrs. Jack Ervin returned home Friday from Jackson, Tenn., where they spent their vacation. Rev. Ervin's brother accompanied them home.

Soil Conservation News

By eliminating weeds that compete with desirable pasture grasses for food and moisture, farmers can develop a more erosion resisting sod and provide better grazing for their livestock, according to Ward T. Darnell, Camp Superintendent of the Soil Conservation Service near Walton, Kentucky.

Early mowing is desirable, but one mowing won't do the job, Mr. Darnell said. Weeds come in cycles and pastures must be mowed several times during the growing season to prevent reseeding. Each successive crop of weed seed must be destroyed before the seed matures.

The best time for mowing is as soon as the bloom appears, Mr. Darnell pointed out. At this stage the food reserve of weeds is at its lowest point, but there is no danger of scattering seed by the mowing operation. Hand pulling and hoeing will control weeds on areas which cannot be reached with a mower.

The improvement of pasture sod through the use of sufficient amounts of lime and fertilizer has materially reduced the problem of weed control on many of the cooperating farmers in the area, Mr. Darnell said. With proper fertilizing, desirable pasture can compete with weeds much more effectively, he explained.

Mrs. Alice Rouse

The community was saddened Thursday, when it was learned that the spirit of Mrs. Alice Jane Rouse had taken its flight to the home beyond the realms at the time that Spring had unlocked the flowers to paint the laughing sail and all the world seemed coming into life that silent messenger, death came and with his cold icy finger touched the heart and bade it be still.

The deceased was born in Boone County, Kentucky, December 10, 1886, and was married to Thos. Rouse 1887.

To this union were born two children: a son and daughter. She was a member of Orenton Baptist church. The husband preceded her to the great beyond 40 years ago. The funeral was conducted from the late home in South Sparta by Rev. Baird of Orenton Baptist church and Rev. Clarke of Sparta Christian church, after which the remains were laid to rest in Orenton cemetery by Watson and Orr.

The sympathy of the entire community is extended the family in their bereavement.

On Thursday afternoon, May 12 at 2 o'clock the Verona P. T. A. will meet for the last time this school year at the school auditorium. A short program including all the children in school will be given and we hope all the members will be present.

On Friday, May 20, at 2:30 p. m. will be the 8th Grade Class Day Program and on Thursday, May 20 at 10 a. m., will be the 8th Grade Graduation Supt. M. J. Belew Superintendent of Grant County Schools will make the address. School will close at noon, May 26 1938.

The Second and Third and Fourth Grade of the Verona School spent a profitable and enjoyable day on Tuesday, May 3, visiting various places of interest in Cincinnati.

They went first to Lunken Airport where they were shown over the grounds and permitted to watch the arrival and departure of some of the larger passenger and mail planes. Returning to downtown Cincinnati, there was an inspection of the French-Bower plant, after which luncheon was served by the company.

The final stop was at the Union Terminal, where a guide explained the murals and other points of interest to the children. Then they were allowed to go out to the platform and watch the departure of a train. Altogether a very pleasant time was had and the children appreciate very much the use of the school bus and the time and service of Mr. Coop in driving for them.

Tribute to Wesley

John Wesley, founder of Methodism, like so many others, was suffering and severely afflicted in his life time. But there were compensations. Once, a differing bishop, at table, refused to sit above him, saying, "Mr. Wesley, ma, I be found sitting at your feet in another world!"

By WILL S. NORRIS, 5822 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Here is a kitten and a cat story with a moral to it. A little girl organized a Sunday School class at home with two in the class, a kitten and a cat. She very gladly told the circuit rider who came around on his monthly trips to preach at the church. The preacher was highly pleased with the little girl's spirit and would encourage her every time he visited her home.

She had arranged a room in one corner of the yard and would have her scholars meet her every Sunday afternoon after she had attended Sunday School in the morning. She called her kitten and her cat her missionary Sunday School.

Everything went along nicely. The cat grew fast and began to be unruly. One day in one of the cat's mad spells he tramped on the kitten and killed it. This was a sad day for the little girl. She buried the kitten near the spot, where it had died. The cat grew worse and quit school.

The next time the preacher made his visit he asked the little girl, "How is your class getting along?" The little girl, with tears in her eyes said, "Brother preacher, I'm sorry to tell you but the kitten died and the cat got too big and unruly and my class is broken up."

How true this is of hundreds of boys and girls. When they get partly grown, they are too large to go to Sunday School. Not only the boys and girls but men and women neglect the church for what they consider good excuses.

So many business people have never learned the great truth, that without our God in one's business life, the largest percentage of one's life is a failure.

A. T. Stuart, the great merchant prince of New York City, in his day, when he came to die felt the need of God. His last request was for his friends to sing, "Come Ye Sinners, Poor and Needy." There is and will be a time in everyone's life when they need God. We really think the present conditions are waking up a lot of people who thought they could get along without God.

People realize more than ever that they need Him and a higher power to guide them over the breaks.

More than 3 out of every 5 motor car buyers today are choosing sixes. And, of course, the most popular six of all is this new Chevrolet—the Six Supreme! Discriminating people prefer it because of its high quality . . . because of its great value . . . because it's the only low-priced car with all these fine car features!

Today In Kentucky

(Henry Ward)

The months-old campaign between U. S. Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley and Governor A. B. Chandler is being likened by many observers to the undeclared war in China, which is going on at a furious pace although Japan has not officially broken friendly relations with the Chinese government.

Everyone in Kentucky—and most people in the United States—knows that Senator Barkley and Governor Chandler are contestants for the honor of representing Kentucky in the Senate for the next six years. Both have perfected organizations which are working busily. But the campaign has not opened, officially. Chandler declared his candidacy in a speech at Newport in February, and has been making speeches for himself over the state ever since, but insists that he hasn't made his "opening" speech. Barkley hasn't sounded his battle cry, either, though he has been returning to Kentucky almost every weekend for chats with his supporters. He's been too busy directing the course of legislation in the Senate to start his political speech-making. Barkley may open his speaking campaign, officially, on June 4, but the definite date depends on how much longer the Congressional session will last. Even though Chandler has criticized him for not spending more time in this state, Barkley knows that his job is at Washington and that he should attend to it as long as Congress is in session.

Persons who have never registered may do so now and vote in the August primary, provided they have resided in Kentucky one year, the county six months, and the precinct 60 days by August 6. Young citizens who will be 21 years of age by next November 8 can register now and vote in August. A person who has changed his residence from one precinct to another or within a precinct should change his registration before June 7. A trip to the office of the county clerk is all that is needed.

Both the Chandler and Barkley for Senator organizations will concentrate between now and June 7, on promoting the registration of all persons who will be eligible to vote in the August 6 primary. Regardless of how influential a citizen may be in his community, they know his personal worth as a supporter drops to nil on election day if he is not registered so he can vote. The date for the close of registration books in Kentucky's 120 counties was advanced to June 7 under the registration and purgation act which Chandler pushed through the legislature in February. Despite a widespread impression, this legislation did not change the law under which a person who was registered as a Republican at the last November election cannot change his party affiliation and vote in the Democratic primary. The Chandler forces did consider making the change, but were convinced the kick-back would be severe and re-act against them.

Dr. A. Y. Lloyd, state old age pension division, Director, has joined the Chandler corps of speakers. He made a speech for the Governor last week at Morehead, but didn't mention the fact that under Chandler control a comparatively small number of Kentucky's aged needy get an average of only $9-a-month pensions, although Chandler promised $30 when he was running for Governor.

Frederick A. Wallis, commissioner of welfare, is working for the special session of the legislature, tentatively scheduled for May 23. He's started saying nice things about Chandler too—in public. Speaking to Paris Rotarians, Wallis said the reclamation of the state penal and eleemosynary institutions is the "passion of my life." He abandoned plans to resign and support Barkley when Chandler promised to give attention to that "passion."

Settled St. Augustine, Fla., in 1513 Ponce de Leon, in search of the Fountain of Youth, seems to have visited the site of St. Augustine. In 1564 a company of French Huguenots passed there and settled a few miles to the north on the St. Johns river. Don Pedro Menendez de Aviles was sent by Philip II of Spain to expel the intruders and erected a fort at St. Augustine, in August, 1565. Upon his return from the St. Johns settlement, he established a settlement at St. Augustine.

Afraid of the Dark—
If darkness itself is no longer scary I wonder what about noises of the night. Sounds are so much more obvious at night than many superstitions and fears have grown up and around them. Owls hooting have frightened many a weak-nerved person, especially screech owls, with their quavering, whining, despairing notes. It used to be the custom to burn an old shoe to run away such purveyors of gloom. I do not know whether owls have a keen sense of smell or not; if they do, the old shoes are very effective. Larger owls are seldom associated with bad luck except the barred owl when he gives his almost human shriek. Bad luck even death in the family, is portended by owls. Probably no sound carries farther and sets more nerves tingling than the howling of dogs. It has been believed in all ages that dogs could see and hear things that our carrier ears and eyes could not take in. Hence it is feared that dogs sense the presence of invisible things, especially evil spirits. Aside from any superstitious fear associated with it, the howling of dogs awakes in many of us a primitive feeling that allies us with the most ancient of days. Some people I knew would scold dogs when they began to howl and would thus force them into silence; others, feared to disturb them, and let them howl on.

Indoors there are sounds that have made many a head of hair stand on end. Certain beetles in the walls have acquired the very unjust names of "death watches" because of their clicking sounds. On cold nights the furniture and the walls themselves pop and crack, making many a child and superstitious grown-up fear that spirits are walking about. The fire often makes a sound that is usually interpreted as "treading" or "trotting" snow. Some fearful one read this as a bad omen, connected with sickness and death rather than snow. Flying squirrels can create a weird impression when they scamper around in "loft" and suddenly reappear in another place, as if they, too, were spirits. Squeaking mice, out for a bit of food, have many times frightened people who in daylight have faced a phantom.

In the night we seem to lose much of the fine bravery that civilization has built up. We revert to the days when primitive man feared, and rightfully so, the woodland inhabitants that might devour him in the darkness. In spite of our increasing knowledge of our surroundings, we still shiver at sounds that ought to be ignored.

MOTHER'S DAY DEEDICATION
I dedicate this to my mother who passed away on Mother's Day ten years ago.

God lent an angel to the earth. She came in lowly guise; She was not even beautiful To our unseeing eyes. She swept and dusted, cooked and darned for all the heedless throng; And ever as she worked and hummed.

A little tuneless song. She always had a healing word For people in distress; And though her hands were worn and rough Their touch was a caress. At last her hair grew thin and gray, Her work took over-long.

And often times we did not hear That little tuneless song. God lent his angel to the earth To ease its frequent strain. But when he saw how tired she grew, He took her home again. We missed her almost everywhere For with our open eyes

We're Home-bodies, too, NEIGHBOR

Sitting home at night, you've probably heard the neighborly whistle of our locomotives.

Next time you hear that sound, we hope it will be a reminder that we are home-folks, too... sharing in community responsibilities... making a definite contribution to the comfort and security you enjoy when you step inside your own front door.

From wherever they are produced, we help bring your home-building materials to you... lumber, stone, cement, brick, steel. Chances are, we brought many of the things you use inside.

Hear the actual sound of The Pan-American Tunes in WSM 650 kilocycles, 5:00 P.M. every week day.

Sweet, Sweet Pain

Several centuries ago people seemed not only indifferent to pain, but almost to love it. In Spain, particularly, it was a common custom for lovers to scourge themselves during Holy Week to win the admiration of their sweethearts. If a flagellant met a pretty woman on the street and was able to strike himself so that some of the blood sprinkled on her, his honor was great and the lady was grateful.

Lamb Reports

THE SPRING LAMB SEASON is at hand, in which all lamb raisers are interested. With a fairly moderate winter and early spring, we should have early lambs, although the continuous rains held the growth back early in the season; but with good sunshine from now on, should overcome the rainy set-back. Our general information is, that there will be more lambs this year than last. We are sorry to say that financial conditions, are such, we do not expect as high prices as last year, with an average price of 10 cents per pound; we will be lucky to hold the price up to 9 cents average. Do not be disappointed in lower prices; our best advice is to get your lambs up to 70 to 80 pound weights as soon as you can, and market them; hold light lambs back if doing good. Our viewpoint of getting the most dollars for our customers, is to sell with as little sort as possible. If any falls or skips sort out; but not to sort out a small percent of the tops to make a showing, making the bulk of the consignment seconds; the buyer does this to hold the average price down. That is why we contend so strongly for the sales agency to be on the selling side. Whenever a commission man is on both sides, he is a sales and buyer agency, have failed to see anyone represent both sides justly; it cannot be done. Did you ever see a buyer big against himself at an auction sale? It is our business as a sales agency to represent the producer. We have proven this by taking off a dock of three pounds per head on truck lambs, which was 20 cents per head last year; multiply this by the number of lambs that came to the Cincinnati market, which amounted to $52,965.00 last year. It will be said no one dock lambs, they fail to tell who took it off. We play no favorites, we do not mark prices up and down, but sell all consignments on their merits; working for our customers FIRST, LAST AND ALL THE TIME. If we merit your business, will be glad to handle it. Our lamb demand is greater than our receipts; if this continues should have a good market right along.

CATTLE—We do not see much encouragement for cattle under present conditions. The facts are, if a woman has only 25 cents to buy steak, she cannot buy a 50 cent steak; the same thing can be said of pork. Great many haven't 25 cents, so they cannot buy steaks or pork chops, this will continue as long as we have so many unemployed. We expect good finished cattle to hold up fairly well, naturally grass cattle will sell cheaper as the grass season approaches.

HOGS—The sellers are having a hard fight to hold prices up. Light receipts is helping to hold the market up; we believe hogs will gradually sell lower as receipts increase. We think hogs will continue to pay well considering the prices of feed, especially on clover and grasses, which is the best time for cheap feed; finishing your hogs as fast as you can send them to market today's prices may look good later on.

We have always contended for more production of cattle, calves, hogs, sheep and lambs. That is the farmers business, the people of this country and the world are short of the necessities of life.

The best way to help improve business, is for every one to push and pull, have faith of ear, take business and conditions up instead of down, be thankful that you live in the best country and we have the best people in the world.

Remember, we have our sign out, U. S. WELCOOKER with latch stands on the outside of our doors, come to see us. We will work for you FIRST, LAST AND ALL THE TIME.

With best wishes and thanking everyone for all favors and good words.

Yours for service

SAYS ARMY WORMS MAY DAMAGE CROPS

The possibility of army worm damage to crops is announced from the College of Agriculture at Lexington, following an examination of small grain by Prof. W. A. Price, state entomologist.

Army worms were found feeding on the lower leaves at the base of wheat, rye and barley. They will continue to feed here for some time, finally moving up the plant stripping the leaves and severing the head. At that time, the plant is no longer palatable to the worms and it is necessary for them to seek new pastures, which they do by marching in hordes. At this stage, the worms should be stopped and the infested fields protected by the use of a dust four-row and poisoned bran bait.

The dust furrow is a mechanical barrier. It is made by dragging a keel or log several times up and down a previously plowed furrow. This act makes a fine dust and establishes a steep sided furrow up which the worms cannot crawl. Such a barrier should be placed between the crawling worms and the fields to be protected.

In connection with the dust furrow, poisoned bait should be used. It is made by mixing thoroughly 25 pounds of bran and one pound of Paris green, to which is added two quarts of cheap molasses dissolved in 2½ gallons of water. This is broadcast among the worms at the rate of 10 to 12 pounds per acre.

Just now, the mark growing spots in wheat, rye and barley fields should be examined for army worms. If they are found in large numbers, the infested areas should be treated with the poisoned bait. This should be applied before the worms start migrating.

Kentucky's prospective wheat and rye crop this season promise to be considerably smaller than in 1937, but materially larger than the state's 10-year average, according to the May report for Kentucky issued by the Louisville office of the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics. May 1 prospective yield of 14.0 bus. for the Kentucky wheat crop indicates a probable production of about 7,742,000 bus. this season, compared to 10,212,000 bus. harvested last year and a 10-year average harvest of 3,890,000 bus. 1927-38 inclusive.

Kentucky's probable rye production this season is estimated at 228,000 bus., compared to 312,000 bus. last year average of 189,000 bus. 1927-38.

Wheat and rye in Kentucky came through the winter apparently in rather good condition as a whole. Abandonment of wheat acreage in this state up to May 1, was 10 percent or slightly above the 9.2 percent for May 1, 1937 but lower than the 10-year average (1927-38) of 12.0 percent for that date. On May 1 there was an indicated 553,000 acres of winter wheat left for harvest in Kentucky for this season. The indicated yield of rye to be harvested for grain in Kentucky was 12.0 bus. on May 1, compared to 13.0 bus. on that date in 1937 and the 10-year average (1927-38) of 10.6 bus.

Condition of pasture in Kentucky May 1 was reported as averaging 87 percent of normal compared to 77 percent of normal May 1 last year and the May 1 average 1927-38 of 77. Tame hay meadows were reported averaging 84 percent of normal May 1 this year compared to 78 percent a year ago and a ten year average 1927-38 of 79 percent. Hay stocks left on Kentucky farms May 1 this year were reported by farmers as very large, being 312,000 tons compared to 47,000 tons May 1 last year and an average of 281,000 tons May 1, 1927-1936.

"That 'chicken in every pot' has been found—along with soup, olives, pickles, spaghetti and corn—has been on the pantry shelves or modern American housewives from coast to coast, already for the table.

More than 200 grocery executives from all parts of the country, meeting last week in Chicago at a conference called by the Independent Grocers, Alliance of America, heard these ready-to-serve foods described as the "liberator of the American housewife."

J. Frank Grimes, president of IGA declared that this contribution of food industry ranked with the telephone, electricity, mechanical refrigerators and vacuum cleaners as an historic social force.

"Heading the list of civilization's advances in this century is the emergence of women into the world of business, science, economics, education and politics," Grimes said. "The American woman's greatest accomplishment has been her ability to hold fast to all the vital traditions of homemaking while at the same time entering into the vital activities of community and national life."

Mrs. Grace Gray, secretary of the National Grandmothers' Club and the only woman ever to run for Mayor of Chicago, contrasted old-fashioned kitchen drudgery with the modern ease of meal preparation.

"Because ready-to-serve foods have ended forever the necessity of long hours toil over millions of kitchen stoves throughout the land, they must be considered the true liberators of the American women," Mrs. Gray said.

Exactly what husbands think about ready-to-serve foods was disclosed in a survey made among 1,000 business men in the "quick" list in hordes. At this stage, the results of the survey were discussed by J. Sidney Johnson, director of IGA's merchandising-advertising division.

By a vote of eight to two, these men expressed the opinion that their wives had too little leisure time to devote to participation in community affairs, the survey showed.

Nine-four per cent of the men prefer ready-prepared foods over home-cooked items, with pickles the principal preference, followed by soup, spaghetti and baked beans.

"This survey gives conclusive proof that men believe their wives are taking up too much time in the drudgery of housework and cooking time which could be used to improve home life by participation in community activities," Johnson said.

WALTON BUSINESS MEN'S ASSN

Don't forget about the regular meeting of the Walton Business Association to night (Thursday), Twenty-two carloads of seed potatoes were planted in Pike county, 550,000 pounds of mixed grasses and legumes sown, and seven carloads of limestone ordered cooperatively by farmers. Seventeen purebred bulls have been taken into the county this year.

Rockcastle county farmers are starting many small flocks of sheep, and also improving other kinds of livestock. Purchases this year imported and denied at Washington.

A Cabinet row involving fur, caused by patronage distribution, is reported and denied at Washington.

Nasturtium, Once Used

as Food, Scoury Remedy

Nasturtium leaves and seeds were esteemed as food long before people began to appreciate their flowers. As far back as the Sixteenth century, while the ships of the adventurer, Drake and Sir Walter Raleigh roamed the Seven Seas, it was discovered that nasturtium leaves counteracted scurvy. They were also called "Indian cress," and as such nasturtiums are known in certain parts of the English-speaking world to this day. In parts of Europe people still use the leaves of wild and pike the green, full-grown pike seeds.

As in the case of many others among popular garden flowers, like marigolds and sinias, nasturtiums are true American plants. The circular leaves as they are carried on their stems for all the world resemble the shields carried by the Greek warriors.

About the year 1690 the original dwarf (which meaning small) variety was followed by the stronger growing tropaeolum majus. Still later a species from Colombia, called tropaeolum lobbianum, found its way into European gardens. It brought with it the dark blood which has enriched its flower buds with red, orange and the deep red-browns. From these three ancestors are derived all the nasturtiums in cultivation.

Church Organs Used in Ninth, Tenth Centuries

The organ, which generally is the form of musical instrument used in churches, is first mentioned in the Bible in Genesis 4: 2. Pope Vitalian introduced the organ into religious services in the Seventh century. Church organs became common in Europe in the Ninth and Tenth centuries. The Puritans were much opposed to the use of organs in the churches. The first denunciation in America to install an organ was the Protestant Episcopal church at its place of worship in Port Royal, Va., in 1700. The first American-built organ was erected at Trinity church, New York, in 1737.

The use of musical instruments in religious services, relates a writer in the Indianapolis News, "is of ancient origin. Mention is made in the Talmud of the 'shofar,' a ram's horn, used in the services. There was also the Hebrew sacred trumpet called the hazzereth, which was made of beaten silver, and the cymbal were used in the ancient Hebrew services. King David, in his psalms, speaks of harps, trumpets, stringed instruments and organs."

How the Red Cross Came

Over the hospital where wounded soldiers lie, flies a big red cross. The men who carry the wounded men from the field of battle wear a red cross on their arm. Why was a red cross chosen as the symbol of those who care for the wounded? It is simply the Swiss flag—a white cross on a red ground—reversed. It was a Swiss, Henri Dunant, who first pointed out the great need for more humane treatment of the wounded in battle, says Pearson's London Weekly. He wrote a book describing how dreadfully the wounded suffered in warfare, without anyone to look after them. As a result representatives of the nations met in Switzerland, and it was agreed that each country should start a special medical service to attend the wounded. As a complement to Dunant and his country, it was then agreed that the symbol of the new service should be based on the flag of Switzerland.

O'Neill Monument

The world-famous Bucky O'Neill monument by Solon H. Borghum was unveiled in 1907 and stands on the Prescott place in Prescott, Ariz.

The statue was erected by Arizona in honor of the first United States Volunteer cavalry, known in history as Roosevelt's Rough Riders, and in memory of Capt. William O'Neill and his comrades who died while serving in the war with Spain.

O'Neill was recorded as the first volunteer recruited in the United States for service in the army when war was declared. Equestrian statues by Borghum rest in the finest art centers of the world, and this is considered the finest equestrian statue in the world.

England's Most English Place

Perhaps the village of Seabourne, in Hampshire, is entitled to the distinction of being the most English place in England. It is close to the road that takes the traveler from Alton down the Mea valley to the south coast. It has winding lanes in place of regular highways, and the scenery is overwhelming.

Here Gilbert White lived and wrote his history. Every year tens of thousands of his readers, from many countries, walk through the wood paths and hear the woodwrens singing in the beech trees.

Louis XIV Was Known as Great or Grand Monarch

Louis XIV, who ruled France from the age of five until his death at seventy-seven, is known as the Great or Grand Monarch, typifying absolute rule in its extreme form. Though he may never have said, "The state, it is I," notes a writer in the Detroit News, he was emphatically the state throughout his reign. His education was entrusted to Cardinal Mazarin and was largely neglected, for which he was afterwards blamed. Writers such as Huddleston in his "Louis XIV in Love and in War" say that this sense of his juvenile inferiority and suppression accounts for his later characteristics of self-assertion, majesty and splendor.

Of moderate intellect, he had good sense to select wise administrators such as Colbert, who reformed the tax system, encouraged commerce and industry and gave France a navy. He helped literature and the arts, as adding to the grandeur of his reign. "Was there not birch enough in the forest of Fontainebleau?" showed how he regretted the neglect of his education, particularly in the principles of virtue.

The Britannica says the judgment of posterity has not repeated the earlier verdict of his contemporaries, but he remains the model of a great king in all that concern the externals or kingship. The palace of Versailles was designed by him to serve as the symbol of his reign and the monument of his greatness. His court and government were installed there in 1682.

President Monroe Father of the Famous Doctrine

The Monroe Doctrine is a declaration of policy made by President Monroe in a message to congress, December 2, 1823, in which he declared "that the American continents, by the free and independent condition which they have assumed and maintained, are henceforth not to be considered as subjects for future colonization by any European powers."

The message called attention to what the President considered to be the difference between the political system of the monarchies of Europe and that of America, and stated that any attempt on the part of these European monarchies to extend their system to any portion of the western hemisphere would be regarded as dangerous to the peace and safety of the United States.

The doctrine, at the time, observes a writer in the Indianapolis News, accomplished its purpose of deterring European powers to abstain from intervening to overthrow the independence of the newly arisen Spanish American republics, and it has since been repeatedly appealed to by successive Presidents, though not until 1898 was it formally noticed by congress. Following the "Venezuela incident" of that year, in which the American government interfered to stop what it regarded as encroachments of the British government upon territorial rights of Venezuela, the policy was overwhelmingly approved by both great political parties. It was also strongly ratified at that time by the governments of several Latin-American states.

Dolls Represent Ancient Indians

Strange dolls are found in the homes of the Hopi Indians in Arizona. They are called Kachina dolls. Kachinas are the spirits of the Hopi's ancestors. The name means "sitters" and comes from the Hopi custom of burying their dead in a sitting position. Every year the Kachinas are impersonated by Indians who go out of town, dress themselves in gay clothes, and present themselves at the gate. When they are allowed to enter they go through the town dancing and making sport for every one. The Kachina dolls are miniatures of members of the family in the costume and mask of the spirit they represent. The dolls are carved from wood and painted with gay colors made from clay. Feathers wave above their heads and their faces are reproductions of Hopi masks. Hung in the home, the Kachina dolls are believed to keep away evil spirits.

Old Laws on Statute Books

The American Magazine set out recently to examine some of the obsolete laws that still adorn the statute books in many of our states. A few of the results are: In Georgia there is a law that forbids anyone to shoot a hawk or a falcon. In Illinois animals may be sent to jail; a monkey recently served five days in the county jail for shoplifting. In Arkansas a law is provided by a state law establishing a permanent closed season on frogs. In Chesterwood, Md., persons riding in the fire department ambulance must pay a fare of twenty-five cents a mile.

Notable Tennessee Shrine

Perhaps the most notable of Tennessee shrines is the Hermitage, home of President Andrew Jackson. The mansion is the third to be built by "Old Hickory" on this site and was constructed in 1835, while Jackson was serving his second term as President. It represents the true colonial architecture of the old South and contains a museum of relics, many of which were actually part of the Jackson household equipment.

Barkley's Weekly
ws LetterWashington, D. C., May 16.—The present status of the wages and hours bill in the House of Representatives presents one of the peculiar legislative situations that sometimes arise over important legislation because of the rules of the House or the Senate, or both.It has been almost a year since the Senate passed the wages and hours bill during the first session of the present Congress. This bill was intended to provide a minimum wage for 1 workers and maximum hours. The legislation had s, one being to spread employment the unemployed and the other being to increase the purchasing power of those who are employed. When the bill passed the Senate it went to the House of Representatives and was referred to the committee on labor.This committee went into the bill a number of amendments, substantially modifying the Senate measure. The committee in due time reported the bill to the House, and placed it upon the calendar. Under the rules of the House a bill placed upon the calendar must undergo considerable delay in being considered unless it is a privileged measure or unless the rules committee gives to it a privileged status. The rules committee in fact the political committee of the House. Its function is to enable the administration and the majority party to act promptly upon administrative measures of such importance as to justify immediate consideration. Because of the composition of the rules committee it was impossible to give a majority of them to vote to give to this wages and hours bill a privileged status. When this impossibility developed, the members of the House resorted to what is known as the discharge rule by which a majority of the House membership—being 218 members may by petition take the bill away from the committee and place it upon the calendar. Thus the committee on rules was discharged from further consideration of the bill and it was placed on the calendar.When later it was taken up automatically under the rule, majority of the House voted to recommit the bill to the committee on labor, from which it was taken in effect sented to the bill for the balance of the Congress.The committee on labor for many weeks continued to consider additional amendments so as to make the bill more satisfactory to those who had opposed it. In the meantime, both groups of organized labor became more satisfied with the bill, and in due time the committee on labor reported the measure again to the House and asked the rules committee again for a rule for its consideration. The rules committee again refused to give the legislation privileged status, and labor committee was again forced to resort to the discharge rule in order to have the bill considered at this session of Congress. With a speed that has never been experienced in the signing of a discharge petition, the required 218 names were affixed and the committee on rules again discharged from further consideration of the bill. Under the discharge rule it stands to be voted upon on May 23.However, since the committee on rules has been discharged the second time by petition from consideration of this legislation, there seems to have been enough changes in the attitude of the members of the rules committee to fulfill the prophecy that the bill will give a special rule and a privileged status for a consideration at least a week earlier than the 23rd. The prediction in Washington now is that this controversial measure will be disposed of during next week, and will be returned to the Senate with the amendments for further consideration in the Senate. Under the rules of the Senate, the bill may either go to conference where the differences may be adjusted between the House and the Senate bills, or the sponsors of the bill may move in the Senate to concur in the House amendments.
If the latter course should be pursued and the Senate should concur in the House amendments, the bill would then go to the President for his approval or disapproval.If the measure should go to a committee on conference between the two houses, it would be the duty of the conferees to attempt to adjust the differences between the two bills so as to bring the two houses into agreement on the legislation.
This legislation has pursued a more devious course and has encountered more hazards than any measure recently before Congress. Thus has been pronounced as dead and has just as often been revived with what seems to be new life. Whether the Senate concurs in the House amendments or sends it to conference, the bill will be subject to further, indefinite debate in the Senate, and no one can predict just how long it will require the Senate to dispose of it.This legislation may postpone the adjournment of Congress, but if the House passes the bill and sends it back to the Senate the chances are that, making due allowances for debate, the measure will overcome the handicaps and hurdles which have been thrown in its way and become a law before the adjournment of this session of Congress.If the objectives sought in the measure - to wit: increase in employment due to maximum hours and increase in purchasing power due to a minimum wage - shall be brought about, it will justify the efforts that have been made in its behalf.

Garden Insects

John S. Gardner,
Kentucky College of Agriculture
Courtesy Zeima E. Beyer Home Demonstration AgentSo far, gardeners have had little to be concerned about the weeds among their vegetables, for there has been rain sufficient for both crops.
Also, average temperatures have been low, and this has further favored the vegetables and operated against the sprouting of weed seed.
From now on, however, the rains will slacken, the soil will dry out and the weather will become warmer, and this will operate in favor of the weeds, for they have been surviving through many unkindly seasons, and despite hard conditions.The vegetables, on the contrary, are pampered pets, bred for production only, and dependent wholly on the gardener's effort in their behalf. This effort is summed up in one word, "cultivation"; the modern way of saying "working" the garden.
The two terms are by no means synonyms, though the aim of both processes is the same, but with quite different approach."Working" the garden consisted of churning the soil, cutting it with deep gashes and turning up the sun the deeper, moist soil, for it to lose its moisture. Incidentally, some weeds were uprooted and some "smothered", at least for the time being.Another aim of this working was to prepare the soil ahead of the root ends so they could penetrate it, and still another was to "air the soil", so that the roots were supplied.The beneficial part of this sort of working was that weeds were destroyed, though not all, for some of these that were smothered needed to be smothered again, but the other objectives, those of making the soil open so the roots could work into it, and giving these same roots air in the amount they needed it, were missed. For any such loosening of soil that tends to run together and to bake could be of permanent value, and neither could such airing of run-together soil, if in fact, plant roots need as much air as some persons supposed. Rather, to keep soil in easily workable condition, humus matter should have been plowed into it at the beginning of the season and the soil properly fitted, to take care of both its root penetrability and its correct aeration.In the course of the "working" sometimes roots were laid bare and their ends cut off, but this was regarded as part of training to make the vegetables hardy against later hard times. If it rained, they repaired the damage, but they lost time, and wasted energy that might have been used to better purpose, but the harvest suffered. If the weather was dry, the set-back was more pronounced, and sometimes the vegetables died.
So deep "working" close to the vegetables roots went out of fashion and "cultivation" came in as taking less effort, to which there could be no valid objection, and as being infinitely kinder to the crops, especially inasmuch as cultivation accomplishes all that was necessary, anyhow, which is to remove weed

INSECTS

A most important speculation on the part of gardeners repeat the insect hazard that besets them as regularly as the season roll round.
Sometimes the trouble starts so innocently and unobtrusively that one is lulled into thinking that this is not to be the year for this or that insect, only to be made rudely aware later, that misplaced optimism is an extremely expensive commodity.On the other hand, one need not be hopeless pessimist concerning garden insect matters, because of contemplating the great number of pests there are and the great variety of vegetables they attack, for there are but two kinds of insects and two methods of control, though modified somewhat by the nature of the vegetable to be protected.One class of insects consumes fol-lage or root or stem tissue. For this class the control is an arsenical, applied where the insect does its feeding. Coupled with using the correct material and applying it at the proper place, is also the matter of right timing. It is in this last respect that so many gardeners fail, and from these come the bulk of the complaint that the recommended remedy

"fattened the bugs".

The insects of the other class have no chewing mouth parts. They subsist on sap which they draw through pointed snouts plunged into the deeper tissues of the vegetable plants. It is quite obvious that inasmuch as no surface feeding is ever done, surface-applied control materials cannot have effect, but the insects must be destroyed through other means.
Fortunately, the sucking insects are self-bodded throughout their lives, or at least until just before they become adult, and they succumb easily to materials that corrode their bodies or effect their "gassing" if applied to hit them.For the chewing insects, an arsenical poison has been recommended, but arsenic is so toxic to man as well. Therefore, a treatment must be used not ever to apply it on plants parts that later become human food.
If the insects continue their depredations after food parts form, or if they are troublesome on plants that are wholly used for food, the new insecticide rotenone, should be used for, although deadly to all insects, it is harmless to man. It comes as a concentrate to be dissolved in water, or as a dust, ready-mixed.
All druggists and seedsmen carry it or can obtain it.For the sucking insects, the most simple material to use is tobacco tea, made at home by steeping trash tobacco in water, or because the nicotine strength of tobacco is not uniform and the results in "tea" of uncertain strength, commercial nicotine sulfate, "black leaf 40" instead.
This material all druggists and seedsmen handle. Bought in small glass bottles it is rather expensive, gardeners should purchase it in large containers.
To answer complaint that on greens the tobacco flavor persists, let it be said that rotenone dust or spray it used instead. The expense of the two is about the same.MT. ZION

CHAPTER IV—Talking over the situation with Sorley, Raine is a creation of Jeff's story of shooting at the assassin rather than at her. She comes, and finds only a note to Pat from Jeff. Raine sends word to Norm Howard he wants to see him. He shows Howard a poster with his picture, with the name of Clint Dodge, wanted as the leader of a band of outlaws and robbers. The rest of the band arrives.

CHAPTER V—Jeff shows the outlaws the poster and asks their confidence, and tells them that he is a creation of Jeff's story of shooting at the assassin rather than at her. She comes, and finds only a note to Pat from Jeff. Raine sends word to Norm Howard he wants to see him. He shows Howard a poster with his picture, with the name of Clint Dodge, wanted as the leader of a band of outlaws and robbers. The rest of the band arrives.

CHAPTER VI—Jeff calls on Frank and warns him that Sorley and his band are threatening him, and tells him of his suspicions that Morg Norrie was the one who shot the father. Frank receives a message that the father wants him at Sanger's, and despite warning, starts out. Shooting starts, and Gray helps Frank hold off the killers until he and Frank can escape.

CHAPTER VII—Frank, arriving at C. Ranch, tells all, and even Lee is ready to welcome him. Jeff, however, is off into the hills of Tall Hill, distrustful of Jeff Morg Norrie. He takes Kansas and finds hand saddling horses, hears an unguarded remark about Jeff. Raine follows and watches them heading in the direction of C. Ranch, and follows them. He finds out on silver smugglers in the canyon. He rides back to the ranch, and finds that the Chicago party, the horsemen who the trail show Norrie, are after him. He finds out on silver smugglers in the canyon. He rides back to the ranch, and finds that the Chicago party, the horsemen who the trail show Norrie, are after him.

Kansas led the roped horses back to the stable and saddled. His gaze swept the road along which Chick's men must approach the ranch. If it came to a showdown he could jump a bronc and start out, leaving Norrie to pull his hand alone.

He heard a sound of something moving at the hitchrack on the other side of the stable. It might be a horse stirring—or it might not. Stealthily he moved through the stable to the door and looked out. His revolver was in the open, ready for action.

What he saw surprised him. The girl Nelly was pulling the slipknot that tied one of the animals to the rack. Kansas moved toward her. "Where you going?" he demanded.

Nelly gave a little cry of fear, staring at him, her fingers flying to her open mouth. "I—please let me go, Mister," she begged.

To Kansas came a thought. He was a stupid man, and his mind usually worked slow. But his safety was at stake.

After himself or this crazy fool Norrie would lead him into trouble from which there was no escape.

His furtive glance swept to the house. No sign of Morg, who was probably busy inside with getting the food ready.

Kansas stepped closer. Instinctively he lowered his voice, though he knew nobody could hear him.

"Girl, I'll let you go," he said. "Fork that bronc and light out. Keep going till you reach Chick and his posse. Tell Lee Kansas helped you get away. Tell him I'll be with his daughter and Norris watching over her all the time. Tell him I'm against this thing every way from the ace, but Morg is bent on having his way. This idea now is to hold up in the old Walsh cabin back of Crowfoot. Don't forget the name, girl. I am Kansas. I'll be doing all I can every minute for Miss Chickwick. Don't forget that too."

"I won't forget," she promised breathlessly.

"All right. Light a shuck and go like the hell flies were pestering you." He added: "I'll have to make a play at shooting at you."

Nelly pulled herself to the saddle and was off, gathering the horse to a gallop in a few jumps. Kansas fired in the air twice. He ran toward the house shouting at the man inside it.

Norris ran out to the porch, gun in hand.

"She's gone!" Kansas screamed. "Jumped one of the horses while I was coming back from the corral. I took a crack at her and missed."

The killer looked at the horse and rider disappearing in the distance. "Suit me fine," he said. "I didn't much want her along anyhow. But we'll have to get going my pronto. Finish saddling and bring the horses to the house. We'll pack the grub on there."

He went back into the house and into the bedroom where he had left Ruth a few moments before. The man moved noiselessly. He was of the tiger-cat breed. All his motions were smooth and rhythmic, as if he rode on padded feet.

Curtly, he snapped at her. "You got what clothes you'll need?"

"Yes."

"Enough to keep you warm nights if we're on the dodge outside. That's all you can take."

Again she pleaded with him. "I've got a shuck now."

"I've got a shuck now."

"I've got a shuck now."

He knew that if he were in Morg Norrie's place his urgent impulse would be to strike for the nearest point where a horse could be got safely.

"And if they went to the ranch Miss Ruth might be out galloping over the country the way she does," Pat went on, bolstering up his assurance. "Half the time that girl spends in the saddle."

Gray pulled up abruptly. "Listen," he said.

To them drifted the sound of a galloping horse. Instantly Gray lifted his pony to a canter and rode out of the draw in which they were.

The approaching rider was a woman. He moved forward to meet her. She caught sight of Sorley and dragged her horse to a halt.

"They've got Ruth!" she cried. "Who?" asked Pat sharply. "I don't know. Two men. I—got a horse and ran away."

Nelly broke down and began to sob. "Two men with one horse?" Gray inquired.

"Yes. They found horses in the corral, and they made us pack food."

"What d'you mean, they've got Ruth?" the crook-nosed man asked grimly.

"They're taking her with them. I was to go, too, but I got away like I said. One of the men let me go."

"Which one? Did you hear his name?"

The girl suspended her sobs. She looked at the hard-faced stranger whose eyes were like a day of judgment. His strength communicated itself to her.

No, yes, I did, too. He said his name was Kansas, and that I was to tell Mr. Chickwick he would try to look after Ruth. He said he was against taking her and to remember that the horse would make a start for the Walsh cabin back of Crowfoot. That is where they will hide."

"Did he call the other man Morg?"

"He called him Morg."

"How did Kansas get a chance to let you go?"

"The other man had sent him out to rope and saddle horses and I slipped away to the stable. This Kansas caught me there. But he let me go. He pretended to shoot at me as I rode away."

Gray fired the next question at Sorley. "Where is this Walsh cabin?"

"Way up in the hills. You follow Lance creek—it is the back of the house—pretty near to the headwaters. Then you cut across mighty rough country to Escalado pass. The Walsh cabin is in a little park on the top of the pass. Unless you know where it was, you wouldn't find it in a hundred years."

"You'll have to go with me, I reckon, Sorley. I'd never seen it alone. We'll stop at the ranch and pick up some grub." Gray turned to Nelly. "You're not afraid to ride alone to meet Chickwick, are you?"

"Yes, sir," she said. "No," very dubiously.

"Good girl," the stranger said quietly. "We wouldn't let you go alone if you were any danger."

"You—you won't let them hurt Ruth, will you?" she begged.

No muscle in the man's grim immobile face changed, but the eyes that looked into hers had a cold, fierce deadliness appalling in its ruthlessness. He made no threat in his eyes, no promises.

"Quiet sabo!" he murmured. A moment later he was galloping toward the ranch.

They found the place deserted. Gray hung from the saddle, grounded the reins, and strode into the house.

On the kitchen table he found a note written on the margin of a torn piece of newspaper.

"Dear Lee," it read. "We had to borrow some grub for our honeymoon in the hills. Your son-in-law, Morg Norrie."

CHAPTER IX

Ruth knew she must not show fear. No matter how urgently it knocked at her heart, she dared not let it appear on her face. The man who had her in his power was a bully, and if she gave any sign of panic, he would take a devilish delight in trading on it.

Hour after hour they would deeper into the hills. Each added mile increased her worry. Not many people had penetrated the folds between these steep and rugged hills. Friends would not know where to find her. They might as well look for the proverbial needle in the haystack.

Norris rode beside Ruth, insulting her with his jeers and even more with his admiration. She looked straight ahead, hot shame in her cheeks. It was in her mind that she deserved this. Punishment had come home to her for all the careless flirting she had done in the past.

Upon her hand, lying for the moment on the pommel of the saddle, he let his fingers close. Ruth did not snatch her arm away. She moved it definitely but without haste.

He grinned. "You don't like me, sweetheart."

Her scornful eyes rested upon him for an instant. "I'm of decent people," she said.

His vanity was colossal. It came to her that perhaps she could play up to it to save herself. He liked to talk about his prowess. By flattery she might deflect him from the purpose playing in the shallow surface of his mind, might at least lead him to move toward it with hesita-

There was a change of front. It was useless to reproach him with outraging her rights, since he recognized no claims of others. Better to let him see himself as a lover irresistible, gradually weaning her will to fight his fascination.

"Don't you believe in any moral law at all?" she asked, looking at him with a friend's scorn.

"I quit Sunday school a right long time ago," he sneered. "Likely you'd say I was headed for damnation."

She guessed he was proud of his reputation for evil.

"They say there is honor among thieves," she said. "You would stand by a friend's woman?"

"How do you know a friend?" he wanted to know, with a curl of the lip.

"I know mine," she answered. "What about the sapsucker you've flirted with off and on for the past two years? Would you call them friends, when you were making them think they were as high with you and they only stacked up as deuces?"

She shook her head, smiling at him faintly. "Don't quote Ruth Chickwick to me. I don't set her up as an example. But I do think I have more sense now than I had then."

"Lemme see. How long is it since you ran off with Low Howard and then jilted him?"

"I'm a reformed character," she told him lightly.

"Don't you get too reformed and we'll get along fine. Understand one thing. Where I'm at I rule the roost. That's all you got to remember. I know your kind. You have to treat like a bronc with hell in his neck. Soon as he finds out who is boss, there's no more trouble. Until then I keep my quirt hot."

"Don't you think kindness might work better sometimes?" Ruth inquired, rather casually.

His crooked smile chilled her. "All these kids tried kindness with you. How far did they get? I wouldn't know that. Some of 'em farther than others. I reckon." He waited to give her a chance to protest, but she did not do so. "Some need the whip. You can lash sense into them quicker than you can teach it any other way."

"Purebred," "Thoroughbred" in popular usage the terms are practically synonymous. Both refer to animals which have been bred from the best blood through a long line and whose pedigrees have been recorded for generations. The United States Department of Agriculture favors restricting the word "thoroughbred" to thoroughbred horses exclusively, while "purebred" is used when referring to other animals.

Lesson Taught by Violet

The common violet, Viola papilionacea, lover of old fields, brook-sides and the dust beside roadways, has heart-shaped, deep green scalloped leaves that hold up the sign of contentment of heart for all passers-by to see and be warned, says a writer in the New York World Telegram. Its lesson is that by living close to the ground, making unadorned beauty for all and bringing the color of heaven down to earth, one may find heartease. Every-thing is to be sought for, seek after, labor to acquire it, we think, to give us this mystic thing "heartease," which the violet stands for. Heartease, ease of mind, means peace, tranquillity of heart or feeling.

Sand Worth $100 a Ton

Bahia, once the capital of Brazil, is the great cocoa port of that country. The state of the same name produces as much tobacco as does Cuba. It also produced the largest diamond ever found, 3,150 carats. Black diamonds are found there. Also, the sand is so full of minerals that it is worth $100 a ton.

Learning Secrets of the Sun Astronomers have learned most of the important secrets of the sun at times when the sun was invisible during eclipses.

Earliest Dated Event in History Henry Bruns in his "Compendium of Civilization" says that the introduction of the Egyptian calendar, devised in 4241 B. C., is the earliest dated event in history.

Delayed George III's Crowning The barons of the Cinque Ports, traditional carriers of the royal canopy, delayed George III's crowning more than an hour. They had mislaid the canopy.

Revolutionary Calendar

Used Only Twelve Years

The Revolutionary calendar, known as the French calendar that was established after the Revolution, was in use only 12 years and never really took root. It was adopted in 1793, and abolished by Napoleon in 1805. It reckoned the year from September 22, the anniversary of the republic's formal establishment in 1792, according to a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

There were twelve 30-day months in this calendar. That left five days over, and a sixth every fourth year. The extra days were devoted to the seasons, and were dedicated to festivals. The regular ones honored, respectively, the virtues, genius, labor, opinion and rewards, while the leap year day was "the day of the Revolution."

The months took their names from the seasons; the first was the month of vintage, the second the month of fogs. With their equivalents and the Gregorian date on which each began, they were: Vendémiaire (vintage), September 22.

Brumaire (fog), October 22. Frimaire (frost), November 21. Nivôse (snow), December 21. Pluviose (rain), January 20.

Ventose (wind), February 20. Germinal (seed), March 21. Floral (blossom), April 20. Prairial (pasture), May 20.

Messidor (harvest), June 19. Thermidor (heat), July 19. Fructidor (fruit), August 18.

There was no week. Instead, the month was divided into three periods of ten days each, called decades.

Name Albert, Teutonic,

Is Popular With Royalty

"Nobly Bright" is the meaning of the Teutonic name Albert, originally Adalbrecht. St. Albert (or Adalbrecht) was a brother of King Alfred of England, who came through Europe as a missionary, writes Florence A. Cowles in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Albert has long been a favorite with royalty. Five archdukes of Austria, two of whom became emperors, bore it. But it is principally connected with Albert of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha.

King Albert I of Belgium (1875-1934), killed by a fall while mountain climbing, was the latest ruler to bear the name.

Other Alberts of history are: Cyprian (1891), Dutch lieutenant, naval painter; Gallatin (d. 1849), financier, secretary of state, ambassador and author of works on ethnology and finance; Johnston (d. 1829), Confederate general in the Civil war; Harkness (d. 1907) founder of the American Philological society and author of Latin textbooks; Gladstone (d. 1897), author and politician; and Santos Dumont (d. 1908), Brazilian aeronaut, designer of dirigible balloons.

Original Aim of Ku Klux Klan The Ku Klux Klan, a secret organization, was founded in the South in 1865, in the early part of the reconstruction period, for the purpose of preventing the exercise of political rights by the newly emancipated negroes. Drastic methods were employed in dealing with them and with the "carpet baggers" and others who encouraged the negro to exercise his newly acquired political rights. The Klan was investigated by congress which passed a stringent measure (1871) for its suppression, but it was put down with much difficulty. The report of the joint investigating committee of congress was published in thirteen volumes in 1872.

Rainbow Fish Kin to Parrotfish Technically known as wrasses, rainbow fish are kin to parrotfish, and have earned still another nickname, "lip-fish," because of their thick, rolled lips. Living among reefs, they feed off shell-fish, crushing mollusks with big teeth "way back in their mouths. Probably the most beautiful inhabitant of the deep, the rainbow fish makes a nest of seaweed, strengthening it with bits of coral and rock. Pains-takingly, the fish weaves its nest, using enough seaweed to fill a peck basket.

How to Place Cousins

Here is the way to reckon cousins: Children of brothers and sisters are first cousins to one another. The children of first cousins are second cousins to one another; children of second cousins are third cousins to one another, and so on. The child of one's first cousin is a first cousin once removed; the grandchild of one's first cousin is a first cousin twice removed, and so on. Vice versa, the cousin of one's father or mother is a first cousin once removed, etc.

Our Early Lighthouses

The United States lighthouse service is one of the oldest of the federal agencies. It was provided for in the first session of Congress in 1789. When the federal government was first organized 12 lighthouses were turned over to it by various colonies. Of these early lighthouses were in the confines of the Massachusetts colony and one each in Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Connecticut, New Jersey, Delaware and South Carolina.

Ant Has Few Foes, Effective Defense, and Great Numbers

New York.—In sheer numbers, the ants challenge imagination. They outnumber all other forms of terrestrial animals. Over 7,000 species, subspecies, and varieties have already been collected and classified.

But why is this insect so dominant? Here are some reasons: The ant is preyed upon by comparatively few other animals. The ant's most dangerous enemies are other ants. Then, too, it possesses very effective means for defense. Some ants have powerful stings, similar to the bees and the wasps, while others squirt drops of poison at their enemies. A third reason—ants have long lives. Worker ants have been known to live four to five years, while queens live as long as 13 to 15 years. During the queen's lifetime, many thousands of eggs are produced.

Workers Are Small.

The workers are the small wingless ants with which we are all acquainted. They are structurally females but sexually sterile. The kings and queens are the sexual forms and they possess wings. During the summer, the mature kings and queens which have been developed in the nest swarm. While they are in the air, mating takes place. After mating the king dies and the queen establishes a new colony.

This is considered the typical life history, but practically every species has developed some peculiar habit characteristic of its alone.

Blind Ants of Tropics.

There are tropical ants which travel in great armies, as savage as the ancient Huns or Mongols, who spend their lives destroying nests of others and killing all insects in their way. These ants are blind, and that is the size of an other. They have no eyes, but their path is guided by nothing to them. Holes in the ground are entered, tall trees are climbed. Even human dwellings are invaded in search of prey. When such an army enters a house, the owner must temporarily surrender. But he can be sure that when the ants leave, all the cockroaches, spiders, rats, mice and other vermin life shall have been devoured or driven away.

There are other species of ants which have such large mounds that they are unable to find their way out. They are unable to find their way out. They are unable to find their way out. They are unable to find their way out.

Linoleum, Maple, Rubber for Workroom Flooring

Washington. — Linoleum, fluted maple and rubber outlasted concrete and asphalt in tests here to determine the best kind of flooring material for post office workrooms.

Conducted by Warren E. Emley and C. E. Hofer of the national bureau of standards at the request of the procurement division of the Treasury department, tests revealed that the three materials can take the pounding of 1,500-pound trucks with small iron wheels better than materials generally used for street paving.

Five samples of concrete were among the 30 samples tried, Mr. Emley indicated. A truck of the type used in the post office for hauling bags of mail was run 80,000 times around a 40-foot track to see which material lasted longest. Future post office construction, it is expected, will take cognizance of the test's results. Mr. Emley pointed out, however, that the tests apply only to the special conditions of the small-wheeled heavy trucks found in post offices.

Mount Whitney Still Is Highest in United States

Washington.—Mount Whitney is still the highest mountain in continental United States, but second and third places have been changed as a result of recent surveys by the coast and geodetic survey. The new heights for the five highest peaks in the United States are: Mount Whitney, California, 14,495 feet, lost 1 foot. Mount Massive, Colorado, 14,242 feet, gained 5 feet. Mount Elbert, Colorado, 14,240 feet, lost 11 feet. Mount Rainier, Washington, 14,408 feet, same. Mount Harvard, Colorado, 14,378 feet, lost 24 feet. The gains and losses are not actual. The change in height is due to more accurate surveys since the last set of altitudes was announced in 1938.

Bad Mastodon Teeth

Buffalo, N. Y.—Mastodons, the prehistoric elephants that roamed North America during the Ice age, suffered from toothache and tooth ailment like pyorrhea, a study of the bones of the Richmond mastodon, dug up from a bog in Indiana some seven years ago, has just revealed.

Lesson for May 22

SERVING THROUGH CHRISTIAN CITIZENSHIP

LESSON TEXT—Mark 12:13-17. 28-34. GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.—Mark 12:31. PRIMARY TOPIC—A Sermon on a Penn. JUNIOR TOPIC—A Sermon on a Penn. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Love to God and Country. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Obligations of Christian Citizenship.

"For God and Country" is a rallying cry that well summarizes the spirit and duty of the Christian citizen. So clear and inspiring are the teachings of God's Word regarding the relationship of the Christian to his country, that one marvels that national leaders who are seeking to stimulate civic loyalty do not promote a revival of the study of the Bible. Dr. Moore is right when he says, "No citizen is a good Christian and no good Christian is a bad citizen." The solution of our nation's problems would be a great religious campaign from coast to coast. A man like Moody would then appear in his true position as a great patriot. The soul-winner would be more important than the vote-getter. Why not try it?

Our lesson presents our Lord on Tuesday of His passion week, when He met His adversaries in their cunning efforts to entrap Him in His words and in the inconsistency of His actions. The two incidents before us have broader application than to citizenship alone, but we may well consider them in that light for they reveal to the citizen who is right with God will be right with the nation and with his own neighbors.

I. The Christian Citizen Loves His Country (vv. 13-17). The Pharisees, who hated Rome for its domination of Palestine, and the Herodians, who supported Rome in its control of the land, were engaged in a joint effort to tempt Christ. They knew that if He said "Yes" to their question the Jews would be angry, and if He said "No" He would be condemned as a traitor to Rome.

The trap was set, but it caught only the crafty hunters. Taking their own pocket money he declared that they used Caesar's money they ought to pay taxes to Caesar. If the coin stood for an orderly government, benefits of which they enjoyed and which they ought to support.

No real Christian will evade his duty to his country whether it be to pay taxes, to take part intelligently in its government, to defend it, to pray for it, or otherwise to show his love. One of the blots on the Christian church is the lack of civic righteousness on the part of many of its members.

II. The Christian Citizen Loves His Neighbor (vv. 28-34). Although this point comes second in our lesson it comes first in experience. It is the man who renders unto God the love of the heart, soul, mind, and all of his strength (v. 30) who is ready really to love his country as he should.

The scribes loved to dispute about which was the greatest of the 613 commandments which they recognized. Jesus astonished them by referring to the passage of Scripture most familiar to the Jews (Deut. 6:4, 5), which declares the unity and absolute exclusiveness of the Lord our God. It may be well for us to stress this truth even in our time, for most folk regard the worship and service of God as something optional. They feel that if they are not interested in religious things that is their affair and that they are just loafing and living just as right as those who recognize and obey God.

III. The Christian Citizen Loves His Neighbor (vv. 31-34). His Neighbor (vv. 31-34). The scribe did not ask for the second commandment but Jesus presents it as an unavoidable corollary of the first. The man who really loves God will love his neighbor.

Every social injustice would be wiped out and every man would be removed if all men loved their fellow-man as they love themselves. Such a condition will never prevail, however, until men love God. It is too much for the flesh to put others before self. Only the grace of God is sufficient for that. Hence the real solution of the problems of capital and labor, the "have" and the "have nots" is to win the men and women on both sides of the struggle to a true love for God through Jesus Christ our Lord. In other words, we come again to the inevitable conclusion that what our nation needs is a revival.

Social pandemics, revolution either by force or by law, dictatorships, all these are destined to failure. Men must learn to know and love God supremely and thus come to love their neighbors as themselves.

The crossroad Sunday school teacher, the missionary in the city slums, the preacher of the gospel, whether in the great city or on the countryside, the father, the Christian living out the love of Christ daily in kindly word and deed—these are the real forces for social as well as spiritual good. Let us do all we can to prosper their ministry!

AFTER THOUGHTS

By GEORGE

Memorial Day the saddest and most beautiful day has come and gone with all of its glory to the heroes of the past wars and civil life.

The National committees of both major political parties are already on the lookout for candidates that can also fish a bit.

Our friend Malcolm Simpson was in to see us on his visit home and likes his new position O. K. We are glad you do, "Simp."

The Advertiser force have joined the Isaac Walton Club and are now buying minnows to the fish at the Walton reservoir.

Journeyed to Bellevue, Monday and witnessed the double-header ball game between Bellevue and Bob and Gene's teams. The pleasure of it was marred by intermission showers throughout the afternoon.

Another holiday has come and gone and with it all the beauty of this special one, Memorial Day. We don't mind these holidays, but we don't like to see them fall on Monday.

The large amount of traffic that jammed the highways over the holiday weekend was, so it seems, to have been very safe as not one accident near was reported. Drivers can be careful if they want to and cut down the number of accidents and fatalities.

This week the Kenton-Campbell Courier and the Walton Advertiser will be one and the same from now on. The time that was spent on the two papers will be now concentrated on the one publication and will try to make it bigger and better in every way and from all standpoints, we hope that all of you stay with us and we can continue to serve you as in the past.

Speaking of hard times and a business recession is at hand, the attendance figures at the ball games of both major leagues was 323,403. The New York Yankees drew the largest turn out in the history of the game with 83,533. The 500-mile classic at Indianapolis, was witnessed by a crowd estimated between 150,000 to 175,000. It takes a lot of people to make up this many patrons for any sport.

Bery Johnson has been visiting in Bloomington, Ind., returned to Walton, last night.

NOTICE

The Kenton-Campbell Courier with this issue will become a part of the Walton Advertiser. The publisher has decided to put the two papers together making them more advantageous to every one concerned. We want to keep all of our old friends and gain new ones. Through your cooperation and help we can be of service to you in the future, as we have in the past.

Campbell County Seat Celebrating

Following Report of Town Treasurer

At the regular meeting of the Town Council held on Tuesday, April 26th, The Town Treasurer, Lawrence Thurner, in his quarterly report showed that they had a cash balance of $2,531.31, with $456.33, uncollected taxes. These taxes are not delinquent as the Council extended the 1936 paying date to May 1st. For the year 1935 the Town had but two delinquent tax bills and the Treasurer believes that all the taxes will be paid before May 1st, which will make 100% tax collection.

Upon receiving this report the Council voted to pay off the remaining debt of $1,000.00, due to The Bank of Alexandria. This Town is now free of debt as the Town has never had any bonded indebtedness. This will leave the Town with a cash balance of $1,531.31, to operate until September 1, 1937, at which time the 1937 taxes are due.

The assessment is made on 30% of the actual valuation and the tax rate is 75 cents on the $100.00, valuation. Since the Town has paid off all its indebtedness the Councilmen feel that they will be able to reduce the tax rate from 75 cents to 50 cents for the year 1937, as they have all the streets in best of condition and will not be in need of the 75 cent rate. They are celebrating on the possibility of this reduction from 75 to 50 cents on the $100.00, valuation or 33 1/3 per cent.

Thirteen years ago the Town contracted with the Union Light and Power Company to extend their electric line from Cold Spring to Alexandria, at a cost to the Town of $7,500.00, which was paid to them at that time. The Town also contracted for 24 street light for all night service and this all night service has been continued since they were installed.

On account of the Town having this electric line extended to Alexandria is made the electric available to the whole Southern end of Campbell County, and the Towns benefited are Clayville, Grants Lick, Persimmon Grove, Hawthorne, Pleasant Ridge, Dry Ridge, California crossing and all the Rural section of the County.

Four years after the Town had the Electric light service they contracted with the Union Gas and Electric Co., to install Gas thru this Town and they paid to said Union Gas and Electric Company the sum of $3,000.00, to extend their line to every house in the town. About 90 percent of the property is now serviced with Gas.

During the recent flood this Town did not suffer from any shortage of electric or Gas. This Town was not disturbed. Neither did they have any low Gas pressure as they draw the Gas from the Main line from West Virginia and leading into Cincinnati. The reducing station being eight miles North of Town assures this town of good gas pressure at all times.

This County seat town has a population of 750 and 96 percent of the property is owned by the owner. The Town Assessor made a survey of the Town and found that only six pieces of property is under mortgage.

The officers of the Town are: COOUNCILMEN: A. M. Thurner, William Allford, Pete Neiser, Chas. H. Youtley, Clyde Gomey.

Orville Carmack, Town Clerk. Lawrence Thurner, Town Treas. William E. Thig, Police Judge. Victor O. Williams, Town Att.

Dr. Amz In Charge Established 1857

HISTORICAL HOME STILL STANDS AS A MEMORIAL

High on a knoll overlooking the Dixie Highway, just north of Erlanger, among stately old beech and cypress trees, stands "The Mansion on the Hill" so entitled by Professor John Uri Lloyd in his "Stringtown on the Pike." This stately old home is said to be one of the finest examples of early American architecture, and is now being preserved for posterity.

In the early nineteenth century, about the year 1812, a land grant of several thousand acres was made to Col. Thomas Buckner, who settled in this section. After the death of Col. Buckner, his son sold the tract of land to Dr. Caleb Stone Manly—moved to Kentucky—from Mississippi where he was a planter as well as a practicing physician.

In the early forties, Dr. Manly built this beautiful home which is still standing today. The brick used in the section of this home were made by slaves and killed on the grounds.

Dr. Manly, a friend on the Longworths and other Cincinnatians, became interested in the development of a certain tract of land in Cincinnati for a public park. Through interest of the Longworths, Dr. Manly and the other prominent Cincinnatians, many unusual shrubs and trees were brought from all sections of the country for the beautification of this garden spot which we know as "Eden Park."

Through this connection Dr. Manly became interested in the beautification of his own estate and brought many unusual shrubs and trees from the south and secured others from various botanical gardens all over the country.

After living in the country for several years, Dr. Manly moved to Covington, and sold the country there to James Pendleton Carver of New Orleans. The Garvey family lived here for a number of years and then sold the property to Miss Anna Bedinger.

Some twenty-five years ago, Miss Bedinger sold the mansion and the seventy-acres remaining of the original tract to the late Col. Thomas Oody. During Col. Oody's time the old house and grounds was a well-known spot for all picnickers and out-ports.

In 1935, the property was taken over by Forest Lawn Memorial Park, Inc., and the present owners are remodeling and redecorating the mansion in keeping with its colonial history. Although the present owners are developing a modern burial estate, Forest Lawn, from all outward indications will appear only as a beautiful park.

Northern Kentucky can be assured that this fine historical spot will be a permanent place of interest to all Kentuckians.

"PRES" BERRIES
AND MAKES $200

Maintaining fires around his strawberry patch on a frosty night made $200 for J. T. Warner a Mc-Cracken county farmer according to County Agent Joe Hurt. With two acres of Blackmore berries in full bloom and the temperature dropping, the built fires along the windward side of the patch. While unprotected patches in the neighborhood yielded 10 to 15 crates to the acre, Warner picked 175 crates from his two acres.

School Problems

Many people have had the disappointing experience of becoming interested in some activity only to find that they are hampered or barred because they did not finish high school or made the mistake of studying the wrong thing. This happens too frequently, often because schools can not afford to offer work in which only a few, or perhaps only a single individual are interested. Schools have to choose a middle course and not always a happy one. Small communities find it difficult to meet requirements for college entrance and at the same time serve the immediate needs of the larger group who have other interests.

To serve these needs, the Federal government, in cooperation with the University of Oklahoma, devised a plan which has been successfully carried on for the past two years.
Under this plan anyone who is mature enough to do high school work can secure training to fit individual interests. Because of grants from the Works Progress Administration there is no tuition charged the student, cooperating teachers or schools.
The student need only arrange for books, which can often be obtained in the home community. A wide choice of subjects is offered. If an approval plan is followed a high or special certificate may be earned.

Adequate education is necessary to preserve a democratic nation.
Free education freedom of choice, availability of opportunity and recognition of accomplishment are marks of democracy.

Through these courses thousands of students are preparing themselves for some occupation or position.
Some are studying for government positions, diesel engineering, shorthand or bookkeeping. Some want to raise live stock or poultry, some to make a small farm pay or to plant an orchard. Some are interested in preparing better balanced meals, in designing dresses or hats, in harmonizing colors. Some are interested in art, music, literature, or recreation. Some are not able to attend school regularly on account of physical conditions or distance. Some are going to two or three year high schools and through our supervised correspondence courses will be able to graduate without going away to school.

All these courses are carefully graded within the range of high school ability. They are accredited by the University of Oklahoma while accepts completed work in satisfaction of entrance requirements. The courses meet approved standards and the teachers grading papers have standard degrees.

Many high schools now have supervised correspondence courses offered as a regular part of their curriculum. In this way they can offer elective courses to meet the recommendations of their guidance coun-sellers. With the recommendation of the local high school principal or educational advisor, students taking supervised correspondence courses are going on with an individual educational program.

The Works Progress Administration and the University of Oklahoma have extended the campus to every door. They have correspondence students in every state, in Puerto Rico, Hawaii, Alaska and the Canal Zone enjoying profitable courses prepared in an interesting, modern way by competent instructors. It is a democratic, inexpensive means of continuing intellectual growth, and preparing directly for a chosen field.

Individual students or high school teachers are cordially invited to write about their educational problems to Correspondence Studies, homa City, Oklahoma.

The Cincinnati Union Stock Yards Company has donated $100 worth of medals for winners in the Kentucky ton-litter contest, it is announced by Grady Sellards of the Kentucky College of Agriculture.

The contest is conducted to encourage farmers to do a better job of raising hogs, including the use of better-bred stock and more attention to feeding. Awards will go on five and a half months old. This means good, strong, healthy litters, pushed from birth to sale condition.

The method prescribed by Sell-ards includes the use of good pasduction and increases profits.

of Grayson county, made a litter of 13 pigs weigh 2,395 pounds when

SPRAY TO CONTROL
PESTS TO ELIM TREE

Spraying with arsenate of lead to control cankerworms and leaf beetles, pests of elm and hackberry trees this spring, is recommended by Prof.
W. A. Price, state entomologist at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station. Two pounds of the poison to 50 gallons of water will control cankerworms. For elm leaf beetles use three pounds of arsenate of lead to 50 gallons of water and add a pint of fish oil. One thorough application covering particularly the under sides of the leaves will curb the beetles, Prof. Price said.

ACP TOBACCO ALLOTMENTS MAILED GROWERS

1938 ACP tobacco acreage allotments were mailed growers on Monday and Tuesday of this week, according to H. R. Forkner, county agent. The notices include only one
der the 1938 marketing quotas.
These allotments are expected to be in line with acreage allo trends.

Mr. H. E. White, president of the county ACP association, reports the county committee was greatly disappointed because not all farmers were allotted the acreages requested.
The community committees recommended all major base adjustments.
However, after the community committees had completed their adjustments the Washington office demanded a total county adjustment of 67.7 acres downward from the total 1937 bases.

New tobacco producers have not received 1938 acreage allotments to date. Special base allotments for the first time since 1933 are set up in the State Office. The county office of date has received no definite information on these bases.

ed the eastern third of the state. The commonwealth of Virginia named this great section of Eastern Kentucky as a testimonial of gratitude to the General LaFayette, noble, generous, democratic Frenchman who was one friend of the thirteen colonies. Lexington, the capital of Fayette, was named for that battle in Massachusetts where was "fired the shot that was heard around the world." Other towns, too, bear historic and romantic names that thrill the student of world history and cause each Kentuckian to point with pride, such as Boone Station and Athens. It might be called a "land flowing with milk and honey." Here the men from the hills of Carolina and Virginia thrived to note the rich, level, or rolling lands that offered better opportunities for settlement than the steep-sided slopes and rugged lands of the upper Virginia and Carolina highlands. Daniel Boone crossed a barrier of mountains to hunt and explore this region and recrossed it to induce others to return with him to the promised land at the end of the Wilderness Trail. Thus the men of the hills first felt the enchantment of the bluegrass plains. The good rich earth lay many feet deep. The trees of the forest grew to great dimensions, and scattered throughout the country were many dense cane breaks. The abundance of game and the resources of water and soil smilled their gentle welcome to the pioneers.

It was thru Lafayette County that George Rogers Clark passed on his mission of conquest of the great West. It was here that Henry Clay grew to fame and Abraham Lincoln married Mary Todd. 306 FARMERS SECURE

TVA PHOSPHATE

Two hundred and six farmers the past two weeks have received 1971. Two hundred and six farmers the past two weeks have received 1971 tons of 47 percent phosphate under the A. G. Program, according to H. R. Forkner, county agent. The phosphate will be used to improve grass and legume crops in the county and to carry out soil building practices under the A. O. Program.

Phosphate, the past year, gave an average of 93 percent increase in the growth, stand and yield of grass and legume crops in thirty demonstrations. Phosphate and lime used together gave approximately three times the increased yield as phosphate used alone.

The TVA this year is supplying phosphate under the AOP soil building allowances. The farmer pays a total handling charge of $5.78 per ton delivered at Walton and $5.58 per ton when delivered at Verona. $32.00 per ton is deducted from the 1938 AOP payment check while the farmer in turn receives $30 per ton credit when the phosphate is used on soil conserving crops. Farmers may receive up to 80 percent of their allowances in phosphate. This plan is unquestionably the cheapest means of securing high grade phosphate for soil improvement. Applications for phosphate are received at the county agent's office in Burlington. Farmers expecting to use phosphate this fall are urged to submit their orders now before the supply is exhausted.

BLUE MOLD SPREADS IN BURLEY TOBACCO

Blue mold of tobacco has appeared in occasional plant beds over the greater part of the burley growing area in Kentucky, according to Dr. W. D. Valleau, plant pathologist at the Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington. At present it is limited to a few beds, but if damp weather continues, he says it is likely to become more prevalent. Dr. Valleau issued the following statement:

"In dry weather the disease causes comparatively little damage to plants almost enough to set, but in moist periods when the plants are tender it may cause extensive injury in very short time."

"It is recommended that tobacco cotton be removed in order to dry the plants early in the day and harden them. The disease spreads more slowly in plants exposed to the sun than those under cotton. Where the plants are large enough, set the healthy plants as rapidly as possible. The affected ones will gradually recover and will be ready to set about 10 days later than if they had not been affected. Recovered plants are entirely satisfactory for use as the disease will not affect plants after they are set.

"Where plants are already affected it is recommended that they be treated using 5 gallons of a solution of 10 pounds of f. nitrate of soda in 50 gallons to each 200 square feet of bed. The solution should be put on with a spritzing can and should be followed with an equal amount of clear water to prevent injury to plants."

About St. Patrick In the Gaulish mountains which are situated between the counties of Cork and Tipperary in Ireland there are seven lakes. In one of these, called Lough Diiven, it is said Saint Patrick, when banishing the snakes and toads from Ireland, chained a monster serpent, telling him to remain there till Monday. Irish legend has it that every Monday morning the serpent calls out in Irish, "It is a long Monday, Patrick."

Lesson for June 5SERVING BY PERSONAL DEVOTION TO CHRIST

LESSON TEXT—Mark 16:31, 27-31.
GOLDEN TEXT—She hath done what she could. Mark 14:8.

IMMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Showing Our Love to Christ, Young People and Adult TOPIC—The Heart of Christian Service.

"The love of Christ constraineth us" (II Cor. 5:14) was the all-sufficient moving force back of the greatest life of service rendered by man. It is this personal devotion to the One whom we love "because he first loved us" (I John 4:19), which makes Christianity "different from all other religions." Christianity alone acts through this natural and deep hunger of mankind with a personalized religion which can be a satisfying joy and pleasure. Yet at this point Christians fall the most and make difficult the work of serving Jesus. They see religion as a job to be done, a form to be observed, a duty to be fulfilled" (W. R. King).

We need to renew that devotion to Christ which expresses itself in true worship. Prayer is too often asking for things; praise, thanking for things (unless we become so engrossed with them that we forget to return thanks); and worship, which is a coming to God in adoration and thanksgiving for what He is rather than what He can give. Is forgotten. Our Heavenly Father wants us to show love toward Him. The act of Mary was pure personal devotion and worship, and its fragrance lives to this day.

I. Wasted—But Eternally Saved (vv. 3-9).

The dark hours of betrayal and death were before our Lord. All around Him was hostility. Even in the inner circle of the disciples there was misunderstanding and bickering. Mary (to be distinguished from the sinful woman of Luke 7) with the quick intuition of an understanding woman's heart knew what He was passing through, and with a magnificent act of love stood by Him in the fellowship of His sufferings. Dr. Morgan points out that it was "an impulsive act . . . born of the prodigality of love daring not to calculate." In the words of verse 9, Jesus declared that the gospel and that which this woman had done were to "stand side by side with each other forever. That keen intuition of love, that uncalculating outpouring of love, was Godlike, and an act in fellowship with the act of God by which a world is redeemed."

Judas, who was a thief, said she had wasted money that should be used for the poor (John 12:6). The other disciples thought well of his argument and murmured against her. But Jesus commended her. To be thrifty and frugal is commendable, but there are times when the heart should speak without being silenced by the drawing of purse strings. Many a home needs to learn the lesson of Proverbs 15:17: "Better is a dinner of herbs where love is, than a stalled ox and hatred therewith." Life takes on new meaning when love is free to express itself in unmeasured sacrifice. The same lesson needs to be learned in the church, where no end of harm has been done by logical penny-pinching when there should have been some holy abandon in spending for the Lord's work. Mary's gift seemed to be wasted, but it has been eternally saved.

II. Saved—But Eternally Lost (vv. 10, 11).

Judas betrayed Jesus for thirty pieces of silver. He "made" some money. The fact that he did it by betraying the Son of God may be worse in degree but is not worse in kind than the betrayal of the youth of our land by those who make merchandise of their eternal souls. A recent news item from England declared that church organizations were making money out of properties publicly known as centers of prostitution. The leaders deplored the situation, but said they could not prevent it without losing the income of the property. Why not lose every cent rather than be party to the betrayal of any man or woman.

III. Bold Words—But Weak Actions (vv. 27-31).

Verses 12-26 tell of the gathering of the Lord and His disciples for their last passover and for the establishment of the Lord's supper. As they left the sacred meeting and went out into the Mount of Olives Jesus foretold His betrayal and His coming denial by the disciples.

Peter, quick with his tongue, and bold in spirit, spoke swelling words of devotion and assurance. Sadly the Lord foretold his threefold denial of that very night. Again Peter and all the disciples declared their willingness to die with Him. They undoubtedly meant what they said, but reckoning without the weakness of the flesh they failed Him. The lesson that is written large in this story for you and for me is, "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall" (I Cor. 10:12).

Oliphant put 428 chicks in a brooder January 30, sold 215 broilers at the end of 11 weeks, and had left a flock of 193 pullets and 20 cockerels that had cost him only $8.22. J. E. Stoval strated with 205 chicks, and at the end of five weeks all were living and had cost him but $31.60.

Alligators' Eyes Not Luminous
The eyes of alligators are not luminous in the dark but they do reflect any light that comes them. Hunters attach lights to their heads, partly to blind the alligators. Then they can see the alligators' eyes gleaming like red-hot coals through the surrounding darkness.

Today In Kentucky

With the General Assembly in session since Governor A. B. Chandler took over the reins of the state government to pass the bill designed to rehabilitate the state clemency institutions, Chandler continued his drive to sell the voters on the idea that they should send him to Washington in place of Senator Allen Barkley, president Roosevelt's leader and spokesman in the Senate, to "help" the President run the federal government.

The extraordinary session is, a part of the Chandler program to win support in his race, and came about as the result of a trade with Frederick A. Wallis, commissioner of welfare. The legislation being considered is to Wallis "the passion of my life." He abandoned his plan to resign and support Barkley in return for the special session and the legislation that a group of outstanding medical advisors have recommended for Kentucky. Indications were that the bill would encounter practically no opposition, especially since its sponsors heeded a warning and had copies printed in advance to ribble legislators so that they at least could read it before passing upon it.

Governor Chandler kept the 133 members of the House and Senate dangling for a month, wondering whether he would call the special session. First he said he would call it for May 16, but changed his mind and said he might call it for May 23. Finally, he called it for last Monday just three days before time for the legislators to convene. Several members of the legislature did not do so, however. They went on the state payroll in other jobs when the special session adjourned April 9. Several others will get state jobs when this session is concluded. Chandler's apparent yearning to call frequent special sessions has prompted the suggestion that it call frequent special sessions has prompted the suggestion that it might be a good idea for all members of the legislature to be given full-time jobs with the state so that they would be available to answer his beck and call whenever a whim strikes him.

Chandler bestowed his blessing on the lambish members of his legislature and on the legislature, saw to it that Senator Ralph Gilbert, Shelbyville, (who last week announced his support for Senator Barkley because he couldn't stomach the Chandler campaign tactics) was relieved of his position as majority leader in the Senate, and again turned his attention to campaigning. He continued to have trouble developing issues about which to talk, however.

New York writer, in Kentucky for a survey of the political situation, after looking things over and talking with campaign leaders in camps, commented: "This is the strangest race of so important a nature that have ever seen. There do not appear to be any issues. The agreed that the only real issue is the fact that Governor Chandler wants to wait until his term as Governor is concluded because he figures the best time for him to run is when he dominates the political machine composed of state employees.

Chandler has been digging frantically in the mud for something to talk about since President Roosevelt turned down his proposal that Senator M. M. Logan be appointed to a judicial position so that (Chandler) could go to the Senate without a struggle. Recently he has been harping on the fact that Tom Rhea, whom he opposed for the Democratic nomination for Governor in 1935, is supporting Barkley.

Chandler has said: "Tom Rhea is using Barkley as a springboard to get back into Kentucky politics." Rhea's smiling comment has been: "I do not agree that I am using Barkley as Chandler charges because I am supporting Barkley just as every real Democrat should, but I have a vivid recollection of the fact that Chandler offered himself to me as a springboard to use in getting into his political organization. Now he's mad because I didn't accept."

Rhea referred to a meeting with Chandler and Lieutenant-Governor Keen Johnson last February at Nashville, which was arranged at the request of Chandler and at which the Governor offered Rhea any job he wanted and a nice slice of the state patronage in return for his support in the Senatorial campaign.

Chandler also has been describing Senator Barkley as the nation's "No.

1 coat-tail rider," referring to the fact that Barkley has supported most of the legislation proposed by President Roosevelt. Observers familiar with the fact that Chandler has insisted that his supporters in the legislature vote for his proposals without even reading the bills are of the opinion that he does not have much right to talk about "rubber stamps." Some of them have called Governor Chandler's attention to the fact that he is criticizing Barkley for supporting the very man whose loyal friend Chandler claims himself to be, President Roosevelt.

The Governor will have a few more weeks of scratching for issues inasmuch as Senator Barkley's speaking campaign will be delayed, probably until Congress has adjourned. The opening date for the speaking drive has not been fixed.

MASTER FARMERS

G. D. Hieronymus, 75-year-old Master Farmer of Lee county, Kentucky, is spreading 100 tons of limestone and 10,000 pounds of triple superphosphate this spring in the hills of Eastern Kentucky. Master Farmer Hieronymus has carved one of the best farms in the state. Most of his 1,000 acres are in grass, ha yard trees. However, he grows a large corn acreage, and maintains a good herd of cattle and a flock of sheep practically all on home-grown feeds. As much as eight tons of 1 limestone to the acre are used to produce big yields of alfalfa and clover hay. Last winter, during the Farm and Home Convention at the University of Kentucky, Mr. Hieronymus was named a Master Farmer which is the state's highest award in agriculture.

ADVOCATES RANGE RAISING PULLETS

All things considered it is difficult to find a better system of raising pullets than putting them on range providing the range meets certain requirements. That is the advice of Sanley Caton of the College of Agriculture University of Kentucky. These requirements he adds, will determine largely the value of the range and will help determine the value of the pullets housed in the fall.

A good range should supply an abundance of green feed provide shade, and should not have been used for poultry the previous two years. This, of course, is the ideal. Some conditions such as shade can be modified by artificial shelters.

The last mentioned requirement that of clean ground should be carefully considered. In the most cases pullets are free of parasites before they get on the ground and clean range helps them to keep that way. Feed and water containers should be moved at frequent intervals; the move being not be a great 10 or 15 feet being sufficient but move them two or three days.

Keep a good mash before the flock. This mash should contain a source of protein such as meat scraps or dried milk or a combination of meat scrap dried milk and soybean oil meal in addition, a hopper feed grain to the growing pullets to insure good body weight in the fall of the year.

Warm wet weather is often followed by outbreaks as quickly as possible. The symptoms most usually recognized are loss of appetite paleness in shank and beak drooping. When an outbreak occurs confine the pullets to the brooder house and clean the floor thoroughly every day at the same time for a period of 5 to 7 days. Keep the house dry.

Campbell County Farm Notes

J. E. Humphrey, Field Agent in Poultry Husbandry, and Dr. T. P.
Polk, Field Agent in Veterinary Science, both of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, Lex-care and management of the chick and controlling chick diseases and parasites at a series of meetings to be held in Campbell County, Thursday, June 2nd.

The first meeting will be held at 10:30 a. m. at Arthur Pells's Poultry Farm located 1 1/2 miles north of Alexandria on U. S. No. 27. Mr.
Pelle Brooded approximately seven hundred chicks this spring.

The afternoon meetings will start at 2:00 p. m., at Henry Heringer's farm on the Grants Lick-Peach Grove Road. After inspecting the Heringer flock the group will also visit the flocks of Leonard Nagel and Wm. Faulhaber, both located on the same road.

The public is invited to attend one or all of the meetings.

Hawaiian Kung a Gambler Although horse races are held annually in Hawaii, gambling of any kind is prohibited by law. Yet horse racing and gambling thrive here and is the principal sport of Hawaiian kings. Several land-owning families of today owe much of their acreage to King Kalakaua's poor racing judgment. The king, minus cash, habitually attended races with a map of Oahu in his pocket. He wagered land against money.

Don't Skimp . . . But Save!

Sometimes we confuse skimp-ing with saving. We measure our purchasing by someone else's price rule.

Saving means getting full value for every penny while paying less than we would have to pay elsewhere.

Skimping means doing without what we need because the price includes something we are not getting.

The ads in this newspaper are open doors to your savings department. Skimping is unpleasant . . . saving is a pleasure. Follow our ad pages and

Boone Wool Crop Be Received And Sold June 21-23

M. Sable And Sons, Louisville Buyers; Price To Be Lower

The Boone County wool pool was sold Monday, June 13, to M. Sable and Sons, Louisville, Lillard Scott secretary of the County Wool Growers Association announced Tuesday. The pooled wool will be delivered to three points in the County. The places and dates as listed by the Association are Walton, Tuesday, June 21; Burlington, Wednesday, June 22; and Petersburg, Thursday, June 23.

12,000 fleeces have already been pooled by Boone County growers and several hundred more are expected before the deadline date, John C. Bedinger manager of the Walton receivers announced.

Last year 64,000 pounds of wool was sold by the Association. This year's crop is expected to reach 60,000 pounds, officials stated yesterday.

The 1938 crop is said to be one of the best ever grown in this county and will rank high with other Association pools local wool authorities announced.

This year's price which will be announced on the day of delivery is expected to drop below the 1937 price. The quality of the wool, however, may offset this anticipated price it is thought by local growers. Hubert White, Burlington, President of the Boone County Association, will be in charge of the receiving at the three appointed locations.

Erosion Control is Urged By Agronomist

Local Expert Sees Maximum Benefit

Farming practices that control erosion also help farmers to get the maximum benefit from rainfall during periods when they need it most according to Douglas B. Redman, Agronomist of the Soil Conservation Service area near Walton, Ky. Since run-off water is the principal agent of erosion in this section, any practice that controls erosion must control run-off. This is exactly what practices that farmers are demonstrating in the Boone and Kenton counties are designed to do, Mr. Redman said.

Properly diversion ditches, contour cultivation, and contour conservation furrows provide mechanical barriers which increase absorption, close growing crops in cultivated fields, permanent hay crops, good pasture sod, and unburned woodlands all increase the moisture content of the soil by holding back run-off water.

With abundant annual rainfall in this section the problem is not one of getting enough rain, but rather of getting it at the proper time. Moisture stored in the ground by these conservation farming practices tend to alleviate damage to crops during periods of more porous, the use of strips of good rotations which make the soil extended drought, he pointed out.

This Week

by R. Maurer

With the coming of school vacations the National Rifle Association is in a bulletin to all its 3,000 affiliated rifle and pistol clubs sponsoring a safety campaign to curb firearms accidents among tots. According to the N. R. A., practically all such accidents are due to the unsupervised use of air rifles and firearms in the hands of untrained boys and girls. (Yours Truly was riding with one of the County's deputy sheriffs one afternoon last week when an innocent young chap leveled down on us with a 22. The gun was empty as the child supposed. . . but we dodged, nevertheless.

Our Sayersville Road correspondent says: A hundred years ago when the wilderness was here . . . with powder in his gun the man went out and got a deer, but now things have changed . . . and on another plan with powder on her cheeks the (Dear) goes out and gets a man. Note: Thanks a lot. Your contributions are appreciated.

This Week is glad to announce that Paul "Cack" Demolsey, son of Rev. R. F. Demolsey, Walton, and one of the famous Demolsey athletes is recovering from a recent illness. "Cack" you are missed! Your former coach at Eastern says to tell you "hello"

Never much to follow politics . . . but who could help but notice that each side is lambasting the other side for the very things they are doing themselves. (It should be a good fight . . .) While speaking of politics Lieut. Gov. Keen Johnson says that this is the first time he ever ran for office without his name being on the ticket. (You figure it out.)

The consolidation of the Kenton-Campbell Journer with the Advertiser gives this paper one of the largest circulations of any northern or north-central Kentucky weekly. The more the merrier . . . and the advertisers like it too.

Deadline for registration of voters caught a few county citizens still unregistered. Many, however swarmed to the courthouse in Burlington before the final hour . . . Many people consider the voting right lightly . . . remember, through it's one of man's few rights.

AND SO ON: Walton, the county metropolis, is quite a place to live . . . I'd still like to see a county baseball league (like those of old) organized . . . Corn and tobacco still won't grow when we have these over-cast-wearing nites . . . Wonder how much more rough the Dixie Highway was between Florence and Walton can get . . . Some people don't shine half as bright under true light.

Washington News

School children and representatives of the people have something in common, anxiety over passing grades in pending tests and an unrestrained impulse to hasten vacation days. It is not, however, the call of outdoors that becomes our national legislators. Political expediency dictates their course. Unmistakably sign that the law-making foundation is preparing for the shut-down is noted in the cessation of major committee work. Committees act as a sieve through which proposed laws are filtered to the floor of the Senate and House. When these pumping agencies are halted by consent, it is taken as a notice that nothing new in proposals is wanted in the remaining days of the session.

Oddly enough, the rank and file have placed taboos on anything which is likely to delay adjournment. It is known that the Senate and House leaders would like to acquiesce to the President's wishes for re-organizing government departments which were definitely side-tracked last winter by the House. Knowledge of a growing rebellion against moves of this sort have prompted the Administration chief to turn a deaf ear to White House suggestions. Even threats of a Presidential veto on many pending measures apparently do not affect the solons in now in a quiting mood. The few committees which are functioning this week are merely clearing out odds and ends before consigning thousands of pet measures to a legislative limbo by failure to give the "go" signal.

Disclosures in private conversations and public debate over Relief Administrator Hopkins, intrusion into Senatorial campaigns tilting the vagaries of politics. Sitting Senators, who are not always as clubby in ordinary times, find that adversity makes strange bed-fellows. Many solons, who are usually as far apart as the North and South Poles in temperament and political views have taken up their cudgels in mutual defense against coercion by Administrative spending agencies. The Hopkins incident in which he publicly favored a House member from Iowa contesting Senator's seat in the Democratic primaries blew up whatever differences existed among Senators. As a consequence, the Administration must either back track in its reprisals against incumbents who voted contrary to White House instructions or be prepared for a guerrilla war in many states. The use of WPA funds for blueblooded purposes has not been projected as a major issue of primary contests. What effect this internecine scalp-lifting will have on public sentiment is not measurable at this time. The percussions will be felt in the 1940 Presidential race. While Hopkins is considered in the light of an earnest social welfare worker, the implications of his advocacy of candidates is not overlooked. As WPA Administrator he holds the purse-strings on billions, which is sufficient reason to make him a power worthy of recognition.

The reception accorded the formal investigation of the Tennessee Valley Authority hornet's nest is typical of second day developments in the political realm. The probe has bogged down in its sensational features largely because twice told tales soon lose their piquancy. The personalities involved were obviously inflated far beyond their real stature in the early charges. The repetition of charges, which are centered on personal feuds between TVA officials, will probably lessen public interest to the extent that hearings will prove a "dud" instead of dynamic re-verberating throughout the country.

The Southern legislators who were willing to stand like Horatio at the bridge to defy the forces promoting the wage and hour bill show signs of hopelessness. There are strong hints that the senate will write out a compromise ticket which will expedite the passage of the bill. The Dixie boys are falling back gracefully with the firm expectation that the measure will be successfully attacked as unconstitutional. The suspicion is gaining currency that the low wage rates, which are on a graduated scale in the pending bill for an increase each year, may eventually prove a boomerang. The dopest believe that trade unions will eventually press for a boost in the minimum scales when the escalator or graduated scale clause stops at the end of three years.

Congress is expected to pass the O'Mahoney-Sumners resolutions to create a temporary national economic committee within a few days. Therein hides a warning which has never been sold to the average business man. The business groups are now inclined to belittle the measures but a day of reckoning may be noted from certain plans outlined in the twin proposals. The resolutions carry out the recommendation of the President's anti-trust message of April 29 for an investigation. The sponsors have written several additional chores into the proposed authorization including Senator O'Mahoney's pet idea of Federal licensing all corporations. All government agencies would be drafted to assist the Congressional committee in reaching conclusions which could be translated into drastic legislation. The proposed inquiry will be searching for a few limitations have been placed on "fishing expeditions" into confidential tax returns and private files under the power of subpoena. A tip of the day is that the national business man during the summer and fall months.

THE SUFFERING SERVANT

LESSON TEXT—Mark 15:22-23.
GOLDEN TEXT—For even the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many. Mark 10:45.
PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Wonderful Love.
JUNIOR TOPIC—On Calvary.
IMMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Self-sacrifice for Others.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Love's Supreme Sacrifice.

"A Christianity without a dying Christ is a dying Christianity. History tells us that the expansive, loving and elevating power of the Gospel depend upon the promise given to the sacrifice of the Cross. An old fable says that the cross and the nails which substituted the blood of a lamb. The Gospel reveals the precious blood of Jesus Christ, his death for us as a ransom, and the cross over that substitutes hostility and binds hearts to Him" (Alexander MacLaren).

We consider today that darkest of all days in the history of the world—when wicked men with cruel hearts and hands crucified the loving Son of God. But, thanks be to God, it was also the day when bright hope shone forth for sinful humanity, for in His death Christ bore our sins upon the tree, the veil was rent, the old sacrifices were set aside, and the "new and living way" was opened into the "holiest by the blood of Jesus" (Heb. 10:20).

The cross is not just an ornament to decorate the steeple of a church, or to adorn a mat. It speaks of the black horror of the cry, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" but it also tells of our God who "so loved the world that He gave his only begotten Son" as its Redeemer.

I Crucified—That We Might Live (vv. 22-23).
The details of and circumstances surrounding the crucifixion are of deep interest to every Christian. We stand with Luther and weep as we see Christ's unspokeable agony, not only of body but of spirit, and we cry as did Luther, "For me, for me!" How can any believer contemplate the cross and withhold self, substance, or service from Christ?

Equally earnest and heart-searching is the message of the cross to the unbeliever. He knows he is a sinner (Rom. 3:23), he knows that "the wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23), and he knows that "neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12). Here at the cross he meets that one "who his own self bore our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes we were healed" (1 Pet. 2:24). There were two malefactors who were crucified with Him, and one rallied at Him. The other said, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom"; and Jesus said to him, "Today thou shalt be with me in Paradise" (Luke 23:39-43). Unbeliever, who reads these lines, will you not just now take the eternal life which Jesus died to make possible for you?

II. Forsaken—That We Might Be Accepted (vv. 22-23).
The railing, head wagging, and other abuse that men heaped upon Jesus as He hung on the cross, must have been a grievous thing for His tender loving heart to bear. But it was as nothing compared with that hour when, covered with all the sin and curse of the world, He who knew no sin "was made sin for us" (1 Cor. 5:21), and God turned away from Him.

We cannot fathom the full meaning of that hour, we dare not attempt to explain it, we can only accept it and thank God that because He did become sin for us we may be "made the righteousness of God in him" (1 Cor. 5:21). He died that we might live. He was forsaken that we might be "accepted in Him—"the beloved" (Eph. 1:6).

III. A Veil Rent—That We Might Enter (vv. 22-23).
The death of Jesus was not the pitiful weakening of a human martyr. Here was the Son of God, crying with a loud voice (v. 37), giving up His spirit to the Father (Luke 23:46), declaring that the work of redemption was "finished."

As a visible indication of that part—and as a declaration that the old dispensation of law had given place to the dispensation of grace, God tore the temple veil in twain. Only He could have done it. No man could have torn this sixty-foot long, twenty-foot wide, inch-thick curtain from top to bottom. It had hung in the temple to keep all but the High Priest out of the Holy of Holies, and he entered with fear and trembling but once a year as the representative of the people. Now all this is changed. We have now, "brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil." Therefore, "let us draw near with a true heart and full assurance of faith" (Heb. 10:19-22).

KENTUCKY is Calling, Too!

Newspapers and magazines, these days, are full of advertisements for other States and other sections. But Kentucky is calling, too—the State that offers you everything! . . . There's a Cumberland Gap—with the pinnacle towering above. And Pine Mountain nearby. And Natural Bridge State Park on Highway 15. And Herrington Lake, and Dawson Springs, and lovely scenery everywhere! . . . See them all and more, even if you must frequently omit Louisville and the Brown. We'll miss you, of course. But when you do come back to the Brown, you'll think more of your State—and maybe thank us for reminding you of it!

Plan to See—Ballard County—Ancient Buried City at Wickliffe.
Bell County—Cumberland Gap, thru which Boone and early settlers came over the Wilderness Trail.
Boone County—Big Bone Lick, where bones of mastodons were found. First white woman in Kentucky was brought here by captives.
Boyle County—Center College at Danville, Perryville, scene of Civil War battle where losses were heavier than at any other engagement in the State.
Carter County—Swing's Cave, where gunpowder was made in 1812.
Christian County—Pilot Rock, 200 feet high, located about twelve miles northeast of Hopkinsville.
Clark County—Indian Mounds at Indian Old Field near Winchester.
Edmonson County—Mammoth Cave, new entrance to Mammoth, Onyx, and other caves.
Fayette County—Lexington, the center of stock raising and metropolis of the Bluegrass. Ashland, Henry Clay's Home. Transylvania, the first college west of the Alleghenies. Home of the famous Man O' War, Kentucky University.
Franklin County—At Frankfort, the State Capital, are located the old and new Capitol Buildings, collections of Historical Society, graves of Daniel Boone and other men who have made history in Kentucky.

Workers Urged To Get Security Numbers

Commission Must Keep Individual Record

Frankfort, Ky., Workers who fail to obtain social security account numbers may discover, when benefits for unemployment become payable January 1, that their failure has cost them their benefits rights.

Jack Wert, chief accountant for the Kentucky Unemployment Compensation Commission, declared today.

The Commission, Wert explained, must keep a wage record for each worker. The worker's right to receive benefits, his weekly benefits amount and the duration of his benefits are all governed by the amount of wages received over certain period of time.

"In order that a worker's wages may be properly credited to his record, it is necessary that he obtain an account number," Wert said. "The name of the worker, alone, is not sufficient to enable the Commission to keep the accurate record necessary for payment of benefits. In numerous cases the same name will appear hundreds of times on the Commission's records. Without the account number the Commission would be unable to determine which record was applicable to the particular case."

Wert revealed that wage reports of workers for the first three quarters of 1937 showed approximately 20 per cent of the total number of workers had failed to obtain account numbers. Casual labor, employed for a few days after the flood of last year, accounted for a large part of this number, Wert said.

Wage reports for the last quarter of 1937 and the first quarter of 1938, now being received, show a general improvement in the situation, but there are still many workers who should obtain numbers, Wert declared.

"Gosh, tomorrow I take the big step. Gee, everybody's been giving me advice. Can you imagine! Some guys have the nerve to tell me that putting this ring on Mabel's finger means putting a ring around my neck! You know, a ball and chain! They're jealous, that's all!"

"Sassy, maybe there's something to that! No more staving out all night . . . no more peak sessions with the gang . . . no more . . . no more . . . NO!!!"

"I CAN'T DO IT! I CAN'T DO IT! I TELL YOU! I'LL RUN AWAY TO CHINA OR SUM'FIN! WHERE'S THAT TIMETABLE?"

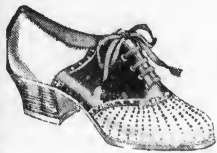

"Heck! Am I a man or a mouse! I'll show 'em who wears the pants in this family . . . boy oh boy . . . I'll write my own set of rules. No. 1. Who's the head of this family? Answer: Me! . . . No. 2. And who pays the bills? Answer: Me! . . . and so far into the night."

Young Small Town Lawyer—Appointed County Chairman—Minute Election

"The County Chairman" which opens Monday at the James Theatre stars "Will Rogers" in his happiest role as George Ade's uproarious small town politician. He wins elections and heart with his crackling wit and homespun americanism. Arm in friendship, but too hot to handle in a fight, yet willing to surrender when it threatens to wreck young love. "The Country Chairman" was a tailor made character for Will Rogers and present day politicians.

The fine cast supporting the great humorist includes Kent Taylor, Evelyn Venable, Mickey Rooney, Louise Dresser, Burton Ouchfield, Stepin Fetchit, the story occurs in a most interesting locale, Wyoming in the early 1900 which is seldom seen out of western adventure yarns. The excitement of a typical election campaign of the period is made double entertaining by the contrast of present day radio electioneering. An old-fashioned torchlight procession on election night is one of the highlights of the show. The fun begins when you come in—See it just for the glorious uproarious sunny fun of it. Eleven hundred people attended our last Will Rogers picture so we suggest you come early for choice seats and election returns. Two shows at 6:45 and 8:30 admission for everyone is only 10c.

To Open Saturday

Senator Alben W. Barkley this week was busy winding up his affairs at Washington after formally opening his campaign for reelection with a rain-drench rally last Saturday at Lexington. Thousands, kept away from the Lexington meeting by frequent cloudbursts during the day, heard the Senator's opening address by radio. He delivered another radio address Sunday night on a nation-wide CBS hook-up, in which he reviewed accomplishments by the Democratic national administration during the 75th Congress. The address was made at the request of the White House.

To return to Washington was necessitated by several matters that demanded Barkley's attention there including his help in securing approval of WPA, PWA and other government projects. On Friday, he will confer with President Roosevelt relative to his trip to Kentucky on July 8.

BARKLEY TO RETURN

Senator Barkley will return to Kentucky on Saturday, June 25, and will deliver three campaign speeches that day. He will speak at 2 p. m. at Elizabethtown, in Hardin county, at 4 p. m. at Upton, in Letcher county, and that night at Middlesboro, in Hart county. He will begin an intensive speaking tour of the entire state next week, but his schedule for the week has not yet been mapped out.

CHANDLER OPENING

With plans for the opening of Governor Chandler's campaign campaign for U. S. Senator in Hopkinsville, Saturday, June 25, virtually completed, that city is making arrangements to entertain the greatest throng in its history. The number now estimated to attend the giant political rally in honor of the Governor runs upward of 40,000 persons and enough free food to feed an army corps will be on hand for the affair. It was stated today by Commissioner Frederick A. Wallis who is in charge of the mammoth mass-meeting.

Special trains from Paducah, Henderson, Owensboro, Louisville and from the Bluegrass section are expected to swell the thousands of visitors who will arrive in motorcars already arranged from more than forty counties. An invitation to the Governor in his official opening address is extended to everyone regardless of race or political affiliation. Commissioner Wallis declared.

FREE LUNCH

The mass-meeting will be an all-day affair and the festivities attendant upon the occasion will begin at 9:30 in the morning when entertainment for the children will be provided. Several bands will give concerts at intervals throughout the day. A free sanitarium-packed lunch and ice-cream and cold drinks will be served to all present in the huge Tiger stadium, scene of the event, at 11:30 o'clock and the speaking pro-

24,154 Pounds of Wool
Received Here Tuesday

24,154 pounds of wool was received at Walton Tuesday according to John C. Bedinger, chairman of the Walton receivers. The price of the wool as announced on the receiving date was 24 cents per pound net to the growers.

The Boone County Wool pool was sold to M. Sable and Sons, Louisville, June 13. The receiving places of the county are Walton, Burlington and Petersburg.

The 1938 wool crop is one of the best ever grown here, officials and buyers stated yesterday.

Strawberry Crop Adds Million to Kentucky IncomeCooperative Marketing
On Increase in State;
Cooperatives Formed

A half-million crates of strawberries added a million dollars to the income of Kentucky farmers this year, according to a survey made by the College of Agriculture at Lexington. Most of the big shipments went to large cities in the north and east, but hundreds of truckloads moved to smaller cities in neighboring states. Ten cooperative associations sold nearly all of the berries. Several of them this year used an inspection service furnished cooperatively by the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station and the United States Department of Agriculture.

Cooperative marketing of wool increased materially in Kentucky this year, with the Kentucky Wool Growers' Association handling 50 percent more wool than in any previous season. Advance payments averaged slightly more than 21½ cents a pound, all grades considered. About 85 percent of the Kentucky wool graded quarter to three-eighths to staple or clothing, and is used largely for knitted garments.

Farmers and business men in several Kentucky communities have successfully developed a cooperative tomato industry which is increasing the income of farmers and at the same time giving employment in canneries. Farmers are increasing their acreages of tomatoes as they become more profitable and many local people are finding part-time work in canneries.

His speech will be broadcast over a nation wide hook-up. Commissioner Wallis will preside.

Boone County A.C.P.
Committees Adjust
1938 Wheat BasesLarge Increase In Boone County Wheat Acreage Is Reported

The Boone County ACP Committees met Tuesday of last week to adjust 1938 wheat bases under the new farm program. Reports show that there has been a large increase in the wheat acreage sown and harvested in the county during the past five years. The wheat crop for the nation as a whole is reported as the largest in the history of the country.

Wheat bases will be set up on all farms that normally sell on the market 100 or more bushels of wheat per year. Most Boone County farms producing more than 100 bushels feed the crop on the farm and do not sell the grain on the market. Benefit payments will be made for acreage reductions on all farms for which wheat bases are set.

The committees will immediately begin work on the general soil depletion crop bases following work on the wheat bases. Every farmer has been requested to submit a report on the 1938 acreage of general soil depletion crops so that the committees may recommend more equitable bases for individual farms.

There is no benefit payment for reduction in general soil depletion crops but there are deductions in other payments if the general bases are exceeded. The committees hope to be able to recommend general bases to take care of the actual needs of all farms this year and especially for those farms on which the acreages grown is in line with bases of previous years.

Breaking; Mills Held

Boone County's usually-deserted County Jail now harbors eight men, the largest number for six years. The eight men, one colored, are awaiting the August term of Circuit Court on various charges ranging from forgery to storehouse breaking according to Boone County officials.

Five men, allegedly connected with a ring of storehouse breakers captured by Kenton County officials and turned over to Boone authorities are held because of failure to secure bond. They are charged with the robbery of Sile's Grocery, Florence and Engle's Grocery, Bullsittville. Those held are John Upton, Vinton Liston, Jack Gardner, Elmer Laddie, and Harold Coleman.

John Wingate, 26, Bellevue, awaiting grand jury action on a forgery charge, Oscar Young, colored, Walton R. R. 2, is charged with molestation.

Jeff Mills, convicted in Boone Circuit court seven years ago for the death of Charley Young, is charged with chicken and meat stealing. Mills served a six year sentence for the Young killing.

According to Elmer Kirkpatrick only one before during his term as jailer has there been more than the present number confined in the county jail. In 1931 there were 14 held.

D. H. Lusby and D. H. Vest, two local fishermen, reported that they caught a number of large carp on a recent fishing trip to Eagle Creek. One of the prize catches tipped the scales at six pounds. Another weighed four and one-half.

BOB AND GENE NINE
NIP VERONIANS 3-1

The Bob and Gene Baseball team behind the seven hit pitching of Bill Goodhue bested a revived Verona nine Sunday at the Crescent Springs park by a three to one count. Carmon, burley Verona moundsman, was the victim of poor support on several occasions. He allowed nine scattered hits and fanned ten men.

The highlight of the contest was the sensational play of Cahill, veteran third-sacker of the Rooters, who grabbed everything that came to the hot corner. Johnny Hartman, playing left field for Verona led his team's attack with two blistering singles.

Bob and Gene will meet the Covington Comets at the Crescent park Sunday afternoon, June 26.

Several Hundred
Sheep Signed; Three Thousand Required

Boone County sheepmen are showing much interest in plans for a County Sheep Protective Association, according to H. R. Foraker, county agent. Several hundred sheep have already been signed up and turned in to O. K. Powers, Verona, temporary treasurer.

At a meeting held in Burlington recently the growers adopted a constitution and by laws for a non-profit protective association combining a mutual insurance plan whereby sheepmen would receive up to eight dollars per head for adult sheep and six dollars per head for lambs killed by dogs during the year.

The payments are made through premiums paid by growers of ten cents per head for adult sheep and one dollar initial fee. Lambs are insured free up to January 1. Registered sheep, according to the plans of the association, may be insured at double the rate by paying twenty cents per head.

Three thousand sheep must be signed up or all money paid in is refunded and the association is not operative for any one year.

The Association forms a mutual plan that should interest every grower. Membership agreements may be secured at the county agent's office in Burlington or from any one of the membership committees.

Committees selected are Orville Kelly, Carrollton; Walter Johnson, Verona; J. W. Conley, Beaver; B. W. Franks, Walton; Ezra Blankenbaker, Union; C. F. Blankenbaker, Florence; Charles Stevens, Petersburg; C. S. Riddell, Hebron; L. D. McClasston, Constance; H. E. White, Burlington, and Lillard Scott, Grant.

Premium checks should be made payable to the Boone County Sheep Growers Association, officials stated.

The Willing Workers Class had their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Ransler Tuesday evening June 21.

Kenton Men Attend Sheep Demonstration

Study of Western Ewes For Kentucky Made

Kenton County farmers from Bracht, Atwood, Oak Island and Fiskburg attended a meeting of sheep growers at the Experiment Station Farm, Lexington, Tuesday, June 14, to study and inspect demonstrations of the different types of western ewes suited to Kentucky conditions.

According to R. C. Miller, sheep specialist and the other speakers, there are three types of western ewes being sold in Kentucky: (1) the speckled-faced western ewe, (2) C, is spending a short vacation with the dark-faced ewes from the northwestern states, which are a cross of Hampshire and Suffolk; and (3) the long-wooled ewe from the southwestern states.

The speckled-faced and black-faced ewes appear to be more suited for Kentucky conditions than the long-wooled ewes from the southwest, the speakers said.

According to the demonstrations and the experiments shown at the meeting the best lambs are obtained from crossing good Southdown rams with western ewes.

Mr. Miller recommended that buyers secure healthy ewes, avoid introduction of diseased animals in flock, and be sure to keep the ewes apart from the remainder of the flock at least ten days to guard against disease.

152,260 Head Of Livestock Handled By Union Yards

Co-Operative Agency Gross Sales For Five Months Is High

Producers Co-Operative Commission, a cooperative livestock selling agency at the Union Stock Yards in Cincinnati, reports that for the five months' business of 1938 they received from their members and patrons, and sold, 12,008 head of cattle, 14,113 calves, 116,567 hogs and 9,574 sheep and lambs—a total of 152,260 head. This livestock has a gross sales value of $3,060,079.12. For the five months' period the cooperative handled 39.91% of the total receipts of marketable livestock coming to the Cincinnati market for sale.

From the office of the association it was announced that in addition to the volume handled on the Cincinnati market, this cooperative handled 24,497 head during the same period, at its branch sales agency on the Dayton, Ohio, Stockyards market, and 27,344 head at their branch agency on the Lexington, Kentucky market.

The association's policy is to receive and handle all livestock on its merits, without discrimination as to kind and source. The association sells livestock from 20,000 farms in the Cincinnati market area, nearly 5,000 farms in the Dayton area and 7,500 farms in the Lexington area. While the principal activity of the Producers is to sell livestock for its members and patrons, it is also a service organization. Assistance is given to livestock producers in the feeding and handling of their stock visiting feedlots and providing reliable, authentic market information on various species of livestock fostering improvements with the various breeds of livestock, such as the breeding, feeding and management side of the business as well as the actual selling of livestock. A great deal of assistance is rendered in securing replacement stock and purebred rams and purebred bulls. Economical improvement in quality is bringing higher net returns for a large number of the cooperative's membership participating in this phase of the program.

Attended the Barkley opening in Lexington last Saturday. . . Huge crowd present despite farmer-weathering setup not so perfect so had to relax in car and listen to address over radio. . . Introduced by John Y. Brown, a great favorite in Lexington. . . Thanks to local democrats who were so generous in inviting me to go. . . Chandler to open in Hopkinsville this Saturday. . . It's a little bit far away but may make arrangements to attend. . . Nothing like the openings. . . Enthusiasm at high pitch. . . high through. . . lots of show. . . lots of supporters.

Mrs. Edna Wilson, a farmer's wife of Ripley, Ocala, has been judged the best country newspaper correspondent of 1938, it was announced recently by Wheeler McMillen, editorial director of the Country Home Magazine, which sponsors the contest.

Mrs. Wilson writes a column of farm and community news for the weekly Gazette in Sullivan. Besides her writing duties, she helps her husband operate their 270 acre dairyfarm. She sums up her journalistic creed briefly: "I am interested in writing the good things about my neighbors and have not written their scandals. The duty of a country correspondent, I think is to tell her neighbors and not to sell it short." . . . We read one of Mrs. Wilson's columns and, tho, far from sensational it holds your attention.

Our Spuria correspondents says: "Artificial lights for rural Gallatin Countians. The electrification project in the county is almost complete. Thanks to three of Kentucky's outstanding congressmen in Washington-Senators Barkley and Logan and Brent Spence, representative."

"Hard work and economy" are the best rules for success in farming, according to Robert Bristow, 21, after the youthful farmer won the title of "Star Farmer of America." His motto, one of long standing, is not to be questioned. . . certainly not. . . and many successful farmers have abided by it. . . Too, many have followed it and have not been successful farmers.

40,000 are expected to attend Governor Chandler's campaign opening in Hopkinsville Saturday, June 25. It should be a real old-time political rally. A publicity report states that a free sanitarily-packed lunch and ice-cream and cold drinks will be served to all present. . . We're expecting Jeff Davis King of Hoboes, and his country-wide following to drift to the rally. . . You don't get meals like that at back doors.

Wallace Eyle, president of the Hamilton Silver Leaders 4-H Club says the 1938 Junior Week was tops. "We learned more in one week than we could have learned at home in two months," the young man says.

AND SO ON: Flash-Xander Meer's last attempt was not a no-hitter. . . A happy boy was little Red Thornton when he snared a five-pound big-mouth bass at the reservoir one evening last week. . . The London Times says there will be a PWA boost for all Kentucky workers. . . WPA officials say "No. . . Progressiveness is synonymous with the Walton Business Men's Association. . . The senatorial race (skillet calling pot black)."

There really are just two auto speeds—lawful and awful.

Boone Poultryman Raises 2,700 Chickens

Grant Maddox, Florence, the largest poultry raiser in Boone County, raised more than 2,700 young birds and the latest and most approved poultry husbandry practices, according to an announcement from the County Agricultural Agent. Two series of brooder houses under the four years rotation, clean grounds, theft proof protection, commercial hatchery and other important poultry features are the reasons given by Mr. Maddox for his success.

BACK-TO-THE-FARM MOVEMENTS CONTINUES

The back-to-the-farm movement continues undiminished according to indications of a special 1938 survey just received by the Louisville District Office of the Department of Commerce. In describing the results, William L. Austin, Director of the Bureau of the Census says that one in every nine of the 3,000 farms enumerated reported persons who had not resided upon a farm five years previously. Farms in selected counties in 40 States were included in the project.

Lesson for June 26

SHARING SERVICE WITH THE LIVING CHRIST

LESSON TEXT—Mark 16:14, 14-16, 16-20.

GOLDEN TEXT—And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them. Mark 16:20.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Work With Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Making a New World With Christ.

ADVANCED PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Making a New World With Christ.

Easter again? No, the calendar does not say so, nor have we forgotten that we observed Easter ten weeks ago, but quite properly we study the resurrection story again today.

Not only does it come in the sequence of our lessons as our first study in the Gospel of Mark, but the fact is that every Sunday is a reminder of Easter. The reason why we worship on the first day of the week is that it is the resurrection day.

What life it would put into our Sunday worship if the glory of the risen Lord would shine forth (as it should) each Lord's Day in all of our service and worship.

It is difficult to think or write about the living Christ without using superlatives. Our lesson for today brings before us the most important truth that the world has ever heard—"He is risen"; it speaks of the worst thing in the world—"unbelief"; and it presents "the world's great commission"—"Go and preach."

I. The Transcendent Truth (vv. 1-8).

"Ye seek Jesus, the Nazarene, who hath been crucified. He is risen. He is not here" (v. 6).

The world anxiously awaits news, and, hoping almost against hope, it longs for good news. This is the good news—the Gospel—the all-important tidings that the Son of God who had taken upon Himself not only the form of man, but the sins of mankind as well, who had tasted the bitter death of Calvary's cross, could not be held of death, but breaking its bands asunder had risen from the dead.

This truth becomes the chief burden of the messages of the disciples as they soon went everywhere proclaiming the Gospel. See the sermons recorded in the Book of Acts (2:24, 32; 3:14, 15; 4:10, 23; 10:40; 13:20). It was such preaching that was at the foundation of the Christian church. It may be that we should emphasize it more.

II. The Impassable Barrier (v. 14).

"He upbraided them with their unbelief and hardness of heart, because they believed not." Many are the sins that men commit, but at the root of them all we find the heart of all sin—unbelief. If a man steals he does not believe God's Word about the sanctity of property, nor does he believe that God is able to care for him. If he kills, he does not believe God's Word concerning the sanctity of human life, nor does he recognize that man is made in the likeness and image of God. And so we might go on and show that back of sins there is the sin of unbelief.

The tragic consequences of unbelief is that it shuts the door, throws up a barrier to God's blessing that is virtually impassable until God himself gives grace to believe. The astonishing thing is that the hardness of heart and lack of faith here were on the part of those who had been the disciples of Jesus, to whom He had made known the fact that He was to die and to rise on the third day, and to whom there had now come the word of eye-witnesses that they had seen the Lord.

While we marvel at their short-sighted unbelief, shall we not ask ourselves what hindrances we have placed in God's way in our own lives?

III. The Supreme Commission (vv. 15, 16, 20).

"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to the whole creation" (v. 15). "And they went forth, and preached, the Lord working with them and confirming the word" (v. 20).

The great commission of Christ is still the "marching orders of the church," but how slowly we have marched. The writer of these notes was recently startled by statistics revealing anew the fact that "Christian" America is rapidly returning to the status of a mission field. It is said that last year 90,000 churches in America had no converts, and 9,000 churches were closed during the year. There are 10,000 villages reported to be without church services, and 30,000 communities without a resident pastor.

The command of Christ is that we should go to these pagan communities in our own land with the gospel, and surely it is our double shame that there are still lands where Christ has never been preached, yet, tribes that do not even have a word in their language for the blessed name—Jesus!

If we will go He will indeed work with us (v. 20) and accompany the message and ministry with divine authority and power. Who will go?

WHEAT AND RYE PRODUCTION TO BE OFF THIS SEASON

Kentucky's crop conditions June 1 indicated a probable production of wheat and rye smaller than in 1937 but larger than the 10 year average; the condition of oats was slightly below that of a year ago but better than the 10-year average; and hay to grasses and clovers.

and pasture were unusually good; according to the crop report for Kentucky issued by the Louisville office of H. F. Bryant, Kentucky Statistician for the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

One hundred and forty Robertson county farmers have ordered 240,000 pounds of superphosphate to apply to the grasses and clovers.

Send A Man To The Senate Who Makes His Promises Good

IT'S UNIQUE

In the annals of Kentucky politics for a public official to make good ALL his campaign promises—but that's what our present Governor, "Happy" Chandler has done.

IT'S UNBELIEVEABLE

That Kentucky has risen, in two brief years, from the bottom of the Sisterhood of States to the top, in the matter of caring for her unfortunates—but that's what "Happy" Chandler has brought about.

IT'S IMPOSSIBLE

To question truth of the statement that more has been done toward giving Kentucky a real State Highway program in the last two years than in all the history of the State before "Happy" Chandler took hold at Frankfort.

IT'S AMAZING

What can be accomplished in public office by a courageous, honest, right-minded young man who has the welfare of the whole people at heart, who works day and night to accomplish his purpose—but the record in Kentucky during the last two years speaks aloud to the world.

IT'S OBVIOUS

That Kentucky and the nation need such a man in the UNITED STATES SENATE.

Barkley Returns To Kentucky After Busy Week In Washington"Future Of New Deal Rest On Campaign," Senator States

Returning to the style of stump speaking that won him fame as one of the nation's foremost campaigners and the name of being an "iron man" among Kentucky political speakers, Senator Alben W. Barkley this week swung into the midst of the fight for re-nomination as United States Senator. He dashed back to Kentucky last Saturday after a busy week at Washington, where arrangements were made for President Roosevelt's visit to Kentucky on July 8. The President may make speeches at Covington, Louisville and Bowling Green. The schedule has not been finally worked out.

Senator Barkley's train got him into Louisville an hour and a half late on Saturday, and enthusiastic crowds at Elizabethtown, Union and Mumfordsburg, cheering him in his assault on Chandler, made him late for all his engagements. He continued on his speaking tour Monday with addresses at Edmonton, Tompkinsville and Bowling Green. His schedule through July 11 follows: June 28—Brownsville 10 a. m., Leitchfield 2 p. m., Hartford 7:30 p. m., June 29—Hawesville 10 a. m., Hardinsburg 2 p. m., Brandenburg 7:30, June 30—Scottsville 1:30 p. m., July 1—Dixon 10 a. m., Providence 4:30 p. m., Madisonville 7:30, July 2—Cassie 10:30 a. m., Mayfield 2:30 p. m., July 4—Shurgis 10 a. m., Central City 1 p. m., Owensboro 3 p. m., July 5—Shepherdsville 1 p. m., Taylorville 3 p. m., Lawrenceburg 8 p. m., July 6—Harrodsburg 2 p. m., Dentonville 7:30 p. m., July 7—New Castle 1 p. m., Bedford 3 p. m., Oaklinton 7:30 p. m., July 8—with President Roosevelt on special train; July 11—Hindman 4 p. m., Jackson 1:30 p. m., Campton 4 p. m., Irvine 7:30 p. m.

In his addresses, Senator Barkley stressed the point that the future of the New Deal administration of President Roosevelt is involved in this campaign.

The real issue is the question of whether I have been loyal to the Democratic Party and to the nation's leader in the White House, President Roosevelt—and whether I have upheld and fought for the great program which has been pushed forward under his leadership.

Mary Berkshire To Head Barkley Group

Mrs. Mary Berkshire, Petersburg, has accepted the chairmanship of the Women's Division of Senator Barkley's Campaign Committee for Boone County. It was announced by Henry Ward, chairman of publicity for the Barkley organization.

Mrs. Berkshire in a statement to the Advertiser Monday said that she intends to organize the women voters of the county this week. "We expect to have a hard-working organization and we have received exceptional cooperation," Mrs. Berkshire stated.

Students Urged To Get Security NumbersVacation Workers
Covered by Act

Students who will work in commerce or industry during the summer vacation should obtain Social Security numbers before seeking employment. This announcement is made by Frank B. Decker, Jr., Manager of the Social Security Field Office in Covington, Kentucky, serving the counties of Boone, Bracken, Pendleton, Campbell, Grant, Gallatin and Kenton. Temporary and part-time work in commerce and industry is covered by Social Security.

Mr. Decker said. He added that many employers now refuse to hire workers until the latter are able to produce a Social Security Account Number Card.

Mr. Decker also advised that persons who have lost their Social Security Account Cards should apply at once for duplicates. The same form that is used in obtaining the original account number cards is used when duplicates are sought. The only difference is that in applying for a duplicate the applicant should state that the original card has been lost or destroyed and should give the name of the place where the original application was filed, and the number originally assigned if it is known, Mr. Decker said.

Twenty-Five Attend
Coke DemonstrationBurned In Ground
Pits at Little Cost

Twenty-five farmers attended a demonstration on burning Petroleum coke giving by Myers G. Lowman successfully demonstrated that Petroleum coke can be burned in ground pits three feet long, one foot wide and one foot deep. No stove or extra equipment were required.

Coke heat, to regulate the cure of high quality tobacco, is a point of much interest among tobacco growers in the county, according to H. R. Forkner, county agent. The two great hold backs to the wide adoption of the new coke curing process has been lack of knowledge on practical use and the expense of coke stoves. Mr. Lowman's demonstration showed that no extra equipment was needed and reported that most farmers had been able to get satisfactory cure with 500 pounds of Petroleum coke per acre which cost at the present time $6.00 per ton at the Latonia Oil Refinery.

More Than 2,000
Beer and Liquor Licenses OutOffenders Subject To $5,000 Fine and Five Years Imprisonment

Department of Revenue officials announced today that 413 retail liquor licenses and approximately 2,000 retail beer licenses had been issued for the fiscal year beginning July 1. It was indicated by the Department of Revenue that several hundred applicants for liquor licenses had been unable to comply with the 1938 Alcoholic Beverage Control Law. A number of these applicants may be able to qualify within the next few weeks, James W. Martin, Commissioner of Revenue, said.

All persons allowed to buy, sell, transport, or otherwise traffic in alcoholic beverages must have a new 1938-39 license posted in their place of business July 1, Mr. Martin announced.

The law provides that any person buying or selling spirits, wine, or beer without a license may be subject to a maximum fine of $5,000 and imprisonment for 5 years. In addition, the license of any distiller, brewer, or wholesaler may be revoked for selling spirits, wine, or beer to an unlicensed wholesaler or retailer, as the case may be.

The law makes it the duty of sheriffs, constables, policemen, and other peace officers to enforce the law and after July 1 the provision of the law forbidding unlicensed liquor and beer dispensaries to display or sell any alcoholic beverages, Martin said.

Mr. James W. Martin, called to the attention of those persons who have been liable for occupational license taxes payable to the county clerk the fact that most, but not all, of these taxes have been repealed. He also cautioned that a penalty is now imposed by statute upon any person now in business who fails to pay his license tax before July 1.

The occupational license taxes payable to the county clerk which have been retained, Martin said, are those on wholesalers and jobbers of cigarettes ($50.00); retail dealers cigarettes ($10.00); restaurants ($10.00); retail dealers in soft drinks and ice cream ($5.00 for each, or $10.00 for both); theatres (20 cents per seat); and bowling alleys and billiard parlors ($30.00 for the first table or alley, and $5.00 for each additional one).

1,417 County Farms Allotted 23,000 AcresAllotment Based On Past Production

The Boone County ACP Committee completed on Monday of this week the adjustment of general soil depleting bases on 1417 farms, according to H. R. Forkner, county agent. The county bases on these crops is 23,800 acres which is divided among the various farms in proportion to past and intended production for 1938.

There is no payment for reduction in general soil depleting crops including corn, wheat, oats, rye, barley, etc., when cut for grain or hay. There is a reduction of $4.00 per acre when the base set for the farm is exceeded. The committees attempted to adjust bases as near as possible on intended 1938 production based on past acreage production history for the farm. Tobacco comes under a special base and is not included in the general soil depleting crop base.

FOLKLORE DOCUMENTS

Frequently some of the indulgent readers of this column ask me how I get the data for my tidbits of folklore. My reply has always been that I lived through the time when these things were going on. Recently I have been re-reading some old diaries of mine that ought to convince even the most skeptical that these experiences are not second-hand. Here are a few extracts from my diaries for the first four months of 1906, just 32 years ago. Put them together in your own way and draw your own conclusions.

January 23—"I whittled out a lot of hickory bark today for toothbrushes."

"Toothbrushes, other than those made of blackgum or hickory, were scarce a third century ago. A hickory bark toothbrush was a very select present for a young blade to give his lady love."

January 26—"I received my January COMFORT today."

COMFORT was a small monthly magazine, published in Augusta, Maine, that many rural people read in those days. It was in it or THE AMERICAN WOMAN, I cannot recall which, that we read ST. ELMO in twenty-two monthly installments, waiting breathlessly from issue to issue. Others read the same thing I am sure, as nearly every year I enroll some one named for the heroine, Edna Earle.

January 30—"This eve we cut and hauled fire white oak and two chestnut telephone poles which are to be used on our new line."

That telephone line was the first one in our neighborhood, the one I have referred to as uniting sections that had formerly been separated by creek bottoms and hills. "Eve," of course, is poetic for evening, the time after noon.

February 7—"According to ancient weather signs there will be more snow, two frosts having fallen on this one and the fire keeps an almost continual noise like one treading on snow."

How seriously I believed this is now impossible to prove. The entries in the next several days fail to show any additional snow.

February 8—"This morning I bottomed a chair with white oak splits my first work of this kind."

I am sure that my first effort was no worse than many another first effort. Anyway, I learned how this work is done and acquired a respect for those who can do it skillfully.

March 20—"This evening I attended three trials in Magistrate's Court. The offense was running horses on public highway."

Talk about being born thirty years too soon! I had seen one of the rash offenders of the majesty of the law, but I was too far away in the field to make a competent witness. A further reading showed that one was proved guilty and fined $10 and costs, the other two acquitted.

April 14—"This eve I went to a log-rolling down in the bottoms on my hand. There were some fifteen hands, and we rolled until 5:30 P. M."

I note that I attended two other log-rollings within two weeks. I could go on for weeks. These small items were set down as the most natural things in the world; now they have begun to have some historical and folk value.

A Fulton county homemaker found that changing her living room paper from a floral to a plain design made an improvement. A purebred sire has been added to the Barrett and Griffith herd in Mason county.

Folk Songs of Jamaica
The folk songs of Jamaica have their origin in the distant past, although a few have a distinctly modern note. "Mango Walk" and "Linstead Heath" may some day become popular in America.

NATIONAL INCOME IN '37
HIGHEST SINCE '29

National income produced in the United States in 1937 recorded a new high for the recovery period at 69.8 billion dollars, exceeding the level of any year since 1929, according to the official estimates of the Department of Commerce, just received by its Louisville District Office. The gain in 1937 in income produced of 6.4 billion dollars marked the fifth consecutive annual increase since the depression low of 40 billion dollars in 1932. Approximately three-fourths of the decline from 1929 to 1932 was recovered by 1937, bringing the total in 1937 to within 11 billion dollars of the 1929 peak of 81 billion dollars.

Lesson for July 3

A CHOICE OF LOYALTIES

LESSON TEXT—Joshua 1:24; 24:14
GOLDEN TEXT—As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord. Joshua 24:18.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Choosing Sides.
JUNIOR TOPIC—A Loyalty Lesson.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Choice of Loyalties.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Man's Highest Allegiance.

"Lives of great men all remind us," according to the poet, that we too may make our lives sublime, and thus leave our footprints in the shifting sands of time. The study of biography is interesting, instructive, and often challenging. When we enter the field of Bible biography we bring into consideration an additional and fundamental factor, namely, the power and grace of God working in and through a surrendered life. All strength of character and ability is a gift of God, but its glory is largely veiled and its usefulness definitely limited, if not actually perverted, because there is no recognition of the foundation of true greatness, which is faith in and loyalty to God.

During the next three months we are to share in the study of the lives of great men and women which will not only stimulate ambitions, but which also reveal what God can do through those who are ready to follow Him.

Moses, God's great leader for Israel, having brought them out of the land of bondage and through the terrible wilderness, is about to leave them. God's workman is about to die, but His work is to go on. God is not taken by surprise.

I. A Prepared Man Takes Command (1:3-6).

"Moses is dead; now therefore arise." Life is like that. "The king is dead; long live the king!" is the cry of those who live under monarchies, as one ruler dies and his successor takes over the throne. Until that day when there shall be "time no longer," men must put away their sorrow and go on. Three words characterize the commission of Joshua—

1. Promise (vv. 2-4). God gave the land to Israel. Every place that Joshua planted his foot upon was to be his possession, even as God has promised Moses. A river lay between them—there were walled and armed cities to be taken; there were even giants in the land, but God promised it to Joshua; and he took it by faith.

God has given us many promises, too. If we are fearful, poverty-stricken, powerless Christians, it is because we do not believe God.

2. Power (v. 5). No man is able to stand against God's servant who is doing God's will, in God's way, in God's time. It was true of Joshua; it is true today. Men set up their opposition to God's plan and program with the assumed belief that because they have position, power, or money, they can readily crush the poor little band of Christian workers. Russia tried it. They even "abolished" God. But religion thrives in Russia, secretly perhaps, but none the less sincerely and successfully. There is no power of man or devil that can defeat the man who does the will of God.

3. Courage (v. 6). To serve God means to be assured of His help. Faith lays hold of that fact and the whole man becomes courageous. But observe that the foundation of courage is faith in God's Word, nurtured by meditation in it "day and night" (v. 7). The house of courage can be built only on that foundation.

II. An Experienced Man Given Counsel (24:14-21).

More than two decades have passed since the appointment of Joshua to lead Israel. God has fulfilled every promise. Israel is in the Promised Land. Before the aged leader dies he calls the leaders of his people together to urge them to continue in the way of faith and loyalty to God. This he does by:

1. Example (v. 15). "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." No man can honestly and effectively call others to devotion to the Lord unless he sets them an example. No one takes any stock in the preacher or leader who says, "Do as I say, not as I do." We are more than signposts; we are guides.

2. Instruction (vv. 16-19). Remembering God's dealings with them, the people declare their determination to serve the Lord. They spoke rather glibly. Joshua instructs them. God is not interested in lip service. He does not need them so much as they need Him. He does not look upon their confession of Him, if they continue to live in sin.

3. Warning (v. 20). God will visit His judgment on His people if they forsake Him and turn away—such is Joshua's warning. We who look back to the history of Israel know that they did forsake Him, and that the judgment of God is still upon them. "Be not deceived; God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap" (Gal. 6:7). Is God's warning through Paul to the Christian.

Kentucky Farmers Take to Curves

Contour strip cropping, in which bands of clean-tilled crops are alternated with strips of meadow, is gaining in popularity as a soil-saving practice. In this view of a field on the Clara Elliott farm, Fendleton county, Ky., bands of bluegrass and timothy slow down the water run-off from corn and tobacco strips.

Winding strips of hay that run at regular intervals across the slope between rows of corn or tobacco are now helping to hold the soil on many Kentucky hillsides. This system of farming, which is known as strip cropping, has recently come into prominence here as a highly effective method of controlling soil erosion.

The alternating bands of meadow crops check the rush of water as it flows downhill from the strips of corn or tobacco. They force it to drop any soil removed from the cultivated land and give it time to penetrate beneath the ground surface.

Every year the crops are rotated from strip to strip in accordance with a soil-building system. Strip planted one year to corn or tobacco are seeded down the following year to small grains or a mixture of legumes and grasses. Eventually every strip benefits from the nitrogen-fixing qualities of leguminous hay plants.

GENERAL ELECTRIC

DeMoisey Radio Shop
Phone 138 — Walton, Ky.

If you are confused by all the conflicting refrigerator claims of "super" saving, "super" speed, "super" service, etc., etc., here are six simple facts worth remembering when you choose your

ELECTRIC REFRIGERATOR

1. The GENERAL ELECTRIC Triple-Thrift REFRIGERATOR is a product of the combined research, engineering skill and manufacturing experience of the world's largest electrical manufacturing company. It is thrifty in price, thrifty in current, thrifty in upkeep.

2. The all-steel refrigerator cabinet, the sealed-in-steel cold-making mechanism, the 5 year performance protection plan all were originated by GENERAL ELECTRIC.

3. Although the sealed-in-steel G-E THRIFT UNIT is now widely imitated it is still years ahead. For G-E's sealed mechanism has long since passed the experimental stage, and is the only one that has been constantly improved for twelve years. OIL COOLING is a GENERAL ELECTRIC development that assures quiet operation, low current cost and long life.

4. GENERAL ELECTRIC has built and sold more refrigerators with the popular sealed type of mechanism than any other manufacturer.

5. The GENERAL ELECTRIC is recommended to you by millions of satisfied users, and has an unparalleled record for enduring economy.

6. GENERAL ELECTRIC new economy models of 1938 climax a smashing 12-year record of ever increasing values (see chart). And this first choice of millions is now popularly priced!

Be cautious of choosing any refrigerator that is too big a bargain. Remember, when you buy a General Electric your money is invested for years—not spent! Starts new G-E "save wave" in your kitchen this week!

County Agents Report Tobacco Diseases in Kenton And Boone

Boone Crop Earlier and Prospects Good Despite Troubles

Tobacco diseases are found affecting many Boone and Kenton county crops according to reports from the county agricultural agents of the two counties. Many calls were received at the offices the past few weeks. Blue Mold, root rot, mole and insect injury are among the chief troubles being encountered the growers.

Despite these troubles the Boone county crop is earlier than usual and most farmers at the present time have splendid prospects for a good crop according to officials reports from the agent's office.

Root Rot probably will be the most lasting of the diseases affecting crops at the present time, the office reports. Root rot can only be controlled through root rot resisting seeds, the best variety of which is Experiment Station No. 16 the offices report.

"Growers would profit by a series of educational meetings in tobacco fields later in the season to study the effects and methods of control of the various diseases affecting tobacco," H. R. Forkner, Boone County farm agent stated.

SANITATION IS BEST COCCIDIOSIS CONTROL

During the summer considerable money is spent for so-called remedies for coccidiosis, one of the most wide-spread diseases of young chickens. Moist, warm weather seems especially favorable to this disease, which causes considerable loss among chicken up to months of age.

While many treatments have been tried for coccidiosis, Dr. J. Holmes Martin of the Kentucky College of Agriculture is of the opinion that none of them is effective. The best way to combat this disease, he declares, is to keep the brooder house dry and practice sanitation. This means frequent cleaning of all feeding and brooding equipment, and the daily changing of the litter during the outbreak.

A well-balanced ration, supplemented with plenty of green feed is important in building up the young bird's resistance to the disease, points out Dr. Martin. Feeding a mash containing 40 percent dried skim milk or buttermilk for several days has been advocated generally as effective in checking an outbreak of coccidiosis in young chicks. However, milk will not cure the disease.

Coccidiosis is recognized by such symptoms as ruffled feathers, pallor, rapid emaciation and bloody droppings. The disease is spread by contamination of feed and water and soil with droppings of fowls which harbor the parasites. The parasite may objects. It also spread by birds being carried down stream by running water, by shoes, grain sacks or other objects. It is also spread by birds or insects which fly from one yard to another. Rats and mice also may serve as carriers of the organism.

WHEN EPIDEMICS OCCUR

One of the well-known manufacturers of drugs and medicines in Germany recently secured considerable publicity in Greece when it was announced that their specially built delivery airplane would arrive at Athens airport, according to a report to the Louisville District Office of the Department of Commerce. The airplane is to be used to convey urgently needed medical preparations to all points on the Continent. The plane is specially designed for the quick transportation of drugs to areas affected by epidemics. It has a capacity for four passengers and about 36,000 pounds of freight. The four-passenger seats may be converted into two beds and the cargo space can accommodate an additional six passengers.

EDITOR'S PRAYER

Blessed are the merchants who advertise, for they have faith in their own business, and their prosperity shall increase manifold. Blessed is the woman who sends in a written account of a party or wedding, for she shall see the details and the names of her guests correctly reported. Blessed are those who do not expect the editor to know everything, but who tell him whenever an interesting event occurs in which they are interested for they shall have a better newspaper in their town. Blessed are they who get their copy in early for they shall occupy a warm spot in the editor's heart. Blessed are they who co-operate with the editor in his efforts in behalf of the community, for their town shall be known to all men, far and wide, as a good place in which to live and do business. Blessed are they who do not think they could run the paper better than the editor runs it—yes, thrice blessed are they, because there are so few of them in the community—W. Kentuckian.

This Week is glad to announce that "Glad Rags" was a great affair. To those that did attend the musical comedy, we say: "Cooperation is the life of a small town." To those that did not attend, we say: "You missed something good. A volunteer fire department is a great thing. Who knows when some Mrs. Murphy's cow may kick a lantern over and start a fire."

The raw Game and Fish Code bill included a new open season on squirrels dating from July first to October 1st. This sets the open season up one month, but limits the period to 123 days. This length of time should give the hunter a reasonable period in which to enjoy his sport. Reports from the Game and Fish Commission say that many complaints have been received to the effect that squirrels are being killed out of season... as bad as a fellow cheating in a game of solitaire.

Far outshowering political activity, baseball games, and weekend vacations was the crop-saving rains which fell last Friday and Saturday. A report says that every official weather forecast from a meteorological office requires the co-operation of at least 100 persons... It only takes one to report these $55 showers.

The recent Daily Vavation Bible School, conducted by Rev. Alfred at the local Baptist church, was a success in every detail. It just shows another worthy thing that can be sponsored in a small town.

Uncle Elben says that everybody makes mistakes, but some folks' peers like dey was tryin' to manufacture 'em as a regular business.

Safe driving this week will permit the sending of the ever-welcome message—"Arrived after pleasant trip."

TO HUNT AGAIN FOR FAMOUS SUNKEN SHIP

A license for salvage operations on the site of the wreck of H. M. S. Lutine, which has lain for approximately 138 years on the shifting sands at the entrance to the Zuider Zee, a gulf of the North Sea extending southward into the Netherlands has just been granted to a company of the Hague by the Committee of Lloyd's, according to a report to the Louisville District Office of the Department of Commerce. Salvage attempts began almost immediately after the vessel was reported lost and during the following two years gold and silver bullion valued at approximately $275,000 was recovered by fishermen and boatmen. The Lutine bell which now hangs in the University Room at Lloyd's, was recovered in 1859 and is generally considered to be one of the best known objects in the world.

LET'S BE ALIVE ON THE FIFTH!

(Editorial)

With that appeal, the State Safety Commission today called upon every citizen and every police officer in the State to unite in a wide campaign to reduce the annual holiday toll, July accident toll. Fed by this annual holiday toll, July accident fatalities year after year surpass those of any other month Major W. H. Hansen, Secretary of the Safety Commission said, and last year totalled 10,200 in the United States.

This figure, Major Hansen pointed out, presents the ironic picture of many more Americans slaughtered annually in celebrating their independence than died in the war that gained it.

The campaign, aimed not only at the holiday toll but at high death totals piled up throughout July and other summer months, is endorsed and supported actively by the following organizations:

National Congress of Parents and Teacher, American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, International Association of Chiefs of Police, General Federation of Women's Clubs, National Society for Prevention of Blindness, International Society for Crippled Children, American Red Cross, National Grange, American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators, Automotive Safety Foundation, American Automobile Association, American Association of State Highway Officials, Institute of Traffic Engineers, the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, Knight of Columbus, B'nai B'rith, the Masonic Order, Knights of Pythias, Elks, Eagles, Moose, Kiwanis International, International Association of Lions Clubs and Optimist International.

Each of these organizations not only has endorsed the campaign, but is asking its members to pledge themselves individually to drive more carefully to exercise caution in swimming and not to use fireworks.

All law enforcement agencies, as well as individual citizens, are asked by the State Safety Commission to wage war on the three major enemies of summer safety—traffic crashes, drownings and fireworks casualties in a resolution titled, "A New Declaration of Independence," the executive committee of the National Safety Council says in part:

"One hundred and sixty-two years ago citizens of the 13 United States declared their independence on the basis of their right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

"Today their descendants celebrate the birth of this independence by wholesale slaughter. In place of life, liberty and happiness we have death, destruction and tragedy.

"The annual Fourth of July toll, shocking as it is, merely signals the opening of a month which year after year leaves strewn behind it a list of dead and injured than any other month. And this year, with a weekend prolonging the holiday, there is no reason to hope for a less bloody toll unless we awake to the danger and put the brakes on our headlong dash into destruction.

"We call on America to cut down this midsummer massacre by signing a new Declaration of Independence—Independence from the annual tribute of ten of thousands of American lives needlessly sacrificed . . . independence from the kind of celebrating that leaves us the dead and the sightless and the suffering.

"We call on all public officials, including governors, mayors, chiefs of police, head of state highway patrols, and on all churches, schools, fraternal and civic organizations and upon every individual in the country to join in this new Declaration of Independence for a new lease on life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Boone Wool Brings Growers $14,000;
57,255 Pounds Sold

Boone County wool growers the past week sold 57,255 pounds of wool through the county pool for total of $13,547.62. The clear wool, consisting of 54,026 pounds, netted growers 24 cents per pound while 3,229 pounds of rejected wool brought growers 18 cents per pound.

M. Sale and sons of Louisville were the successful buyers of the county pool. The clip was delivered by growers at three convenient points as follows—24,055 pounds at Walton on Tuesday, 21,599 pounds at Burlington on Wednesday and 11,603 pounds at Petersburg on Thursday.

Harve L. McGlosson of Burlington, R. F. D. No. 1, was reported the largest producer selling thru the pool this year. He sold 639 pounds of wool. Among other large producers at Burlington and Petersburg were R. B. Huey with 588 pounds and B. C. Gaines with 518 pounds. Records on producers delivering at Walton were not available in the county office at this time.

The wool crop this year weighed light, according to H. E. White, president and Lillard S. Ott, secretary of the county pool. The quality of the wool was reported by the buyer to be extra good with a few exceptions. More growers each year are hiring their sheep shearing done by men using clipping machines. In a number of instances these men had not taken the care in tagging and handling the wool as used in former years. The pool strongly recommends greater care be used in order that all growers may receive a higher price for better quality.

Williamstown To Have New Postoffice Within Next Year, Is Report

Federal Building To Embrace Other Federal Activities of Grant

Funds have been allotted for the acquisition of a site for a Federal building at Williamstown, the only city of its size not having a Government-owned postoffice building. It was announced by Brent Spence, congressman. The new building will be an actuality within one year reports from Washington indicated. The allotment was made after Postoffice and Treasury Department officials made two surveys of conditions at Williamstown at the request of Congressman Spence. The first survey had disclosed that postal receipts of the Grant County seat would not justify the erection of such a building. The second survey, as shown by Spence, justified the project as many other Federal activities would be centered around the building.

QUAIL CROP BEST IN 25 YEARS

Steve Wakefield, field representative for the Division of Game and Fish after taking a survey of two thirds of the counties in the state to check the results of the quail distribution reports this is the best quail hatching season the Commonwealth has enjoyed in years. The indications are that there will be more quail this fall than has been noted for the past 25 years. This is proof, Wakefield stated, that the Division of Game and Fish is right in planting quail in pairs in the spring of the year. Heretofore quails were placed in the fields in covers in the fall of the year at about ten weeks old, but did not show very good results. After experimentation, the Department found that adult quail distributed in pairs in the early spring are better able to take care of themselves; hatch larger number of young and protect them better than was formerly the case with young covers planted in the fall.

Social Security Claims In Local District Is Highest Since Opening

Averaged Payment For May Is $48.09; Last Year's Average $24.00

Claims which are now being certified for payment in the district served by the Covington, Kentucky field office of the Social Security Board have now climbed to the highest individual and collective total since that office opened on September 8, 1937. This statement was made today by Frank B. Decker, Jr., manager in the vicinities of Corbin and Wadsworth Building. His survey of lump sum payments covered the counties of Boone, Kenton, Campbell, Gallatin, Pendleton, Grant and Bracken, which are served by Covington, Kentucky field office.

"Since April 1 of this year we have received notice that a total of 77 claims submitted through our office have been certified for payment," Mr. Decker said. These payments have been increasing steadily in average amount paid to individuals. The average payment for May was $48.09, the high point of our experience.

"The increase in the individual lump sum payment is shown by the fact that in 1937, the full year of operation of the Social Security Act of 1935, the average payment was $24.00. Of the 77 claims certified to our office since April 1 of this year, a total of 37 were filed by persons who had reached the age of 66 years after working in occupations covered by the Social Security Act. In addition 40 claims certified after having been similarly employed."

President Roosevelt To Make Appearance In Kentucky Friday

To Speak at Latonia Race Track at 2:20 P. M. Eastern Time

The campaign for the Democratic United States Senatorial nomination will reach fever heat on Friday of this week when President Franklin D. Roosevelt comes to Kentucky, to speak in behalf of Alben W. Barkley.

The President will make three speeches in the state: at Latonia track Covington, at 2:20 p. m. (EST) at Union station in Louisville at 6:30 p. m. (CST); and at Bowling Green at 8:50 p. m. (CST). Information from Washington is that if Governor A. B. Chandler, Barkley's opponent, meets the President at Covington as he has announced he will, his presence will not interfere with the President's plan to give his personal endorsement to Senator Barkley and to tell Kentucky voters that it is important to the future of his administration and his program that Senator Barkley be returned to the U. S. Senate.

Senator Barkley has three or four speeches scheduled for every day of the week, except on Friday, when he will be with the President on his special train. He put in a full day on July the Fourth, speaking at Sturgis, Central City, Owensboro and Henderson. The next day took him to Shepherdsville, Taylorsville and Lawrenceburg. The schedule for the rest of the week follows: July 6—Harrodsburg, Lancaster and Danville; July 7—LaGrange, New Castle, Bedford, Carrollton; July 9—Hindman, Jackson, Canton, Irvine; July 12—Stanton, Mt. Kentucky Mortgages Are Reduced Due To Expansive Lending Activity

The substantial reduction in mortgage interest rates paid by Kentucky farmers during the past years is due primarily to the influence of the Federal land banks, according to a report made recently by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics and summarized in a statement today from the Farm Credit Administration of Louisville.

The report says that "largely as a result of the increased lending activity of the Federal land bank and Land Bank Commissioner at lower than average rates, the combined average for all lenders in Kentucky, dropped to 5.6 per cent in 1933 and to 5.3 per cent in 1935."

The figures summarize data obtained in a nation-wide study which gathered bank information about farm mortgages and farm real estate transfers. The results of the study in Kentucky are among the first to be published.

"Although all lenders entered into the general reduction in interest rates commencing in 1933, they did so to a smaller degree than the Federal land bank and Land Bank Commissioner," report states. Between 1917 and 1932, the average rates charged in Kentucky by the Federal Land Bank of Louisville were from 1-10 per cent to one per cent below the average of all lenders in every year.

Figures from the files of the Farm Credit Administration of Louisville show that since 1933 millions of dollars of Kentucky farm mortgages have been refinanced at rates of 4 per cent, have been refinanced by the land bank at rates of 5 per cent or lower, dropping to 4.5 per cent in 1936 and 4 per cent since that time. Interest savings to Kentucky farmers in 1937, due to refinancing and temporary reduction of interest rates on land bank and Commissioner loans, aggregated $1,303,000.

Latest census figures show the total mortgage debt owed by Kentucky farmers dropped from $185,000,000 in 1930 to $101,000,000 in 1935. The Federal Land Bank of Louisville and the Land Bank Commissioner at present have about $55,000,000 of loans outstanding in Kentucky, representing about 54 per cent of the total farm mortgage debt in the state.

The report from the Bureau of Agricultural Economics covers newly recorded farm mortgages filed in Kentucky each year from 1917-36 inclusive. During this period, individuals, national and state banks, and insurance companies accounted for the largest percentage of newly recorded farm mortgages in the state.

"From 1917 until 1935, the Federal Land Bank normally accounted for between 1 and 13 per cent of the newly recorded mortgages in Kentucky annually," the report states. "In 1933 new loans of the Federal Land Bank and the Land Bank Commissioner rose to 39 per cent of the total, and in 1934 to 69 per cent, the highest percentage recorded by any one lending group throughout the 19 years during which the land bank had made loans. With the crest of the refinancing wave well passed in 1935, the percentage of total loans made by the Federal Land Bank and the Land Bank Commissioner dropped to 32 per cent and other lending group, individuals, commercial banks and insurance companies accounted for a larger proportion of the new farm-mortgage recordings in Kentucky."

HAPPIEST BIRTHDAY

Among the millions of birthdays occurring each year here and there on the earth's face there is one which is absolutely unique.

It is the Fourth of July.

Unlike the proverbial actress, the United States is proud to give its right age. The more than one hundred and fifty years of existence it can boast having all passed as a democracy, under one type of government and one Constitution. Only the government of England can boast a longer existence. France, Russia, Germany and Japan and the rest have changed their political structures so often that they seem like youngsters compared to us.

But the United States has enjoyed the liberty and justice that came only under democracy for over a century and a half now. Every additional birthday becomes a cause for greater rejoicing, for its help to prove that freedom is the only enduring ideal in a changing world.

It is hard to realize that America has had so many birthdays. Democracy does not show its age. Today when reactionary systems of all kinds are running wild over half the globe, this country of ours seems by contrast younger than ever, for it has the vitality and the strength that goes with youth.

And the Fourth of July—the most important birthday in the world—should be our reminder that democracy is the only way of life and ensures happy birthdays for all of us who live and enjoy our freedom under it.

SOME SURPRISE?

It must have been a source of great surprise for the public to learn that Chairman John Hamilton of the Republican National Committee and Colonel Knox, who with Governor Landon carried Maine and Vermont in '36, did not approve of President Roosevelt's recent fireside talk. There evidently wasn't anything in the newspapers, but it is reasonable to assume that President Hoover feels the same way about it.

Chairman Hamilton takes umbrage at the President's thought that the Republican party "does not recognize the need for government itself to step in and take action to meet these new problems." He also points with pride to the circumstance that the Republican National platform once came out against monopoly.

Apparently, Mr. President Roosevelt would have had to do would have been to reply on the Republicans in the House and Senate to have effected all the New Deal legislation isn't it curious that all the progressive sentiment that Chairman Hamilton has discovered in the Republican party should have been unsuspected for so long a period? Isn't it amazing that the Liberty League which took charge of the Republican campaign of 1936, should have poured out all the money and all the eloquence that was expended in trying to make the country believe that President Roosevelt's program meant only the destruction of American enterprise and the substitution of a reign of communism in the United States?

Farmers in Bath county plowed up their tobacco plant beds and planted them to tomatoes. The Lincoln county sheep breeders' association had a balance of $360 after paying for all sheep killed by dogs.

A Live Wire Briar Hopper

By WILL S. NORRIS, 5822 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

A story about two Indiana ladies captivated and two Kentucky gentlemen, who wooing and married the ladies. The first gentleman was a Boone County friend of mine, an ex-soldier and a widower. I did not get a wife nothing can stop him. I did not know whether he failed in Kentucky but he extended his efforts into Indiana, attending a special party at Knightstown.

How he came to wander that far away from home as that was in the days before automobiles, when it was not so easy to travel, I cannot tell me. How he came to go to Knightstown, he never told me but he did tell me with a great deal of pride how he found, courted and married.

At this party with other gentlemen, they were waiting in the room and the widower said to the gentleman next to him, "Who is that pleasant good looking lady?" The neighbor told him her name. The widower told his friend she is my niece. He often told the story, saying "I never stopped until the wedding bells rang, as widowers are fast workers." She made him a good christian wife, she went to the Great beyond first. He was a lonely man without her after that.

The second gentleman was a world-wide traveling tea salesman, representing large tea companies from all over the world. He told me he had traveled everywhere and seen all kinds of people and met a great many nice ladies.

However, Cupid had never come his way until he was in Evansville, Ind. He went with a party of drummers to a drummer's frolic. They were going too strong for him. He left the party accidentally meeting a friend whom he told, he was looking for better associates. The friend was from Louisville and invited him to a church supper with him where he was introduced to a very good looking lady.

In telling the story, he put very much stress upon the fact she was a blond. Some men, you know are partial to blonds. It is my contention that we cannot all be blonds, but we all can be blond class ladies and gentlemen. I want to remember which, if attractive, will draw people to us. This was the attitude of the blond lady. The drummer said to me, "I never had received such attention, notwithstanding I was traveling man and a stranger. I soon decided from my viewpoints she was a real lady indeed. While I did not court her that night, I did not lose any time until the wedding bells were ringing. He quit traveling and is now a prosperous farmer in Clark County."

While there may have been hundreds of courtships more romantic, the lesson I want to bring out is that, the women should be kind and considerate to men and try to make them better by holding up a good christian moral standard.

In this story, the two women were good christian workers. The last lady met her husband while serving the church. From my viewpoint the ladies should be loyal to the church, for what christianity has done for them as compared to other countries. This reminds me of the infidel husband I knew. When he came to die, he knew his arms around his christian wife and said, "I have been a disbeliever and opposed you as a Christian. My parting words are, to be faithful to your church. I see my great mistake."

It is my viewpoint that every mother, father, daughter and son should be faithful to the church.

Remember this too, that the future of the nation depends upon the good women, their morals and examples with whom they come in contact.

Lesson for July 10

CALEB: LIFE-TIME DEVOTION

LESSON TEXT—Joshua 14:6-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—Let us go up at once, and possess it; for we are well able to overcome it. Numbers 13:30.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Brave Caleb.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Caleb's Brave, INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Hero's Brave.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Courage for Difficult Tasks.

"We need to know more about good men who are occasionally great, and less about great men who are occasionally good," says the Lesson Commentary, in pointing out that Caleb is one of the characters about whom the Bible does say much, and in every case the word is one revealing high and noble character. Consider such passages as Numbers 13:30; 14:7-9, 24, 30; 26:65, as well as our lesson for today.

The background for our study of today, and in fact an integral part of the lesson itself, is the story of Joshua when the spies returned from their visit to Canaan, which is related in Numbers 13. He was then a comparatively young man, but demonstrated by his every word and deed that he had from his youth learned to know and obey God. Note first of all Caleb's

I. Perfect Obedience (vv. 6-8).

"I wholly followed the Lord my God." Such a testimony from a man like Caleb is no idle boast, no effort to parade his faith and piety before others. He was saying it because he was what he said. He was repeating what God and Moses had both said about him. In his heart he knew it to be true.

It is God's will for each of His children that they should come to a place of simple trust and complete obedience that in every circumstance of life they need know only one thing—God's will, and then do it. It is a life of simplicity and powerful in the strength of God Himself.

II. Surety of Inheritance (v. 9).

"Surely the land whereon thy feet have trodden shall be thine inheritance." Such was the promise of God through Moses. Forty-five long years had elapsed since the time when Caleb had clasped his arms around his wife, and he was now standing in the land of Canaan, the promise had lived in God's heart. He knew it would be fulfilled, and he waited serenely for God's time.

Such also are the promises of God which keep the heart singing in our hours of trial and sorrow, which light up the dark ways, which strengthen the heart of His children. Learn God's promises, cherish them in your heart, expect God to fulfill them.

III. Preserved Strength (vv. 10, 11).

"The Lord hath kept me alive and I am . . . strong." Here was a man kept of God, in full vigor in his eighty-fifth year, "like a rock in a changeless sea, like a snow-capped peak in a change of cloud and storm and sun" (Meyer). No doubt there was what our forefathers liked to call "the longevity of the antediluvians," but even apart from that let us recognize that life and strength come from God, and that those who walk with God in holy living may count on Him for the renewed strength of Psalm 103:5.

An incidental, but extremely important, lesson, we should learn is that God has no age deadline. The church has frequently shined against Him and against His faithful servants by "shelving them" for younger men, when they would have brought blessing to themselves and to the church by encouraging and using them. The writer of these lines is a young man, but he would speak here a word of loving admonition regarding his honored brethren who have gone on before to bear the brunt of the battle.

IV. Powerful Assurance (vv. 12-15).

"If . . . the Lord will be with me, then I shall be able." Caleb asked for no easy task. He was ready to go up against the giants of Hebron. Read Deuteronomy 3:11, and you will find that there were men in those days who needed thirteen-foot beds. But Caleb was not afraid. He counted not on his own strength, but on the power of God. It is significant that while the other sections of Canaan were only partially conquered Caleb brought his formidable adversaries entirely under control, so that "the land had rest from war" (v. 15).

The spiritual application to our day is evident and appropriate. There are giants in the land in this year of our Lord 1938. Corruption—social and political—raises its brazen head. Drunkenness and vice leer at us with the impudent suggestion that we cannot control them. There are giants "within us"—greed, selfishness, love of ease, lust, passion, cruelty" (Baile). Are we to do nothing about them? If we are to meet them in the strength of the flesh we might almost as well do nothing. But in the power of God, we are like Caleb—able. In His name we may take up a slogan of today, "Let's do something about it!" and really do it, for His glory.

PASTURE CHANGE GOOD FOR STOCK

Possibilities in promoting the health livestock by frequent change of pasture, is set out in a statement of the department of animal pathology of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station. The continuous use of pastures, lots or ranges for the same species of animal causes the land to become heavily contaminated with various kinds of germs and parasites. Fortunately of the diseases and parasites of animals pass from one species to another. This fact makes it possible to use animal rotation as an aid in controlling diseases and parasites.

WESTERN KENTUCKY LAND IS RESTORED

A 20-acre field at the Western Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station produced 40 bushels of corn to the acre last year, compared to an average yield of 5 to 10 bushels when it came of the part of the experimental farm in 1926. It was treated with limestone and superphosphate in 1927 and seeded to a mixture of clovers and grasses in 1928. Since that time this field had been used as a general pasture, until plowed for the corn crop of last year.

Robertson county farmers have had little loss and rapid growth in their clean-chick program.

Diseases, as I have said before, so many little knots. An old-fashioned blister plaster, in severe cases, can relieve the pain by transferring the "inwards" to the "outwards." But for sheer relief from a misery in the back, give me a porous plaster, designed to produce welts a half-inch high.

Some few people have miseries in the legs. Even charley-horses, the favorite of athletes, are thus named by many old-timers who have not yet caught up with the dictionary. Other miseries are arthritis or rheumatism. Long inactivity through the winter and a heavy meat diet brings strange twinges sometimes. Bathing the legs in some stinging liniment with a nasty smell will give one some exercise and rarely hurt the leg. Sprains are sometimes productive of miseries, which appear according to the weather. A game knee or ankle is often worse than any new-fangled barometer as a prophetic of changing weather conditions. Nothing one would not desire to cure completely such an unfeeling indication of the weather; it might be necessary to buy a barometer or consult more than one patent-medicine almanac.

As I said before, it would not be dignified enough to report to the society column of the daily or weekly newspaper some such items as "Mrs. Samantha McComb, the mother-in-law of our popular banker Mr. George W. Johnson, is confined to her home with misery in her back; Dr. Adam Thompson has applied a porous plaster and thinks that Mrs. McComb will be up and about in another week."

Pressure cookers have been purchased by Boyd county homemakers who have a large canning program. Cloves for both winter and summer, for themselves and their husbands are being made by Fayette county homemakers.

EXPEDITION. He must know, since he's not a fool. You won't last there an hour.

It surprised Gray that he did not resent her impulsive entrance into his affairs. Indeed, the distress of the girl sent a warm glow through him.

"Sorely Howard may be a bad man," he told her quietly. "But I'm leaving a hostage here at the ranch. He don't hurt me if he thinks your father would realize on his son."

"I don't know anything about that," she cried wildly. "Maybe some of his men would shoot you without waiting to ask him. Can't you see how dangerous it is?"

"Most things aren't dangerous if you walk straight up to them," he explained. "It's when you run away from them they get you."

"Father will let you have some of his men as a guard," she insisted.

"That will be fine. By and by I'll need them, but not yet."

"You haven't any right to throw your father away. Haven't you a mother—or sisters?"

"No. I'm a lone wolf."

"There must be a woman somewhere who cares."

He flung away discretion and caught her in his arms. "I wonder about that," he said, and looked into her deep, lustrous eyes.

They told him, planter far than words, that she was sealed to him for all time.

He kissed her lips, pushed her away abruptly, and strode out of the room.

CHAPTER XII

"Now why did I do that?" Gray asked himself reproachfully as he rode to town. Here he's watched my step all these years so as not to get tied up with a girl, and then I go to acting like a kid because she is pretty as a painted wagon and is made to be loved. I don't aim to get married. I'm a lone wolf and I figure on traveling alone. So there you are, what more nonsense from you, Jeff Gray?

It was all very well to decide this, but it was quite another thing to banish Ruth. From his mind.

As he drew nearer Tail Holt, he brought his attention back strictly to the business of the hour. While he was in the ball of the enemy there were many things to be done. He had to survive he would have to keep his senses focused upon the immediate present.

It was growing dark, but there was still too much light for his purpose. He drew aside from the road and guided his horse through the mesquite and the prickly pears under the stars.

Here he rested until stars began to prick through the sky roof. He remounted, but did not return to the road. Winding in and out among the brush, he came to a barbed-wire fence and followed it to a gate. Through this he passed and rode on beneath the pines.

He looked at Gray. The narrowed eyes of the detective were like half-scabbed steel. In them shone a cold, fierce warning. His body was crouched, the tense muscles waiting.

"Don't start anything," Curly warned, a rasp to his low command.

"Better tell yore friends that," Gray said, almost in a murmur, his gaze fixed on the panel.

A fat thumped on a panel. "Do we get in—or don't we?" a cheerful voice demanded. "What's the idea of bolting us out, unless—"

Through the door came a jovial chuckle.

"Who's with you, Mile High?" Curly asked.

"Sorely Howard. Let us in, fellows, and give us a knockdown to bed."

"Might as well let them in," Gray said quietly.

"All right, but don't you go reaching for yore gun. I'll be watching you every minute."

Gray rode softly to the door and drew back the bolt, then stepped across to a lamp.

"Come in," Curly said.

Howard waddled in, Mile High at his heels. They stared blankly at Gray. The fingers of Mile High's right hand closed spasmodically, but his arm did not move toward the weapon at his side. It was not time for that yet. Gray was not drawn a gun.

"Keep yore shirs on, boys," Curly snapped. "I don't aim for you to have any Fourth of July in here. One of his hands was under the sheet."

The narrowed eyes of Howard shifted to the side of the bed. "What does this mean, Curly? Yee screaming in with this spy?"

"To Tail Holt Tuesday," he said in the singsong voice of an uneducated man reading from a newspaper. "The boys were certainly glad to see him and gave him a warm welcome. The obsequies will be at Boot Hill this afternoon."

"Which one of the boys are you referring to?" Gray asked.

"I wouldn't know who else beside you," Curly answered. "You're a cool customer, Jeff. Don't you know this town is mighty unhealthy for you?"

"It doesn't seem to have been healthy for you either, Curly. How's yore wound getting along?"

"Fine and dandy. Morg was in some hurry when he handed me this pill, and didn't plant it where he wanted."

"He sent one to my address, too, a few days earlier, but I wasn't where he mailed it."

"How come you to let the rattle-snake get away when you had him under yore heel?" Curly asked him.

Gray told him the circumstances. The wounded man meditated over the strange ways of women.

"Funny the way they act," he said. "All day she had been scared to death of the hell-bound, don't you reckon? Yet she butts in and prevents you from killing him."

"Yes. She couldn't stand any more bloodshed."

"He didn't harm her any, did he?"

"No." Gray asked a question. "Know where Norris is, Curly?"

"I'm not looking for trouble. Come on, Mile High. We'll go where we're welcome. I'm disappointed in Curly."

His manner of reproachful resignation annoyed the wounded man. "Don't pull that line, Sorely. You knew all along where I stood about these hoodlums. I stayed out of them, and I'm still going to keep my hands off them."

"There's no back to pass, Curly, and if there was you ought to know me better than that," Howard said, shaking his head sadly, a picture of a good man misunderstood. "Let's go, Mile High."

He reached for the doorknob. "Wait a moment, Howard," interrupted the crook-necked man. "Get this right. I'm here on a little visit, and yore son Lou is at the L. C. on one. Think that over carefully."

The fat hand of Sorely Howard made a gesture repudiating and lawless intent. "I'm not lookin' for trouble," he said again mildly.

But for an instant, before he vanished from sight, the curtain lifted in front of the blank eyes, and show a venomous glare behind which the lust of murder lay crouched.

Gray laughed mockingly. "Too bad to misjudge such a fine upstanding citizen."

Curly did not laugh. "Fellow, you're in a tight," he said acidly. "Don't let me hear of a minute."

"He's not a fool," a minute, the officer replied. "Mr. Howard means to blast me soon as he is safe."

Gray said good-by to Curly and walked out of the room. He tipped down the same back stairway.

The man circled the house, up which he had come a short time earlier. Slipping round the house, he crossed the road to the cottonwood grove opposite. At the other side of the clump of trees was a path which led back to a small adobe house built on the edge of a creek. Through a window he saw a man in his stocking feet sitting at a table reading a newspaper. The man was outside the house, and a heavy-set, tough-looking customer whose arm muscles bulged beneath the shirt-sleeves.

Gray was in the saddle. He was not dry, a heavy-set, tough-looking customer whose arm muscles bulged beneath the shirt-sleeves.

"Evening, Hank," he said a moment later, smiling at the blacksmith. "Can I stay with you for a while?"

Ransom stared at him in surprise. "Lord love us, what did you blow from?" the old soldier asked. "Come in and rest your weary bones."

Gray walked in and closed the door. "I came from having a talk with Sorely Howard, Mile High, and Curly," he said.

"And they didn't shoot you into a rag doll?" Man, don't you know Tail Holt is plain poison for you?"

"I don't know. Sorely doesn't want any trouble, but he claims I got where you leave your horse."

"In Mack Willard's pasture?"

"I'd better risk it and turn it loose outside of town. They won't know you haven't left town."

Gray told him where he had left the saddle, and Ransom left to recover it and free the horse.

"No, Sorely. He says he dropped in to ask me where Sorely and don't make any more cracks like that. There's dynamite in them. It's liable to go off and blow someone up. It might be you," Curly spoke softly, but his mouth was a thin straight line not reassuring.

"Don't get on the prod, Curly," answered Howard crustily. "When I see you look in a room with this fellow who is here trying to make a fool of me, I'm entitled to ask questions."

"Sure, but ask 'em gentle, Sorely."

The link croupcher flung out abrupt inquiries. "When did this bird come to town, Curly? What's he doing here? I'll say he can't get away with any such shenanigans. He tipped off Lee Chiswick about the Live Oak business, and he can't tell me anything different."

"Blame yourself and Sorely and Morg for that, Mile High," said Curly. "You rode out asking for trouble."

The black eyes of Howard rested on the marshal. Nothing to do. Curly. The boys were attacked by these smugglers while riding peacefully through the canyon. I don't know whether Lee Chiswick intended that or not, but he was right there to cut off the retreat of our friends.

Looks to me like he was in with the smugglers to fix up the ambush. This fellow Gray too. We don't know a thing about him even now. He has led about himself and abused our kindness from the start. But we're not looking for trouble. Come on, Mile High. We'll go where we're welcome. I'm disappointed in Curly."

WHEAT MAKES WINTER PASTURE

How wheat made excellent pasture on the farm of John Cushmanberry in Allen county is related by County Agent C. S. Bell. In late August 2½ acres were sowed at the rate of a bushel and a half to the acre. By early November the field was ready for hogs, and it furnished green feed for 30 head throughout the winter. Toward spring it was necessary to turn in sheep to keep the wheat down. Mr. Cushmanberry estimated that the wheat saved about 20 per cent of the food cost for the hogs.

DRIVERS LICENSE

Frankfort—The new system of licensing Kentucky drivers, set up by the legislature this year, will be put into operation about July 1, the Department of Revenue announced today. The new safety measure is technically in effect now, spokesmen for the Department explained, since the law took effect June 1st but as far as the public is concerned, operation will start with the renewal of old licenses.

All 1937-38 drivers' license expire August. Those operators who now hold them, and who apply for new one before August 1, will go through a much simpler routine than in previous years, officials of the Department said. They will merely go to the Circuit Court Clerk sign a simple statement that the information given in the original application made a year ago still holds good, pay the fee of a dollar, and exchange the old license for a new one. Circuit Court clerks should be ready to receive renewal applications by July 1.

Drivers who put off getting new licenses now, will be handled like new drivers. The Circuit Court clerks will ask them to fill out a complete application form and, upon payment of the fee, they will be given a temporary receipt. Their application will be sent to the Department at Frankfort for checking the receipt, examining them to drive in the meantime. Licensees then will go directly to the applicant by mail.

As part of the modernization of the licensing procedure, the Department announced it will assign a permanent identifying license number to each driver. This will appear on the new permit cards and will be the same as that on the 1937-38 license for drivers who renew. Members of the Department explained this will enable them to check more closely upon the driving career of each licensee in addition to cutting down the cost of handling records. Another part of the new system is a change of color each year. The 1938-39 renewals and new licenses will be blue.

According to the Department's announcement, the changes in Kentucky's license act bring it into closer conformance with the type recommended by the National Safety Council and other leading safety agencies. Among bordering states which have similar laws, are Indiana, Virginia and Tennessee.

KENTON FARM NOTES

For the best results during the summer months keep the birds comfortable. 1. Provide shade if there is none on the ground used by the birds. Old feed bags stretched over a framework of poles or lumber will do the work.

2. Keep clean fresh water before the birds at all times. More water is necessary for growth and production than is required to merely keep life in the body.

3. Feed (1) the young stock to keep it growing, and (2) the hens for summer egg production. Sell both young and old birds if you are convinced that they are not worth feeding well.

4. Mites and lice may get the jump on you if you are not careful. Keep on the watch for both. Bird may be dipped in summer to control lice. One pound of sodium fluoride to 10 gallons of warm water will be enough for dipping 150 hens but most poultrymen prefer to use 40 percent nicotine sulphate on the roosts, silt or spray the roost, nest, etc., with used engine oil (crankcase drainings) thinned with kerosene to eradicate mites.

OTHER POINTS TO REMEMBER:

1. Botulism (limberneck) time is here. Don't allow the birds to eat spoiled feed or dead animals. If any outbreak of limberneck occurs confine the chickens until the cause is found and removed.

2. Now is the time to vaccinate the young stock for pox. A severe outbreak of pox in November or December cost more than you would spend for vaccinating your birds for many years. Use chicken pox vaccine (not the mixed avian bacterin). Consult your county agent; ask him for Extension Circular 244, "Chicken Pox."

3. Cull out and sell the early molting hens.

4. Gather the eggs often and store them in the coolest available place until they are marketed. Get the animal heat out of a fresh egg quickly and preserve its quality.

COURAGE

Opponents of Governor Chandler say he is ambitious. Since when is ambition a grievous fault? Would that the youth of today had more of it! Governor Chandler is one of the most courageous men I ever met. It took courage to pass the ice cream tax on retail merchants who helped put him in office. When I heard about it, I went to Frankfort and twenty minutes he listened patiently while I gave him a piece of my mind. After I had finished he said "J. B., I am no magician. I have to have money to run this government, and I promised to repeal the general sales tax and I did, and I have not yet set up my whiskey and cigarette tax. I do not know how much I will need when I do, I will repeal the nuisance tax.

Delegations went to Frankfort, the Newspapers protested, court proceedings were instituted, but he did not turn a hair until the need for the tax had passed. A less courageous soul would have been intimidated and turned to some other source, and the splendid record he has made would have passed into the limbo of what it might have been.

Again, when he supported Mr. Beckham instead of John Young Brown, I was outraged and supported John Young Brown with everything I had. After it was all over, I learned the facts. After Governor Beckham had retired, he supported Governor Chandler, not only with lip service, but with hard cash, and after making a few speeches he became embued with the desire to run again and did much to Governor Chandler's surprise and consternation. Governor Chandler owed John Young Brown lip service and Mr. Beckham a debt in cold cash. With the courage that he has always shown, he supported the greater obligation.

Well do I remember the hectic scene at the Phoenix Hotel in Lexington where all the powerful political figures of the Blue Grass were threatening Governor Chandler with dire punishment if he moved the asylum from Lexington. Governor Chandler made one tour of the vermin ridden premises of Lexington, and that great heart of his saw only one path to pursue, and as a result, that hospital is out in the country, is light and airy and sanitary, and a fitting habitation where men made in the image of God might care for their less fortunate brothers.

Again, after these hospitals were built, he discovered that the attendants of these unfortunate people were not trained nurses or medics, but held their jobs through political pull. On the eve of his Senatorial race, he called a special session of the Legislature, ousted the politicians, and replaced them with trained attendants and competent physicians, who with sympathy and understanding along with medicine, that every ailing mind in their care may have a chance to right itself. Again, on the eve of the election, he closed the saloons on Sunday, that the peaceful message of the Church bells may once again be heard above the horking of horns, the roar of exhausts, and the grinding of brakes. And now, he is waiting the "GO" sign. That little "X" beside Governor Chandler's name on election day, is your mark of approval of the greatest Governor that Kentucky has ever had.

Do You Know---

THAT Kentucky is admittedly the best governed state in the Union.

THAT Kentucky farmers have the lowest state land taxes, lowest farm truck licenses, best rural highways, best school per capita, and best farm legislation in Kentucky history?

THAT labor disputes are at a minimum in Kentucky because A. B. Chandler is for the labor?

THAT A. B. Chandler has stood by and fought for the FARMER, LABORER, BUSINESS MAN, MERCHANT, VETERAN, AGED, NEEDY and all of the people of Kentucky?

THAT the payment of the state debt, the balancing of the budget, the building of new institutions

THAT A. B. Chandler made all of this possible along with the care of all other states? AND hospitals, roads and still living within the State's income being responsible for hundreds of others state improvements?

THAT A. B. Chandler has never discriminated against any group or straddled any legislation?

THAT A. B. Chandler has kept ALL of his promises?

LET MY CONCIENCE BE YOUR GUIDE

If you were "shopping for eye glasses" you would be on your guard to see that "nothing was put over on you," but, with the greatest caution and suspicion, you have no means of measuring the value in such matters. What yard-sticks could you put on the value of a pair of glasses? Looks mean much if you are thinking of appearance but the looks of a pair of glasses might be utterly deceiving. Quality in optometry, is a matter of conscience—my conscience. The value of my services to you is not measurable in terms of merchandise, but only in terms of the benefit conferred. So I give you this pledge: in my office you will receive the same faithful and conscientious care as if the work was being done for my own sight. You have nothing to trust, except my character and ability. All the rest you must take for granted, no matter where you go. So, I, understanding your situation, make this pledge to you voluntarily; nothing but the finest materials, nothing but the most scrupulous care in all details entering into your work will be tolerated in my office. My conscience shall be your safeguard. That is an essential part of my professional record, essential to your efficiency.

Baptist Assembly At Clear Creek

Visitors to the Clear Creek Mountain Springs Assembly, to be held at the Baptist resort near here August 8 to 18, will mix their religious activities with plenty of sightseeing in the Cumberland Mountains, the Rev. Dr. L. C. Kelley, head of the encampment, said Wednesday. "This year's assembly will be a vacation for all who attend," Dr. Kelley declared.

"Clear Creek Springs is one of the most beautiful spots in the state," Dr. Kelley said in calling attention to this year's meeting which will draw hundreds of Baptists here from all parts of Kentucky and speakers from all parts of the nation. "We want to make this year's assembly a real vacation and for that reason we're calling attention to the points of scenic interest in the mountains. Laurel Cove, in Pine Mountain Park where the Laurel Festival is held each year, is quite near. The Pine-nacle, where you can stand in three different states at the same time, is only a short distance away.

"In less than two hours you can drive to Cumberland Falls, now a state park, and one of America's outstanding beauty spots. Kentucky Ridge Forest adjoins our reservation and there you can see the "living stairway," "lookout point," "fern Cove" "look tower" and other places of interest. If you do not have your own car arrangements can be made for you to see the wonders of Kentucky Ridge Forest, now a federal project with seven miles of scenic roads and many more miles of beautiful trails, through aid of forest officials.

Speakers on this year's assembly program include Chester Swor Jackson, Miss. who will have charge of the sunrise prayer services; Dr. T. D. Brown, Louisville; Dr. J. T. McNew, Nashville, Tenn.; Dr. T. E. West, Williamsburg; J. D. Reynolds representative of J. Edgar Hoover who will talk on the work of the G-Men; Dr. T. L. Holcomb, of Nashville, Tenn.; Dr. C. J. Allen, Nashville, Tenn.; Mr. and Mrs. W. Earl Robinson, of Owensboro, will direct musical activities of the encampment again this year.

Sunday school work, mission study and church work will divide time during the two weeks of the encampment, Dr. Kelley said. The regular encampment will be preceded by the state Young Woman's Auxiliary meeting, which will run from August 1 to 6, Dr. Kelley said.

Tenant Farmers To Be Benefitted

Kentucky will have a 250 percent in funds for tenant purchase loans to help tenants become owners, for the new fiscal year beginning July 1, according to allotment figures received here by Earl Mayhew, Director of the Farm Security Administration.

Mr. Mayhew has been advised by Regional FSA Director George S. Mitchell, Raleigh, N. C. that $335,156 has been allotted to this state as compared with $334,000 for the fiscal year ending Thursday.

The funds are this state's share of nearly $4,000,000 allocated to this 5-state region from the $25,000,000 appropriated for this purpose by the last Congress. The distribution by regions and by states was determined by the Secretary of Agriculture on the basis of farm population and prevalence of tenancy, Mayhew said. For economy in administration, tenant purchase loans this year have been limited to 11 counties in this state where it was considered good farms could be had at fair cost and where a high degree of tenancy was found. The program now will be expanded into additional counties on the same basis, Mayhew said adding that the opening of applications for these loans will be announced later through the press by County FSA Supervisors. The farm tenant program is being carried on along with FSA's regular rehabilitation program, by the Farm Security Administration, in co-operation with a state FSA advisory committee; and applications for these loans are passed upon in the counties by a county committee of three farmers who certify as to applicants' character and ability to own and manage a farm. Mr. Halton pointed out.

Plutary Gland Controls Height

Your height is determined by the activity of your plutary gland. This is an acorn-shaped gland which lies in the brain. It works in unison with your other glands, and pears its secretion directly into your blood stream. It not only controls your height, but it also increases the force of your heart-beats and blood pressure. If this gland is not secreting normally—in other words, if it is diseased—a condition either of hyper-plutary, or of hypo-plutary results. Hyper-plutary, says a writer in Pearson's London Weekly, means overgrowth—the seven or eight-foot man or woman. Hypo-plutary means the dwarf—the three or four-foot man or woman.

Summer-Time Is Salad-Time

By BEULAH V. GILLASPIE
Director, Sealtest Laboratory Kitchen

YOUR salad can be practically a "meal in itself," yet refreshing, light and nourishing. And, now is the season to give the family or guests salads at practically every luncheon, dinner or supper. Cottage cheese is such a perfectly apt to vegetables, fruits, lettuce or greens. Here's a combination your guests will adore!

LUNCHEON SALAD WITH COTTAGE CHEESE CRISPS

6 tomatoes 1 cup cottage
Lettuce or other greens Mayonnaise

Peel tomatoes and cut through the centers in fifths, leaving an uncut portion at the base so that the sections may be spread apart but will remain attached. Place tomatoes on lettuce arranged on a large platter and fill the centers with cottage cheese. Serve with mayonnaise or French dressing, and Cheese Crisps made as follows:

1 cup flour 6 tablespoons
1/4 teaspoon salt butter
1/4 teaspoon bak- 1/4 cup cottage ing powder cheese
1 teaspoon 1 tablespoon celery seed milk

Paprika

Mix and sift the flour, salt and baking powder and stir in the celery seed. Work in the butter with the fingers or cut in with 2 knives. Combine the cottage cheese and milk and add to the first mixture, stirring in quickly. Turn out on floured board and roll out to 1/4 inch thickness. Cut with a floured knife into strips 1/4 inch wide and 4 inches long. Place on a baking sheet, brush with milk or cream and sprinkle with paprika. Bake in a hot oven (425° F.) for 10 to 12 minutes or until a delicate brown. This recipe will make 35 to 40 crisps.

One on us: In the last issue of the Advertiser—due to a misplacement of parts of two ads—our attention was drawn to the following:—WALTON SERVICE STATION, A GOOD PLACE TO FISH WHERE THERE ARE BIG ONES and Where They Are Being Caught. We're sorry for the error but the SERVICE STATION DIDN'T condemn us, as good people don't... and as for the fish—well everyone knows where they are.

"I conceive the first duty of Government is to protect the economic welfare of all the people, in all sections and in all groups."—President Roosevelt.

"Crime? It took a post-graduate course. As a sophomore in 1920, it was a bootlegger. As a junior in 1924, it was his jacket and a racketeer. As a senior in 1928, it was a bank robber and a wholesale killer. It wound up as a kidnapper, doing post-graduate work in 1932."

"I'll bet that in the scores of years that 'Loch Lomond' and 'Coming Through the Rye' have been battling around, they've been swung by their own people in a way that would make Tommy Dorsey's arrangements look like something Bash wrote for the well-tempered clavi-chord."

While speaking of music, I want to congratulate the Young Men's Democratic Club on the music they secured for the mid-summer hop. The floor show was rather Ritz too.

A Sudden Shock: When the news of the death of Marvin "Jack" Rouse reached me, I was completely bewildered. A young gentleman without enemies and with multitudes of friends, and admiring personality, and an humor genuine and entertaining at all times. He was drowned in the Ohio River Tuesday evening of last week. May I extend my sympathies to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Otis Rouse.

The cartoon: Just Another Piece of Paper referring to politics, noon. Freedom the press don't mean much to Bud Westover, veteran editor of the Grant County News, or to the editor of the Hardin County Enterprise. Westover, a Barkley advocate writes nothing but Barkley. His paper contains the identical advertising used by J. B. Miller, a former Chandler enemy—and now friend, which lambasted the Governor during the former races. It put Miller in a bad spot.

The Hardin County Enterprise turned their head on the cartoon by not giving Barkley's recent speech in Elizabethtown but one column inch with a small head on page five of their eight-page sheet. Maybe both editors are independently rich.

!!!!-ix that's about all we receive concerning the election. One side says it about our leaning to the other side. The others duplicate that action... and then both sides say the same thing because we don't take either side. We still just sit here and take no sides. It's fun, if you know what journalistic fun is.

Poverty is no disgrace. But neither is the rheumatism and a lot of disagreeableness.

Where had you rather spend the Fourth of July... at home amidst the 'Bang! Bang!' or in the middle of a two hundred acre woods? I'll take the latter, but I didn't.

A sudden thought of some hard work that I'd like to do: Fill out an income tax report.

"Kentucky Out of the Red. No wonder that other states are studying Kentucky's tax laws, her Reorganization Act and the many features of great program of accomplishment."

Kentuckians need no longer speak of past glories and departed statesmen, but can say:

This the day I long have sought

And wept because I found it not."

From the "WORLD-TELEGRAM" a New York Daily Newspaper . . .

"There is a hot senatorial race in old Kentucky. However, if Governor "Happy" Chandler comes to Washington, he'll be a social outcast, as he is the only politician that ever kept all his promises."

A Candidate for Governor of a Southern State is Quoted as Saying From Every Platform!

"Nominate and elect me governor of this state and I'll give you the same kind of government they now enjoy in Kentucky, which is at present the best governed state in the union."

All the above statements are exceedingly complimentary to Gov. A. B. Chandler who, the indications are, will be the next U. S. Senator from Kentucky.

$60,890 Available For Boone Farmers

According to Word Received by County Agent

Sixty thousand eight hundred and ninety dollars are available to Boone County farmers for carrying out soil building practices under the 1938 Agricultural Conservation Program according to County Agent H. R. Forkner. Proportionate allowances are set up for each farm and the allowance can be secured only by carrying out soil building practices such as seeding grasses, legumes use of lime, phosphate, etc.

The Boone County ACP committee held a meeting at Burlington on Tuesday of this week to discuss ways and means of earning 100 per cent of the allowance set up for the county. Farmers last year lost $15,599.00 through failure to take full advantage of the allowance set up for the county.

The committee plan to visit individual farmers who at the present time have earned very little of allowance.

Lime and phosphate are the two of earning the allowance. Farmers will receive $1.50 per ton on agricultural use and $1.50 per hundred pounds of 47 per cent phosphate or its equivalent used.

A number of local dealers will deliver limestone to the farm for $2.00 per ton. Phosphate at the present time is advanced by the AAA through the county office. Farmers desiring phosphate should file application immediately as the available supply is being rapidly exhausted. Credit to carry out soil building practices can be made available.

There is a way for every farmer to carry on 100 per cent of his allowance this year provided he begins work immediately.

The first flower to be put on at the State Fair by the Homemakers' Federation of Kentucky will be on display Sept. 15 through Sept. 17, with more than 600 homemakers having announced their intention of participating.

This exhibit is the outgrowth of work home beautification started six years ago in Jefferson county by Mrs. Catherine Johnson, county home demonstration agent with aid of the N. R. Elliott, landscape specialist for the Kentucky College of Agriculture. The first show was held three years ago in connection with the annual picnic of the Park Bureau, 4-H clubs and homemakers' clubs. This year the homemaker appealed to the State Fair board to assign them space and a premium list.

This show and contest may be entered by any homemaker's club as a club or by individual member of clubs throughout the state.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Poole and family were visiting Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Poole and family of Burlington.

Kentucky Homemakers Attend District Camps

Kentucky homemakers recently attended district camps at 424 strong for a week they euphorically called devoted to "recreation, rest and habilitation," as many of them took their first vacation in years. The camps were held at Quicksand, Elkhorn, Columbus and Franklin.

The weaving or handicraft program put on by Mrs. Gertrude Scott Sanford, Chapel Hill, N. C., recreation specialist, attracted the greatest attention, according to Miss Myrtle Welch, state leader of county home demonstration agents for the College of Agriculture. They also learned something of music, games, use of leisure time, dramatic sets presentation, development and use of leadership in recreation in small communities, etc.

County camps were also held in Fayette and Bourbon counties in addition to the five district camps.

BAGWORMS AND RED SPIDERS INJURIOUS TO EVERGREENS

Bagworms and red spiders seem to be doing particular injury to evergreens and other plants at this season, according to complaints received by the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station.

It may be practical to hand-pick the bagworms from smaller trees carrying away and burning the bags. The most effective control against general infestation of larger trees by bagworms is spraying with arsenate of lead at the rate of one-half pound to 2 gallons of water, applied as soon as the worms are noticed. Sprays should be used on evergreens only when the temperature is below 85 degrees, as otherwise the trees may be injured.

The red spider feeds on nearly 200 kinds of plants, especially alfalfa rather than entirely cure it. One method often tried is frequent syringing or spraying of the plants with a stream of clear water. This is applied with force enough to tear up the webs of the spiders. Sprays should be used on alfalfa to knock them to the ground. As water is not always practical. Dusting often also may injure some plants with superfine sulfur is of value. Sulfur should be used on wettable sulfur mixed according to the manufacturer's directions is also recommended as giving a satisfactory check.

John Lewis Coyte attended Sunday School and services at South Park, Sunday night, accompanied by Samuel B. Morgan.

AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

OUR PRICELESS HERITAGE

All too often in this busy world the few really important things are neglected. To us in America our most priceless possession is taken for granted. It is, as everyone knows when he pauses to think, the right of freedom of speech, freedom of the press and freedom of the individual action.

But has it ever been that distant pastures seem the greenest. And for the same reason there are always those among us who forget that the greatest privilege in the world today is to be an American citizen. They overlook that other people would pay money for this privilege which they received at birth. And having overlooked all this, some people think that the government in other lands are better than our own government. To them our institutions are outmoded. They are constantly proposing some change.

But perhaps the best answer ever given to one of these Ism Groups was given straight from the shoulder the other day from a speaker's platform. The speaker was defending one of the greatest organizations in America from a scolding attack which questioned its security of purpose.

In the midst of this defense the audience hissed. But in a moment the jeers were turned to ringing applause. For the speaker said:

"The only right you have to hiss me is because this is a free and untrammelled democracy. If the principles of some of these professors were to be adopted, you could not hiss me and I could not talk like this."

In those two sentences, the speaker had removed the foundation from all the Ismism in the world, except the "Americanism" of freedom of individual.

"HOODWINKING THE PUBLIC"

The Hartford Courant recently printed a long editorial discussing a Grand Jury investigation in a middle-sized Connecticut city. The investigation involved the relations of the city officials with a so-called utility rate expert who had been engaged to help bring about rate reductions. The jury's disclosures were astounding. Commenting, the Courant said: "This is not the first instance where politicians have seized upon a utility company to further their own ends. The country is full of utility baiters who seek to gain popularity for themselves by representing light and power companies as greedy beyond measure, and who promise to put them in their place. It matters not that every state has a utilities commission to determine what are and what are not fair rates and to redress any legitimate grievance to consumers. It is not to that quarter that the politicians usually look. They put on a campaign of their own, make a great noise about it, and often succeed in hoodwinking the public."

The utility industry is surrounded with legislative safeguards for the protection of the consumer and the investor. In every state save one, there is a utilities commission with broad and sweeping powers for investigating utilities, fixing the values which determine the rate base, and establishing rates. Even if a utility wanted to, its chances of getting away with graft or exploitation of the consumer would be practically nil.

For twenty years or more, the cost of every item included in the government's cost-of-living index has tended to rise steadily, but electric power is an exception—it costs less today than at any time in history. So far as service is concerned, every household knows the vast progress has been made.

Publicly-owned utilities, on the other hand, are not subject to regulation. They become fertile fields for political patronage and control. And by and large their record has been one of waste and failure—even as the record of the private utilities has been one of economy, efficiency and achievement. When the public awakens to this fact—and many recent elections, in which nominees for creating public utility districts have been voted down indicate that it is—the politicians will have to look elsewhere for something to bait.

BOONE COUNTY FARMERS ORGANIZE

We congratulate the farmers of Boone county on their new farm organization for the protection of their sheep. The heavy losses they have suffered through the killing and maiming of their flock is astounding.

While in the more heavily-populated district lurks many pets, which seems harmless by day, only to put on the Dr. Hyde and Mr. Jekyll act, after the twilight hours and in the rural sections are many mongrel dogs—dogs which travel from farm to farm. It is these dogs which are menaces to the sheep.

To protect these sheep, which form, one of this county's greatest industry, it seems to us that every step possible should be taken to wipe out these mongrels. The valuable dogs owned by farmers themselves should be licensed while the others should be disposed of in some way.

Let's protect the sheep from the dogs; let's prevent one of our largest industries from "going to the dogs".

OHIO DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY MAJORITY, 202,000, FIRT IN STATE'S HISTORY

Outstanding feature of the primaries held August 9 was the greatly increased Democratic vote in all four states. This fact was meticulously disregarded in most of the metropolitan newspapers, except as to Idaho.

Not only were Democratic totals larger in all four states than in the last off year, 1934, but the Democrats polled more votes than in the primaries of the unprecedented Presidential year of 1936. And in Ohio the Democrats obtained a majority of all the primary votes casts for the first time in the history of that state.

In Idaho, where a new election law permitted voters to cast a single ballot containing the candidates of both parties, a falling off of about 20,000 from the Republican total in 1936 significantly contrasted with approximately 20,000 more votes in the Democratic senatorial race than were registered two years ago. Old Guard columnists estimated that "around 14,000 Republicans" casts Democratic ballots, which is not inconsiderable in a State whose total primary vote is 100,000.

The Ohio result was epochal. Since the first Roosevelt year of 1932 the Democrats have carried the Buckeye state in all general elections with ease. But they never before cast more votes in the primaries than the Republican nomination for Governor was 687,945, for two Democratic aspirants 366,295. For Senator that year five Republicans rolled up 569,968, as against 269,834 for Robert J. Buckley, who was unopposed on the Democratic ticket. Yet in the November election in 1932 Geo. White, Democrat, Democrat, was elected governor by a majority of 214,585 and Senator Bulky beat Bettman, Republican, 166,343.

In 1934, for Governor, the Republican polled a total of 624,124; the Democrats 608,348. For Senator Donahey, Democrat, received 262,732, Charles West 167,839 and George White 166,729, totaled Democratic 542,965 for five Republicans. But the Republican combined vote for governor was nearly 30,000 larger. In the general election of 1934 Donahey, Democrat, won the senatorship by 437,138 and Davey, Democrat, the governorship by 65,406.

But as happened in Illinois and in various other states two years ago, Ohio this year for the first time gave the Democrats a clear majority in the primaries, both for Governor and Senator. The combined Democratic vote for governor, with one precinct missing was 868,419, carrying a majority for Sawyer over Davey of 30,305. As Bricker was unopposed for the Republican nomination for governor, his total of 578,021 was not a fair test of party strength. Yet all Ohio Republican newspapers agreed that there has not been such a bitter contest for the Republican senatorial nomination since 1914. Supreme Court Justice Day charged that corporation supporters of his successful rival, Robert A. Taft, would spend a half a million dollars to beat him and that Taft was being groomed by the big utility interests as their "tarriff expert in Washington."

Together, these two Republicans polled 655,326 votes, while Senator Bulky and his opponent, former Governor White together polled 755,643, a clear majority over the two Republicans of 202,377. The contrast was regarded by unprejudiced political observers in the Middle West as a tremendous gain in popular sentiment for New Deal policies since the public has had an opportunity to try them out.

Farmers and Fishermen

A nation busy with farming and fishing, Portugal has little use for formal education. Although there are three universities, more than one-half the population can neither read nor write. The peasants, however, preserve by word of mouth a rich folklore, and their unwritten four-line poems, recited from one end of the country to the other, are famous. They are so numerous that a single collector was able to record 10,000. Their language, with its signal scarcity of 's' and 'n', is represented in the world's literature by the sixteenth-century Lusian, written by the one-eyed Camoes largely while in exile.

Origin of Cheese

Although it is quite likely, as some writers assert, that cheese was first created by accident, when an Arab traveler left his day's ration of milk in a canteen made from an animal stomach in which rennet was still active, the Greeks believed cheese had a mythical origin. According to the legend cheese was invented by Aristaeus, the son of Apollo and king of Arcadia.

The Caterpillars

Caterpillars, commonly called cankerworms, inchworms or measuring worms, are characterized chiefly by the fact that they crawl in a looping motion and, when disturbed, may drop from the foliage and hang in mid-air suspended by a fine silken thread. They feed upon most of the common broad-leaved shade and forest trees and among their favorite hosts are ash, elm, hickory, linden, maple and oak and also apple trees. By eating small irregular holes in the leaf tissue, cankerworms sometimes consume the entire leaf except the larger veins.

Nice Thought

So often we are given a message of remembrance to be taken home to members of the family and yet how seldom do we deliver it. We might even say we met the person but forget entirely that he wishes to be remembered to anyone in particular. Try to carry these little messages to their destination; it makes everyone glad to know that someone else thought about him.

Remembering Good

IF WE are to go forward, fitted for the work before us, should we not be properly prepared? Instead of indulging the human tendency to look back sorrowfully or to think regretfully of the past, we must learn to think scientifically, keeping our consciousness even to God, and meditating upon what in the past was good, reminds us that we should render an account of present stewardship. Should we not recognize the many blessings we all too often take for granted? Since, as Whittier has said:

"That all of good the past hath had Remains to make our own time glad," let us gladden each day by taking stock of "all of good the past hath had."

Allowing only the good to remain in our thought is a happy service, a grateful prayer of praise. Keeping in our hearts thoughts of the unchanging goodness and omniscience of God, quiet fear and brings new courage, joy, and peace into daily experience.

Knowing the allness of God, good, brings peace, and peace brings joy, and joy proves the presence of good. Remembering God's gift to mankind in the revelation of the Christ, and remembering "on earth as it is in heaven, good will toward men" brings about a purification of heart.

Mary Baker Eddy gleaned something of good from every one of her experiences. Out of her rich triumphs came her admonition (The First Church of Christ, Scientist, and Miscellany, pp. 145, 150), "Remember, thou canst be brought into no condition, be it ever so severe, where Love has not been before thee and where its tender lesson is not awaiting thee." The way to turn from sad to happy memory's lane need not be learned through hard lessons.

Only when we cling to the truth through self-punishment do we learn Love's tender lesson. Challenging every condition with the question, "What is Love's tender lesson?" will turn our struggling into the living of thine to God. The measure of our progress should be estimated, not by how much we know of truth, but by how well we live and love it day by day, and by how much we express the spirit of good will toward others. A perfect rule for gracious and happy living is to remember God, good, all the time.

All thoughts that would keep out of our hearts love for God and man must be recognized as enemies to health, happiness, and holiness. Isaiah termed such insidious errors "other lords." Remembering good, remembering that God is with us, brings proof in our day also that those "other lords" are deceivers, they shall not rise; therefore hasten to build and destroyed them, and made all their memory to perish" (Isaiah 24:14). How happily we go forward when "all their memory" has perished!

What is it, after all, that makes our days seem unhappy, with spiritual happiness always within our reach? Is it not that God has been left out of our thoughts, and that love has been crowded out of our hearts? The need of the hour is not that great happiness be brought into our day, but rather that the happiness which is spiritual be recognized, claimed, and shared. Someone has said that there are some in this world who have the gift of finding joy everywhere, and of leaving it behind them when they go. This is the touchstone of selfless happiness.

The art of true living is to discern and to embrace the good ever within reach. In order that we may discern and embrace the good within reach we must be mentally ready to accept it. Being ready mentally prevents us from grieving over the past or from hesitating over the threshold of tomorrow. To "give thanks for the remembrance of his holiness" is to eliminate fear, sorrow, lack, enmity; is to make "all their memory to perish." "Remembrance of his holiness"—remembering God is not identifying ourselves with universal good.—The Christian Science Monitor.

21 FARMERS READY TO SEEL GOOD EGGS

For four years 21 farmers in Edmonson county obtained baby chicks from accredited flocks, culled their pullets, fed balanced rations and provided good quarters for their flocks. A SHORT HISTORY OF GLENCOE

The Cincinnati & Louisville Railroad was built between Covington and Louisville, Ky., and finished in July 1869. The first passenger on inspection train passed over the road from Louisville to Covington to the K. C. depot, the only road out of Covington to Lexington at that time July 9, 1869. When I stepped off of the train in Glencoe, January 1, 1870, I was in my 18th year of age. This is what I found in the town. The Glencoe hotel which was owned and operated by Robert Foster and wife; two general merchandise stores, one operated by a widow Mrs. James Eggleston and the other by J. D. Miller; a drug store owned by J. M. Vanice and George Noel; a shoe shop, that was taken care of by David Lilly and he had two German workmen, Harry Myers and Judge Park, that made the boots and shoes. Boots, calf skin, $9.00; shoes, $4.00; a saddle and harness shop, owned by Hunters Brothers; a blacksmith and wagon shop that was under the management of Jas. Riddle and he manufactured what was called a weeding hoe, that he sold for $3.00 and it was used for cutting weeds in the new ground tobacco. The depot agent and the postmaster was Taylor Williams. All the citizens in Glencoe at this time (1870) totaled 75 persons.

The railroad was constructed entirely by manual labor as the more modern machinery had not come into use at this time. It took 5 years to construct this 110 miles of road. J. Williams owned all the land on the west side of the county road leading to Warsaw, the county seat of Gallatin County, and he laid the town out in lots and sold them for $75 and $100 depending on the location of the land. Clay Castleman was the owner of all of the land on the east side of the county road and he also had a grist mill, that was taken care of by an old "duskey" by the name of Uncle Cornelious. The mill was located about 1-4 of a mile below the town. Dr. O. B. Yeager was the only physician in this part at this time. The Cincinnati & Louisville Railroad was later taken over by the L. & N. At this date (1938) Glencoe is quite a railroad village. I lived in and around Glencoe until the fall of 1932 and as I am getting along up in years, 82, I can recall all of these things very easily.

Up goes the price of liquor 25c per gallon. This is the exact amount of the added federal liquor tax. That is the raise that the distiller has to pass on to the wholesaler and the wholesaler has to pass on to the retailer. And, the retailer has no choice but to pass it along to the consumer.

STATE FAIR REAY FOR IT'S BIGGEST YEAR!

It's exposition time again in Kentucky and Louisville proudly throws open her doors to welcome its guests from far and near to the 36th Kentucky State Fair held from Sept. 12 to 17. Due to many improvements and enlargements there is reason to believe that this year's Kentucky State Fair will prove to be far superior to any in the past. The impressive $3,000,000 Merchants and Manufacturers Building has been thoroughly redecorated and industry has cooperated splendidly as evidenced by the huge demand for space.

Exhibition premiums have been materially increased this year. Intense interest in the various competitions is manifested by the fact that advance entries and request for various competitions is manifested by the fact that advance entries and request for premium books have far surpassed those of previous years. In the cattle show Aberdeen Angus will be the first breed shown. Judging on this entry will begin at 9:30 a. m. on Tuesday; Hereofers at 9:30 a. m. Wednesday. All steer classes will be judged on that day also. The judging of Holstein-Friesians and Jerseys will take place on Tuesday. This year the committee has been very liberal in providing separate classes for contestants in the dairy cattle competition.

Live stock and other farm exhibits are expected to be the finest in the history of the fair. Because of improved conditions in both rural and urban sections, enthusiastic interest in the 36th renewal of the Fair is reported throughout the state.

In addition to that from an attendance and participation standpoint the Fair will be the largest and most successful ever held. Much of the exhibit space has already been sold. H. S. Cleveland, Manager of the Fair, reports wholehearted support from manufacturers and merchants who plan exhibits. This would indicate that exhibitors are experiencing better times and are exposing this year's air to be bigger and better than ever.

Improved and redecorated grounds and buildings will greet Fair visitors this year. Exhibit buildings have been made more attractive, and many novel and unique exhibitions have been planned.

Fair officials have decided to retain the 25 cents admission, since this reduction last year resulted in a decided increase in attendance and placed the Kentucky State Fair within the reach of everyone.

According to an announcement by H. S. Cleveland, Manager, the new 1939 Fair catalogs have been placed in the mail. Individual copies of this writing the Kentucky State Fair, Louisville, Kentucky.

Remember "It's Kentucky's Greatest Show—Let's All Go!"

MANY ENTRIES FOR ENTRIES of several hundred head of livestock and large numbers of poultry and home economics articles are reported for the annual 4-H district fair to be held at Lexington, Aug. 22 to Sept. 1. By the middle of August, boys and girls in 27 counties had entered dairy and beef cattle, hogs and sheep, and entries had been received from 30 counties in the poultry and home economics divisions.

J. Ed. Parker, Fayette county agent director of the fair, said he expected record exhibits, as a result of a good producing season. With 53 bluegrass counties invited to take part, the fair is the largest junior fair in the United States.

The fair, which is free, is held annually at the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association grounds.

It is sponsored by the Fayette county chapters of the Future Farmers of America, the Lexington Board of Commerce and the American Legion.

LEAFLET GIVES TEST FOR LIME-PHOSPHATE

A leaflet published by the Kentucky College of Agriculture tells how to test soil for the need of lime and phosphate. Simple tests can be made which will indicate whether the soil is strongly acid and whether it is low or high in phosphate. Directions also are given for taking soil samples to be sent to the Agricultural Experiment Station for analysis. Interested farmers should see their county agent for copies of this leaflet and for assistance in testing their soil.

EXPERTS WRITE ON CANNING AT HOME

A bride of 18 doing her first canning, or an experienced homemaker about to celebrate her golden wedding day, might both profit from a circular on "Home Canning" just issued by the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. In it Miss Florence Lmley and Mrs. Pearl Hawk food specialists for the college, discuss phases of up-to-date canning methods. Types of spoilage, the water bath, steamers, open kettles, ovens; containers for canning; preparing equipment; cleaning and grading of food products for canning; methods even as to lids and sealing the glass jars—these are a few of the subjects taken up in detail, as well as recipes for many products. The circular may be obtained by asking the college for Circular No. 314.

A Proverb
Contrary to popular belief, the proverb, "God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb," does not appear in the Bible. It is of unknown origin. It occurs in Laurence Sterne's "Sentimental Journey Through France and Italy," but is quoted showing that Sterne did not claim the authorship.

Wide-spread Praise follows adoption of Code of Practice by members of Brewers Foundation

THE PUBLIC'S response to the adoption of a Code of Practice by the members of the Brewers Foundation was prompt and favorable.

Newspapers, social service groups and thousands of individuals expressed great satisfaction with the brewers' determination to conduct their business in accord with the desires and conscience of the American public.

The Code pledges the brewers publicly to "support the duly constituted authorities in the elimination of anti-social conditions wherever they may surround the sale of beer to the consumer."

How far we can go, and how soon, depends very much on ourselves . . . but partly also on you.

Public opinion once aroused, can operate to bring about honest enforcement of existing laws. Restriction of your patronage only to legal, respectable retail outlets can and will operate to raise retailing standards.

News of the Cincinnati Reds Baseball Club

By Leland G. Allen
As the National League race reaches the far turn, the dark horse the Cincinnati Reds, is prepared to make a great drive down the back stretch. The Reds will meet every club in the league at Crosley Field playing nineteen games with their opponents before again going on the road.

This strenuous stretch that will do so much to determine where the Reds will finish in the race was to open Tuesday with the Philadelphia Phillies. The Phils were to play Tuesday and Wednesday, with the latter date being a ladies day.

The Boston Bees will open a four game series with a double-header Thursday, and the defending champions, the New York Giants, will come to the Rhineland Sunday for two combats in as many days.

The last of the Eastern clubs, the Brooklyn Dodgers, will play a double-header on Tuesday, August 30, which will be ladies day, and a night game Wednesday, August 31. After two days of rest following the night game, the Reds will open in hostilities with the Chicago Cubs with a twin bill September 3, and a single game September 4.

The St. Louis Cardinals will be at Crosley Field on Labor Day, Sept. 5 and again in a single game Sept. 6. Then the long home stand will close in a battle with the Pittsburgh Pirates on September 7, which will night game of the season September 8th.

FIAR EXHIBIT OF COLLEGE TO SHOW BEST IN FARMING

The "best farming" will be featured in the exhibits of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture at the Kentucky State Fair at Louisville Sept. 11-17. The exhibits of the college will occupy their customary place in the Grandstand building.

One both will deal with hybrid corn; a new kind of corn that out-yields common varieties. The same exhibit will feature the control of tobacco diseases through plant breeding.

Showing what can be done with grass, the livestock exhibits will give the results of feeding tests at the Western Kentucky Experiment Station at Princeton.

The construction of farm reservoirs will be pictured in another part of the building. Hundreds of reservoirs have been made in the last few years and there is much interest in this form of water supply.

In their study of better homes members of homemakers, clubs in the state have learned about more convenient kitchens and ask, "Where would you prefer to work?"

Other parts of the college's exhibit will deal with potato production, poultry raising, control of insect pests, farm management, better seeds, disease control, health, etc.

The 4-H clubs of the state, now a part of the better farm program in every county, will have their usual displays of canned fruits and vegetables, baked foods, clothing and home furnishings of the Grandstand building. There also will be 4-H club shows of poultry, dairy cattle, pigs and sheep on the fair grounds, and club members will compete in showing livestock in the open classes. Members of 4-H and Utopia clubs will this year have special displays of hybrid corn and potatoes.

Several thousand dollars in cash premiums, trips and other prizes will be divided among winners in the 4-H club department of the State Fair.

By John S. Gardner.

Kentucky College of Agriculture
Last week, the constructing of an "outside cellar" was described, except in its ceiling to set an out let vent whose area in square inches is the same as that of the floor, in square feet. The vent should have a stack long enough to protrude above the earth which covers the cellar. Its top should be screened.

A door, preferably of tongue-and-groove material, to make it tight should be hung on the inside of the jamb, and one on the outside, the two doors enclosed a dead-air space when both are shut. The bottom 4 inches of the inside door should be detachable, or hung by hinges, to be raised to serve as a fresh air intake, as needed.

Earth should be put on the roof of the "cellar" to a thickness of 12 inches, and the sides and the front banked to the angle at which the soil will lie without slipping, or the "angle of repose" as engineers call it. Usually, it is 1 to 1, though for sandy soil the slope is more flat. It is of desired advantage to cover the whole with sods, pegged on, to hold until the grass roots take hold.

The description of the "outside cellar" is a new method, except to suggest a few improvisations for the masonry and concrete construction described. The walls may be made of poles, covered with odds and ends of plank, and the roof may be of poles set closely together, supported at mid-span by a stout tree trunk in turn supported by posts as need.

To insure a pole ceiling water proof the earth cover should be made thicker, more as thick, and immediately added over.

The management of an "outside cellar" is as follows:

If it is desired to effect a change of air, the top vent is opened also the outside door. The inside door is kept closed, but the hinged bottom portion is propped open. Thirty minutes should suffice for complete change of air.

In the early autumn or late spring when the days are warm but the nights cool, the vent and the "in-take" at the foot of the door are left open during the night, and the outside door, too, but all are closed tighter during morning comes. To raise the storage temperature, as when the night temperature is severely low, air is admitted about mid-day, a coal-oil stove being set before the "in-take vent."

It will be observed that as in the dwelling house cellar storage room the same principles obtain. Moist air given off by the stored vegetables tends to rise and escape through this vent in the ceiling, and fresh dry air flows in to replace it by way of the intake at the floor line. With vents placed as described, the process is automatic. The earth cover serves as insulation, even though it is soaking wet, for by its freezing, it would freeze, could that, might harm the vegetables is absorbed, as many persons will recall who have protected vegetables from freezing in house cellars, by placing a wash tub filled with water next to them.

This concludes the description of structures designed to keep the "cool crops" through the winter. Next week, a "warm crop" storage house, as for sweetpotatoes and squash, will be described and the following week the time-honored method of "burying" potatoes, turnips, and the like, in "pits" will be described, but with improvements.

Former Jonesville Postmaster Passes

O. C. Wilson Succumbs Following Long Illness

Somewhere they are saying "Good Morning" when we are saying "Good Night" and somewhere the shadows are lifting while sorrow is visiting our sight.

Otis Calvin Wilson was born Feb. 24, 1898 and departed this life Aug. 24, 1938 being 77 years, 6 months and 18 days of age.

He united with the Macedonia Baptist church about 38 years ago and remained a faithful member attending regularly as long as his health permitted. He had been in failing health for several years, but bore all his suffering patiently. He has been our postmaster here for a number of years and was well-known and loved by a wide circle of friends.

Mr. Wilson was married to Berde Franks on March 13, 1904. They raised a niece from infancy, Mrs. Mary Anna Thomas.

Funeral services were held at the Baptist church, August 28, by his pastor, Rev. C. C. Mullins, assisted by Rev. E. E. Ashley. The scripture being Psalm 23 and St. John 14.

Flower girls were: Mrs. Margaret Sanford, Misses Alma F. Stewart, Mabel Kemper, Agnes Vannarsdall, Anita King and Virginia Vannarsdall.

Pall bearers were as following: members of the Junior Order of which he was a member: Wm. Maddox, Gate Castleman, George Herndon, Graves Furnish, E. O. Satterwhite, Neal Elliott.

He leaves to mourn his departure: his devoted wife; two brothers, Martin of Crittenden and Foster of near Jonesville; one sister, Mrs. Elsie Stewart of Owensboro; a niece, Mrs. Mary Agnes Thomas of Detroit, Michigan; several other nieces and nephews and a host of other relatives and friends.

Burial in the I. O. O. F. cemetery.

Coffins and Stewart had charge of the arrangements.

"Not dead—just borne beyond the shadows into the full clear light; forever done with midst and calm and tempest, where all is calm and bright; not dead—but past all fear of dying, and with all suffering over; say not that he is dead, when he has been called to live forever more." Contributed.

Beautiful Wedding Solemnized Here

At Baptist Church Saturday Night, Aug. 27

A lovely wedding of Saturday night was that of Miss Floe Elliott, daughter of Mr. Boyd Elliott to Mr. Russell Soden, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Soden of Walton. The ceremony was performed in the flower-banked Baptist Church at Walton by the Rev. Ebert Summers, uncle of the bridegroom, who journeyed from his home in Concord N. C. to officiate at this auspicious affair.

The church setting and the background for the reception held at the home of grandparents of the bride Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Cummings, were indicative of colonial days. And the lovely colors of the bride and her attendants were of the same period.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, had as her attendants, Mrs. Edwin Daman, who served as matron-of-honor, and Miss Margaret Cooke, Miss Edna Mae Campbell and Miss Hazel Richardson, who were bridesmaids.

Mr. Edwin Daman served as best man for the bridegroom. Three groomsmen, Mr. Virgil Brewsaw, Mr. Reuben Hinsdale and Mr. William Soden, and six ushers, Mr. James Stephens, Mr. Junior Kleebe, Mr. William Durr, Mr. Joseph McClain, Mr. Gus Richardson and Mr. George Ballinger, completed attendants for Mr. Soden.

The bride chose a white silk net gown modeled after frocks of the colonial period, with skirt made in three tiers, tight bodice, short puffed sleeves and a heart-shaped neckline. The only trimming was a row of white satin buttons down the front of the frock. Her long veil of illusion was gracefully attached to a headpiece of orange blossoms. In her arms she carried a bouquet of white roses.

Mrs. Daman was clad in yellow marquisette, fashioned along identical lines as the gown worn by the bride, trimmed with aqua grosgrain bows. She carried pink roses and also wore a hair adornment of pink roses.

Miss Cooke, Miss Campbell and Miss Richardson were crowned in white net, fashioned along the same lines as the ones worn by the bride and the matron of honor. Yellow grosgrain bows were used for effective trimmings and yellow roses formed their bouquets and hair embellishments.

The bride, the matron of honor and the bridesmaids wore single strands of pearls at their necklines. The dainty flower girls, Gail Daman and Alice Elliott, wore girlish frocks of pink net trimmed with white grosgrain bows and carried white hand-crocheted baskets of rose petals.

Master Paul Soden, who served as ringbearer, carried a hand-quilted, white satin pillow.

Delightful and appropriate music was furnished by Miss Louise Talbot, pianist; Mr. Lillian Baker, violinist, and Mr. Ellis Prakes, soloist, who was accompanied at the piano by Miss Mabel Prakes.

Mrs. L. G. Cummings, grandmother of the bride, wore a becoming model of black velvet offset by a corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Soden, mother of the bridegroom, wore an attractive model of rose lace with a corsage of gardenias.

Mr. Soden and his bride departed following the reception for a motor tour of the North, and upon their return in a fortnight will reside in their attractive apartment in the Alms on the Dixie Highway, South St. Mitchell.

A large group of guests enjoyed a reception following the ceremony.

Winning all prizes is getting to be a habit with these two lassies, for only a couple of weeks ago they ran away with the Warsaw fair. We are pulling for them at the Kentucky State Fair, held at Louisville, which we think they will take in stride.

DOES BUSINESS COOPERATE WITH GOVERNMENT? YES.

Not so long ago the New York Stock Exchange and the Security and Exchange Commission seemed to be after each other's scalps and were blaming the problems of each onto the other. While this warfare was raging, the country suffered. The confidence of industry and the investor was shaken.

To cap the climax, the country was shocked by the Whitney embezzlements, and the New York Stock Exchange was torn by dissension between the old and new regimes.

The crisis came with the 1937 stock market crash. Many business leaders blamed the SEC for this, and the SEC replied by bluntly demanding that the Exchange choose between what it called self reform, or being taken over by the SEC.

At this point, let it be said to the everlasting credit of the progressive leaders in the Exchange and the SEC, that a spirit of fairness and tolerance took command of the situation on both sides. The result has been astounding.

The Exchange has completed a revolutionary reorganization plan in full cooperation with the SEC. This greatest security mart in the world is probably now on the soundest footing in 146 years of its existence, and the investing public is being given better service and greater protection than ever before.

And to whom should go the credit? To no one man, but to the group of men in the Exchange and the SEC who were determined to work out the problems they faced, fairly and understandingly, rather than in a spirit of antagonism and retaliation.

The country can thank them one and all for the job they have done and the confidence they have hereby helped to restore in the whole business and industrial picture.

Yes, business can cooperate with government when the cooperation is mutual.

TWO-TOOTERS ARE NUISANCE AND MENACE

Two-tooters are increasing in number. So are the casualties. Two-tooters are the motorists who have the idea that two toots of the horn by them cancel any signals given by others. Thus, if one who has the right of way because he's in front repeatedly signals that he's about to make a left turn, the two-tooter simply gives two short blasts and tries to continue on his merry way. Frequently all he does is try, because many times he tests his brakes to the limit, and all too often he crashes.

The two-tooter often is a new driver who has learned by ear. It is amazing to those who inquire to learn how many two-tooters think they have the legal right to make others change courses simply by a couple of short shrieks. One cause of difficulty is that there are many other drivers who have to make time to hold their jobs who sometimes think they are just as much entitled to the road as those who are in a hurry to get to a cocktail party.

Another practice that is approaching a custom is cutting corners. This works fairly well where the cut is into a thin stream of travel, but not so well into arterial highways where there is the possibility of meeting another road pest, the "light-beater." The "corner-cutter," who just grazes the first car in a stopped line, is always taking the chance of bursting into a "light-beater," all too frequently a truck driver, trying to get at the head of a second, even a third, line.

It isn't a bad idea for motorists to refresh knowledge of the driving laws of the state in which they are licensed or to learn what the regulations are in the states they intend to visit. Nor is it a bad idea to think of the other drivers and what they are liable to do.

Gypsy brides are being sold for as little as $3.60 in Serbia, according to a news report. If over there it's anything like it is over here, however, the original cost is likely to be deceiving.

We hesitate to be precipitate, but it's beginning to look as if William McKechie might be right in his prediction that the Reds won't finish last, but the way they are now playing, we wonder!

YOUR FIRE BILL

You, the reader of this article, possess the key to fire prevention. You possess the power to help reduce the nation's fire loss, which now totals about a quarter of a billion annually, to an insignificant sum. And you can help save the ten thousand person who now die horribly each year from fire.

By the same token, it is you who must pay the bill for our collective national carelessness with fire and its hazards. And it is you who suffer when fire strikes.

Many of us mistakenly think that fire prevention involves the purchase of expensive and complicated equipment, plus an involved system of inspections by high-priced experts. That is true only in a minority of cases. A very large proportion of all fires occur in homes and on farms—and in these cases adequate fire prevention usually requires little expenditure of either time or money. Improperly stored inflammable liquids, uncared-for heating plants, amateur electric work, accumulated debris of various kinds in attics, basement, closets and out-buildings—these are major sources of fire. And these grave hazards can be done away with quickly and for little or nothing.

Next time you read of a fire, large or small, think of its cost as being partially paid by you. You pay it in decreased purchasing power, in community retrogression, in lost jobs, in higher insurance rates. Think of the thousands of such fires that constitute America's gigantic and inexcusable total waste. Then this question: "Is the little effort that would make my property safe, worth while?"

WOMEN OF TODAY ARE YOUNGER AND HEALTHIER

An authority on hygiene and physical development is author of the statement that women are younger today at 40 than even and, at all ages, are healthier than the women of preceding generations.

A generation ago the average woman of 40 was an old lady who wore a shawl across her shoulders while she sat by the fire and crocheted. She was well past the prime of life and "all tired out."

Today the women of 40 looks 30, plays golf and tennis and drives and automobile during the day and dances or plays cards far into the night, and then is down first to breakfast in the morning fresh and ready for another day which would have been a killing pace in grandmother's day.

One of the causes of this extraordinary healthfulness of the modern women is the development of her clothing. She no longer wraps herself up like an Egyptian mummy or loads herself down with pounds of heavy and superfluous raiment.

But hasn't woman's attitude toward herself contributed much to her transformation? Though a mother of seven she can now dance, swim, go in for sports and driving, and dress youthfully without fear of social ostracism. No longer is the "respectable" woman's condition in life just two degrees removed from the absolute imprisonment of the harem.

JAPAN LOST CREDIT

The continued decline of Japan's credit in the markets of the world shows how dearly she is paying for her Chinese adventure. The point has been reached where it takes gold to get what she urgently needs from abroad. Her foreign bank balances built up by previous exports have been exhausted, and her current exports are so far reduced that they leave no margin. Her imports, as well have been cut to downright necessities; but, even so, her requirements of steel, oil, metal-working machinery and other military supplies are continually draining her gold reserve.

"Of the one hundred million dollars of gold set aside on July 19 for export, forty million has been shipped to the United States and the fund probably will be used up some time this summer," according to dependable reports. "This will leave about one hundred and fifty million dollars in gold on hand in the Bank of Japan; but of this about fifty-five million must be retained in the country as a minimum basis for Japan's rapidly inflating national obligations. After this summer, therefore, Japan will have only about ninety-five million left for export, which will carry her through the year, only if she does not radically increase her needs by a war with Russia."

Such is the extremity to which the aggressor has been brought by her ruthless invasion of China. Time, which is fighting for the Chinese, carries Japan on a fatal drift.

Yawning is nature's method of relieving tension by expanding the chest, throwing the head and arms back and in other ways giving temporary relief from cramped positions.

Lesson Taught by Violet

The common violet, Viola papilionacea, lover of fields, brook-sides and the dust beside roadways, has heart-shaped, deep green scalloped leaves that hold up the sign of contentment of heart for all passer-by to see and be warned, says a writer in the New York World-Telegram. Its lesson is that by living close to the ground, making unstinted beauty for all, and bringing the color of heaven down to earth, one may find heartease. Everything we struggle for, seek after labor to acquire is, we think, to give us this mystic thing "heartease," which the violet stands for. Heartease, ease of heart, means peace, tranquility of mind or feel ing.

News of The Cincinnati Reds Baseball Club

By Leland G. Allen

Johnny Vander Meer, sensational southpaw of the Cincinnati Reds, whose feat of hurling two successive no-hit games this season placed him among baseball's immortals, will be honored by the National League Sunday before the game between the Reds and the Chicago Cubs.

At that time the League will present Vander Meer with a beautiful silver plaque. This plaque contains a bust of Vander Meer carved in silver, and the words "Johnny Vander Meer—for his immortal accomplishment pitching two successive no-hit games." The dates and scores of his famous games are also included, as is the official monogram of the Reds.

Vander Meer has completely recovered from an attack of boils in his inner ears, which kept him on the sidelines for three weeks. The infection has completely cleared and he expects to be taking his regular turn on the mound before long.

The Reds will meet the Cubs in a double-header Saturday in addition to the single game Sunday when Vander Meer will be honored. On Labor Day the Reds will also be at home to greet the St. Louis Cardinals in a twin bill and a solitary contest: the day following. Then the Pittsburgh Pirates will swing into Cincinnati with the team that has been leading the league most of the season. The Reds and Pirates will clash September 7 in a ladies' day game, and September 8 in a night game. This will be the last nocturnal combat played at Crosley Field this season.

Tickets for these games are on sale at the Straus Cigar Store, Sixth and Walnut Streets.

Residents on Local Road Petition for Work Order

The owners and tenants of farms located on the Stephenson Mill Road filed petition for re-construction of the Stephenson Mill Road at a recent meeting of the commission.

The Kentucky State Rural Highway Commission and to George S. Lyon, Chief Engineers at Covington. The road is located west and connecting State Highway No. 25, the entrance is into City limits of Walton at one end and midway between Walton and Verona on Route 16 at the other end of the road.

This road is approximately five miles in length. The road is now separated by mud bank cuts which is an impassable barrier to continuous travel between the portion from Walton to the Mud Lick Creek and from the Verona Pike No. 16 to the Mud Lick Creek and we urge the construction of a bridge or a waterable over the creek.

The owners and residents along this road constitute a population of 64 adults and 26 minor children. There are a total of approximately 3,000 acres (estimated value of over $150,000 with buildings etc.) of rich farming land with this road being the only means of access.

A total of 24 families live on the farms on this road, of which 15 families reside on the Walton entrance and nine families on the Verona Pike entrance.

Close relatives and neighbors living on this road within one or two miles of each other, but separated by Mud Lick Creek, are now compelled to travel a distance of 26 miles for a round trip in the transaction of business, or in friendly visits as traveling from either side of the road they are now compelled to make a circuitous route through the town of Walton to reach the other side of this road.

For the purpose of securing this greatly desired and much needed improvement the owners and residents of this road have organized together under the title of the Stephenson Mill Road Welfare Association.

Merchants in Northern Kentucky to Join In National Drive

The week beginning Sept. 19 will be officially declared as onward Northern Kentucky Week by Mayor H. A. Knollman of Covington in a proclamation to be read Friday noon at the forum luncheon of the Covington Chamber of Commerce. The week is to be dedicated to retail merchants of the many Northern Kentucky communities.

E. J. Goodenough, president of the Chamber, will introduce Joseph Luhn, president of the Covington Retail Merchants' Association, who in turn will introduce the Mayor Knollman. Following the reading of the proclamation, Arthur C. Horrocks, industrial adviser and economist, will speak.

"Forward Northern Kentucky Week" is the slogan adopted by local retail merchants to identify their program in the observance of National Retail Demonstration Week, to be held coincidentally with the Northern Kentucky activity.

During the week local retail merchants will make a concerted effort to call public attention to the story of retailing. Special window decorations, store dressing and publicity will be directed to retailing. Industrial exhibits in the stores will show each step necessary from the time merchandise is accepted from the wholesaler until it is ultimately sold across the counter to the consumer.

State Highway Patrol Is Abolished Saturday

Officially, there is no Kentucky State Highway Patrol.

Some of the 200 members of the patrol, abolished Saturday by an order of Robert Humphrey, commissioner of highways, are on duty unofficially and without state-owned equipment.

Scores went to the State Fair at Louisville, Monday at their own expense and are acting as "state fair guards." Others, refused gasoline for their state-owned cars, left the autos in highway garages.

Status of the patrol probably will be tested in a suit, which will be sanctioned by Gov. Chandler, but filed in the name of some of the "dismissed" patrolmen, it was said at Frankfort Monday.

Resurface Main Street

Efforts have been made in the past months to persuade the State Highway Department to patch and resurface the Main street of Walton. So far the powers that be have failed to recognize the vital need for this work. Something should be done as the street has become dangerous to motorists and others, and with winter in the offing, the situation will be more serious.

The citizens of Walton should lend their support to obtain the necessary work and materials to bring our streets up to par, and to eliminate the dangerous holes and ruts along side of the strip of concrete through our city.

Our Main street bears more traffic during the week than many of the streets and highways surrounding Walton, yet they have received only slight attention. Proper care would increase the safety and pleasure of driving through our city, and would increase the patronage of the touring public.

By grading the earth portion of the streets from the curb to the concrete, and spreading a coating of chips and oil, then rolling, our highway would be a point of civic pride instead of the present deplorable condition that now exists.

Tag Day for Crippled Children

The Boone-Kenton Chapter of the Crippled Children Society of Kentucky, under the direction of Miss Anna C. Meyers, tag day chairman, has completed final arrangements to hold a tag day benefit on September 17.

Proceeds of the day will be used to finance their work in aiding crippled children and to purchase shoes, medicine and other necessities. No salaries are paid anyone connected with the chapter except the nurse, Mrs. Griffith.

Workers will be stationed at various points in Boone and Kenton counties and your nickels and dimes contributed to their workers will support a very worthy cause.

The New School Year

The past few days have marked the beginning of a new school year for approximately 2,100 Boone county young people. How much these young folks will profit from their experiences of the school year is not entirely dependent upon the executives in charge of the county school administration or members of the faculty.

The school administration may be alright and the teachers may be competent, but if the parents fail to recognize their duty or obligation as it relates to the conduct of their children during the away-from-school hours, then John or Mary are not likely to profit as they should from nine months of training. The best teacher on the faculty can't be very successful in instructing a student who knows no discipline at home. The importance of parent-teacher cooperation can hardly be overstressed.

The start of the school year in Boone county is of more significance than the usual opening. Consolidations that have taken place in the last few years have proven their worth many times over, and through rural transportation the students have had the benefit of better educational facilities.

The schools of our county are providing the background for your children, the future leaders of your country. You should lend your wholehearted support to the superintendent, other executives and the faculty members for a successful year.

—And Sudden Death

Anything can happen in that split second of crash, even those lucky escape you hear about. People have dived through windshields and come out with only superficial scratches. They have run cars together head on, reducing both to twisted junk and been found unhurt and arguing bitterly two minutes afterwards.

But death was there just the same—he was only exercising his privilege of being erratic.

This spring a wrecking crew prried the door off a car which had been overturned down an embankment and out stepped the driver with only a scratch on his cheek. But his mother was still inside, a splinter of wood from the top driven four inches into her brain as a result of son's taking a greasy curve a little too fast. No blood—no horribly twisted bones—just a gray-haired corpse still clutching her pocketbook in her lap as she had clutched it when she felt the car leave the road.

On that same curve a month later a light touring car crashed a tree. In the middle of the front seat they found a nine-months-old baby surrounded by broken glass and yet absolutely unhurt. A fine practical joke on death—but spoiled by the baby's parents, still sitting on each side of him, instantly killed by shattering their skulls on the dashboard.

Drive slow—enjoy life.

State Highway Patrol

With the recent "unasked for" opinion of the Attorney General declaring that money paid into the highway fund could not be diverted to support the State Highway Patrol system, the work of a fine body of men was temporarily suspended, leaving our highways unprotected for the general enforcement of traffic laws.

When the act was passed in 1934 creating the department, it was not the thought of members that state highway patrolmen would become peace officers under the general meaning of the term. They did not suppose that state patrolmen would be used to supervise the conduct of elections in several counties of Kentucky, neither did they think that the state police would take it upon themselves to enforce the anti-gambling laws in the larger centers of population.

There is always strong sentiment in the Assembly, against the state encroaching upon the functions of local government. Sometimes political pressure by the state administration is strong enough to overcome that sentiment as it was in the election purge act, but a dually members are jealous of the right of home rule.

A state police force with too much power is not only a threat to home rule, but it can be converted overnight into a political weapon. Every business man who operates under the provisions of a state license is a likely target for state patrolmen who are more interested in the outcome of an election than they are in observance of the law.

There is a definite place in Kentucky's government for a state highway patrol, but the organization's primary function should be the regulation of traffic and not making arrests in misdemeanor cases.

State highway patrolmen can devote all of their time to traffic problems and be of more service to the state than they can by dipping into the affairs of local government. The Kentucky patrol includes many fine young men, but they are subject to the orders of their superiors, and often their superiors are motivated by politics.

Even the casual observer can readily see the need for the state highway patrol to pay more attention to traffic violations.

National Labor Relations

Announcements have been made by the President, and by President Green of A. F. of L. that important amendments to the National Labor Relations Act will be favored by both of them at the coming session of Congress. Nobody seems to be entirely satisfied with NLRB except the CIO, and John L. Lewis adds a little fault-finding by way of helping alibis for the claim that the Board acts prejudicially in his interest.

DIXIE STORIES, ANECDOTES, SAYINGS; SOME OLD, SOME NEW, SOME ORIGINAL AND SOME OTHERWISE

By WILL S. NORRIS
5552 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio

Uncle George Deatherage, one of Madison county's old-time prosperous farmers back in the 80's, hired a young man from another part of the country to work for him. He made a good faithful farm hand. It seemed like he was a fixture on the farm. One of the young man's friends said to Uncle George: "You could hardly run your farm without Tom Curry." Uncle George said that Tom was a good boy and did his work well but the time would come when Tom would leave.

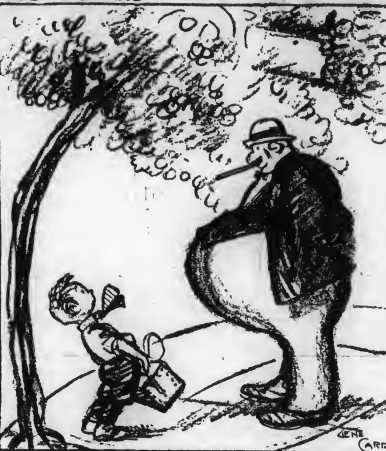

He made the following comparison. That at one time he owned a little yellow horse. The little horse was used for everything that a horse could be used for on a farm. They drove him to church on Sunday, the children would drive him to school, would ride him to the postoffice for the mail and to bring in the cows, used him with the cart and with the plow. In fact he was so useful that it looked like the farm would not do without him. Like all good horses he lived out his allotted time and died.

The farm went on just the same. Uncle George said: "When Tom leaves the farm will go on just the same." Uncle George Deatherage went to the Great Beyond a number of years ago. While the farm has fallen into other hands it has never been moved and continues to bring forth seed-time and harvest.

While we may think we are very important and things would not go without us, there are no necessary men and women. The world will go along just the same without us. Our object in life should be to do our little bit while we are here and try to make the world better by having passed through it.

RED-HOT FLANNELS

All of us know how much a passing institution the home-knit yarn stocking is; probably few have thought how equally passe are red-hot flannels. Not long ago I made a talk to a parent-teacher association and exhibited a pair of home-knit stockings to show how they would hold enormous quantities of Christmas goodies. Nothing that I have been connected within years created so much interest. I did not talk then of the passing of red flannels, but I will now. With the coming of better methods of heating houses has come a custom of dressing less warmly. Those who spend their days out in the cold probably still cling to warm underwear, from necessity; but imagine sitting a room with a temperature of 70 degrees all swathed in woolen underwear! It makes me warm, though I am writing this on one of the coldest days of the winter. Even outdoor men tell me that shorts or E. V. D.'s are sufficient for the worst weather. Evidently we have developed warmer blood or are less sensitive to cold.

When we went to the country school, we wore so many clothes that we looked like Dutchmen. Next to the skin we wore red flannel shirts or "bodys." On top of those was an under garment of cotton flannel. Then with a hickory shirt, a coat and vest, an overcoat, a fascinator or a pair of ear-muffs over our ears or a cap pulled down with the ears over the upper parts of our bodies ought to have been sufficiently warmed. We were equally well clothed on the lower part of the body, though I cannot recall having seen any red flannel drawers on the clothes lines in our community. That was reserved for Indiana, many years after my flannel shirt days. I think that I first felt an interest in Huckleberry Finn when he mentioned itching in eleven places at once. Any one who wore red flannels lived in a perpetual itching, so that on Sunday when the preacher described certain warm and torturing places, we experienced them in advance.

For middle-aged people and I ought to be much better than we are, for the tortures we endured as infants and small children should keep before us always the horrors of eternal punishment. I have seen more than my share of sweating prickly-heated little red bodies swathed in voluminous petticoats of red flannel. Parboiled we looked; parboiled we were until we could outgrow this curse of childhood. A monument ought to be erected to the memory of the first physician or old granny who believed that red flannel was necessary for the comfort and safety of a small child.

That monument might take its theme some of the warmest passages from Dante's INFERNO. It might represent a man, dressed up to represent a doctor, clad in a clinging garment of flame that quenches not like the fire kindled by lightning. It would have visions of babies swathed in the same fashion float forever before his eyes, like the visions of water and fruits before suffering Tantalus.

Where is linsey-woolsey and petticoats of wagon-sheet proportion? Where is red flannel, the enemy of comfort and the promoter of itching? Where are the layers of hot clothing that we used to sweat in until we were offensive when we stood around the schoolhouse stove? Where are we warmer-blooded than we used to be it doth not yet appear; certainly we can keep warmer with fewer garments than formerly and suffer only occasional chills.

DO'S AND DON'TS BY STATE FISH AND GAME COMMISSION

The Division of Game and Fish passes on some "Do's and Don'ts" which pertain to the fishermen.

1. Do wet your hands carefully before handling undersized fish that are to be returned to the water. A dry hand will remove a protective covering of lubricant, making the fish susceptible to attacks by bacteria.

2. Do handle undersized fish gently and return to the water carefully, so they will survive uninjured and provide better sport, and more food for some other angler—even if it isn't you.

3. Do use barbless hooks whenever you can. Sush hooks provide better sport and make it possible to return undersized fish to the water with their mouths uninjured.

4. Do observe creel and size limits.

5. Do watch you footing while wading. Even the best swimmers are sometimes at a loss when hampered by heavy boots and clothing in swift streams.

6. Do study fishing streams and urge improvements.

7. Do take a militant part in the fight against pollution.

8. Do cooperate with your local game and fish club in every way possible.

9. Don't venture into the woods without a first aid kit and a knowledge of first aid in the outdoors.

10. Don't be careless with fires or cigarettes. More than 90 per cent of all forest fires in the United States are man-caused and, therefore, preventable.

AN EVEN (?) TRADE

An editor friend tells us the following true incident: For years the editor had given a certain organization a liberal amount of space for club news, announcements and items of a similar nature. One day the editor learned that the head of the organization had placed a $17 printing order with a job shop.

How did you come to give that other shop that printing order?" the editor demanded of the club president. "Why didn't you give us a chance at it?"

"Well, I'll tell you," said the club president, in all seriousness. "We've been giving you all our news for several years, so we decided it was only fair to divide up our business and let the other fellow to our printing."—Exchange.

FARMERS LOOSE $24,480 UNDER ACP PROGRAM

Boone county farmers will lose $24,480 under the 1938 Agricultural Conservation program unless they carry out additional soil building practices between now and October 31st, according to H. R. Fortner county agent. October 31st is the last date for securing credit for soil building practices under the program.

The above figures averaged from field supervisors reports on more than 500 of the 1400 farms under the program listed in the county. Approximately thirty days will be required before complete reports can be secured. Reports of earnings by communities is as follows:—

Petersburg-Grant—48.8% earned.
Herbert-Constance—61.3% earned.
Burlington-Florence—57.0% earned.
Union-Beaver—62.0% earned.
Hamilton-Carlton—58.8% earned.
Walton-Vernon—72.2% earned.

The use of phosphate, ground limestone, seeding of blue grass, orchard grass, timothy, red top, unhusked sweet clover and winter vetch are probably the most profitable practices that can be carried out between now and October 31st, to earn 100% of the allowance set up for the individual farm. The use of ACP phosphate will probably be the most profitable to be carried out, the use of agricultural limestone second and seedings third. Because all cultivated land should be seeded to a winter cover crop and if it is not to be plowed next year grass should be sown this fall, all the above practices become important.

Every farmer is urged to support his county in the campaign to earn 100% of the allowance. Do your part—earn 100 per cent of the allowance for your farm. Credit for carrying out soil building practices can be secured through the county office for those farmers who can not secure it otherwise.

Service That Satisfies

THE GARDEN WINTER STORAGE FOR VEGETABLES VI By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture

Much of next year's garden performance depends on what is done during the fall months of this year. On the manner in which the garden is "put to sleep for the winter", for the nature of that "sleep" determines what the garden will do in the season to follow.

In these months, too, the sowing of greens, turnips, lettuce and winter radishes should continue, at least until October 10. Making periodic sowings of these every two weeks assures that at least some plantings will escape inordinately dry weather, as well as the damage the fleabeetles and plant lice sometimes do.

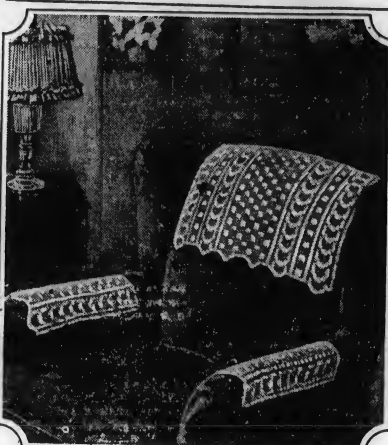

Now, to next year's garden. Everybody knows that in order to keep soil easily workable and able to hold moisture during dry times, humus, manure, and the best gardens are those where this is done every year. However, stable manure is not everywhere easy to get, even every other year. But, there are other ways to make good the lack of stable manure humus, and if commercial fertilizer is used in connection, stable manure plant food, as well.

One way is to spread over the garden the tree leaves you dispose in the fall is so often a problem. Another is to spread the "compost" that results from piling lawn clippings and the vegetable tops and sometimes weeds that are removed when a spent row is being prepared for a crop to follow. Usually, the weeds are at this time immature but even though a few seeds may be present, the heating that goes on in the pile kills them. Another is to "save" the fall weeds, even in a well-kept garden, by turning them under just after a killing frost, thus removing a winter-long outrage to the eye and making an asset of what might become a liability if left until breaking time in the spring when turning under so much unrotted and tough fiber might do harm.

Still another way, and the best way, is to sow in the two months to come, a winter-hardy crop, which besides furnishing matter to turn under next spring, saves plant food that would otherwise be lost, and keeps the soil itself from washing away because of winter downpours of rain and snow.

The most logical crop is one of the small grains. Of these, the most commonly used is rye, but wheat may be used at a saving in seed expense. The best grain cover crop is barley for its straw rots down best and most quickly. Unfortunately, barley

Is not dependably hard north of the latitude of Lexington.

None of these add new plant food to the garden soil except in the sense that they give back plant food they have within themselves while growing, but they have saved by growing, but there are several winter-growing legumes that may be used, that store within themselves nitrogen that they themselves produce from nitrogen in the air. The best of these is hairy vetch, for it can survive any winter weather Kentucky encounters and if not turned under until April 15 or May 1, as the "late" portion of the garden enormous amount of nitrogenous humus material is produced. Started in September, and given a moist autumn, the growth hairy vetch makes by March 1 is quite worthwhile. Another winter legume is crimson clover, but it is not hardy enough to be safely used north of Lexington. It, too, should be sown no later than September.

For the state over, and particularly in that portion north of Lexington, the cover crop should be rye (or wheat), one and one-half bushels; hairy vetch, twenty pounds. For the southern half of the state, it may be barley, one and one-half bushels; crimson clover, fifteen pounds. These rates are for an acre.

It is not necessary, or desirable for that matter, to wait until the

ly. There is no need to wait until the area is sufficiently moist and the proper amount of seed. For example, at the sowing rates just suggested, one-half pound of seed should be made to cover two hundred square feet.

The sowing of the cover crop need not interfere with the sowing of fall grain and the like, but both may be sown together with no harm to either cover crop or greens.

Ground preparation is not complicated, but merely the removal of the late weeds or the vegetable tops in the tugging out of which the soil is sufficiently stirred. Still another cover crop could be a mixture of late greens and table turnips, sown at the rate of one ounce to three hundred square feet. Where possible, hardy varieties should be chosen, and the mixture could be made of equal parts of the following: Siberian kale, Seven Top Essex rape, Purple Top Globe Turnip, and perhaps the leafings of spring radishes, and perhaps mustard. Merely scraping off the crab grass and what-not would serve for preparation, though deeper churning would be improvement.

The point is to cover the garden with something, preferably winter-hardy, and better a crop that adds new plant food, but something, to furnish humus so sadly lacking in gardens it is not possible to cover adequately with stable manure. September and October are the months in which the humus problem must be met, if at all.

How is Ethiopia getting along these days? We have heard scarcely anything from it since it was run over by civilization.

The Farm and Home

Many changes have taken place in the last decade in the general agricultural practices on the farmhands of Kentucky. With the introduction of modern farm machinery, intensive methods of cultivation have been cleaned for new farmhands.

Grassy and brushy areas have been burned to clear ground for agricultural purposes and to control certain insect pests.

The agricultural changes, when considered collectively from a statewide angle, have had a decided influence on the environment of many species of animal life. Intensive cultivation as now practiced and an abundance of wildlife do not go together.

The farmers years ago followed the practice of allowing certain fields to lay fallow for one year. This system of farming resulted in the formation of well distributed areas covered with a variety of plants which greatly benefited the natural production of birds and animals. By laying idle one year, these fields afforded nesting and hatching sites plenty of desirable range, and most important of all, weeds, grasses, and native legumes volunteered that furnished the necessary food.

The farmer today uses a method of crop rotation that does not call for any land laying idle. Crops follow crops immediately, and the environment necessary for birds and animals is gradually destroyed and the available range reduced.

The modern farm machinery of today was not known ten years ago and for that reason, little attempt was made to cultivate all the land on the farm. Wide hedgerows were left between fields and no great effort was made to cut and burn all brush from ditch banks. In contrast, today cultivation is carried on right up to the fence lines. Shrubby field borders and grassy areas near fields are burned, thus destroying much needed cover. Ditches are also cleaned and burned, resulting in fields of from fifty to five-hundred acres of bare land across which wildlife are reluctant to travel.

Old-fashioned farming was better for the production of wildlife as it provided the necessary types of cover, nesting and den sites and food. Better game environment can be produced on many of our farmhands today by giving more thought to the necessary requirements of birds and animals.

WAYMAN SEEMS FEE IN ACTION

Ref. C. Wayman, Kenton county real estate broker, filed suit in Kenton Circuit Court Thursday against Ellen Elliott, Louis Lee and Mae Thomas for a $2000 commission alleged to be due for negotiation of the sale of a 60-acre farm.

In his petition, Mr. Wayman claims he was employed by Ellen Elliott to find a purchaser for the farm, which is located on Richardson pike, Kenton county. The price for the farm's sale was listed at $4500 and he was to receive a 5 per cent commission for selling it, Mr. Wayman claims.

He alleges further that he introduced Louis Lee as a prospective purchaser of the farm, and that the latter offered $4000, which Ellen Elliott refused. Later, Ellen Elliott entered into a contract with Mr. Lee and conveyed title of the property to Mr. Lee's sister, Mae Thomas, who then executed a deed to the property to Mr. Lee. In seeking to collect his "commission," Mr. Wayman claims Mr. Lee paid full consideration for the property.

CHEVROLET PASS EXPECTED SALES

Chevrolet dealers surpassed projected sales totals in both new and used cars for August, when 42,606 new cars and 107,593 used cars were sold nationally, according to D. H. Vest, Chevrolet dealer, Walton, as he announced the totals today.

"Market indications for new car sales during August projected approximately 38,000" said Mr. Vest, "but Chevrolet dealers exceeded that mark by nearly 5,000. In July they turned a market trend sharply against its normal course by selling 51,071 when projections indicated a possible 40,000 new car sales. The August figures show that they are continuing to sell at a rate that is just below the June rate."

"Projections for used car sales for August indicated that it might be difficult for the Chevrolet dealers to exceed the 100,000 mark. The month's total for more than 107,000 keeps unblemished their astounding record, started 42 months ago of selling more than 100,000 used cars each month. The August used car sales total bring their grand total to 7,883,062 used cars sales since March 1935."

Notwithstanding the record established this summer in new car sales by the dealer organization, used car sales at the same time of August were 17,000 less than at the same time last year, Mr. Vest said.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

SHOOT 'EM IN SERIES

"Wonder could I chew my way out of her?"

"Mmm—it's a funny taste..."

ANYBODY can take a single snapshot—a landscape here, an informal portrait there. But have you ever tried taking a series, to tell a complete story of an incident, or to picture a person more effectively?

Summer activities offer all sorts of chances for series pictures. Wherever there is fun—on a party, a picnic, a motor trip, an afternoon at the swimming pool or beach—you find amusing occurrences which are best pictured thus. One picture tells part of the story. Several pictures "follow through" and tell all of it. The incidents don't have to be unusual. Good "first" series can be made out of the cutting of a watermelon, a small boy blowing up a balloon until it bursts. Try picturing a child's tea party in this fashion—the small girl playing hostess to her dolls and pets. Also, try "expression" snaps of the baby in his outdoor crib.

Sports series are good. For instance, a man catching a fish. Show him baiting, casting, playing the fish, landing it, dropping it into the creel or threading it on the string. Later on, snap a picture to complete the series—the fish on the table at home, or the fisherman back at his office, describing his catch.

The series-picture idea can be applied to a thousand variations. Series pictures have extra "punch," because each picture supports and reinforces the next. A series of five good expression shots of the baby—laughing, crying, "crowing," questioning, shouting, and so on—is better than five unrelated shots.

One picture may be just a paragraph, but a series is a complete story. Try such picture stories this summer. Nature stories are good, if you have a focusing camera, or a portrait attachment for your box camera. For example, picture a squirrel accepting a nut, taking enough pictures to tell the complete story.

Don't miss series pictures this season. They're immense camera fun!

EMPLOYERS WARNED TO HAVE SECURITY NUMBERS

Employers who take over an established business should obtain a new employer's social security identification number according to Frank B. Decker, Jr., Manager of the Social Security Field Office in Covington.

"Every employer of one or more who is engaged in commerce or industry is required by the Social Security Act to pay taxes under the old-age insurance plan. This tax consists of one percent of the averaged wages of workers and a contribution of a like amount from the wages of those who are employed."

"When a person buys out or takes over the business of another the new owner must have his own social security identification number and is not permitted to continue to use the old number. Contributions and taxes under this plan, for the current quarter, are due not later than the last day of October and are payable to the U. S. Collector of Internal Revenue at Covington."

"Our field office at Covington serves the counties of Boone, Bracken, Campbell, Gallatin, Grant, Kenton, and Pendleton. We have forms which are used in obtaining both employer's identification number also workers, social security account numbers. Mr. Decker asserted."

NOT ALWAYS EFFECTIVE COMPENSATION NOTICES

V. E. Barnes, Executive Director of the Kentucky Unemployment Compensation Commission, today cautioned employers in receipt of delinquency notices from the Commission, that such notices do not always refer to delinquencies in reporting payment of contributions.

"Many employers," Barnes said "who receive delinquency notices from the Commission jump at the conclusion that such notices refer to the payment of contributions. Many times such notices refer to the fact that the employer has failed to file the individual wage and related reports rather than contribution reports.

"If the employer receiving such notices would note carefully the wording of the notices, it is clearly stated upon each the exact period for which the delinquency is in effect and the reports which have not been filed."

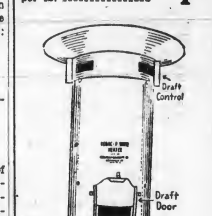

"By reading such notices carefully the employer will, in many cases, find that his impression that the notice relates to delinquencies in contributions is a mistaken one and that such notice, in fact, refers instead to the filing of other reports."

In ever so many cases another thing that doesn't improve with age is life.

INCREASED LOSS IN MARKETING ANIMALS

Despite improved methods for handling livestock more and more millions of animals are injured yearly in marketing, with a loss estimated at $12,000,000. Kentucky's share in this loss is not known, but the College of Agriculture at Lexington puts it at several thousand dollars.

The National Live Stock Prevention Board says that extensive use of trucks in marketing livestock has tended to increase losses. Trucks are overloaded, different kinds of stock together in the same truck, without partitions; improper bedding used; animals injured in loading and unloading, and large losses incurred by the brutal use of clubs and canes.

Partitions are recommended where cattle, hogs or sheep are transported in one truck. Filling a truck with cattle, and then crowding in hogs and sheep, should be avoided. Loading chutes should be constructed and carefully placed so the stock can get from the pen into the truck without injury. Canvas covers are useful in cold or wet weather, or to protect stock from sun in hot weather.

Farmers are urged to employ only reliable truckers, who own good trucks, load and unload with care and drive carefully.

An Indian passed them carrying a basket strapped to his back and supported from his brow with thongs. It was filled to the rim with purple grapes. The Governor stopped him, and a note on a list he carried in his hand.

"Twenty baskets of grapes," he said. "Hm," to the Indian, "that will be enough grapes. No more to today. Vayase?" The Indian plucked his head.

"Yes," continued the Governor, following the basket of grapes with his eyes, "that will have to be enough. We must have enough left for the village. But I have already sent them barrels of wine, so I do not think I am selfish. Do you?"

"Pues, no!" cried the boy. "And too, we would not have any grapes for the fiesta, the vendimia. And we must have, mustn't we? And won't it be soon?"

"Yes, I think it will be soon. Yes, we must have a great big wine year . . . just for ourselves. It has been nice to have the Franciscans here, but it will be nice to have a party just for ourselves. I think there is a little bull that is ready to meet a torero, and there is another that will make a barbecue. And we will have some horse-races, and some cock-fights, and some of the Indian boys will wrestle, and there will be music and dancing. At de mi, what a vendimia it will be!"

"And Mother will sit on a throne with grapes and leaves on her head for a crown, and be queen of the fiesta!"

"Yes, yes, and again yes! Look, they hurry down to the beach to see who comes?"

It was an Indian messenger from the camp of La Perouse, asking that something.

As they reached the beach, they could see a cloud of smoke, and a strange activity going on. On coming closer they discovered La Gobiernadora with Angustia, and almost all of the people of the presidio, who had evidently been summoned hastily by a messenger from La Perouse.

The Frenchman came hurrying to Pedro Pages.

"I had a thought at the last minute," he said hurriedly. "You have been so wonderful to me, all of you people here, that I wanted to give an occasion special for you. We are to have a balloon ascension!"

"Balloon ascension!" exclaimed the Governor. "I have heard of balloons but never seen one."

"Regard, then," said La Perouse dramatically, "there is a balloon which was given up to take on our voyage around the world. Why, I do not know, unless it was to impress people around the globe that Frenchmen now make balloons!"

"What good they can ever be, I can not see, but they say some day they will be made strong enough to carry men."

"There will never be one strong enough to carry me!" laughed Pages. He and young Pedro dismounted and hurried on foot after La Perouse to where the great muslin bag was slowly filling with smoke, its rounded sides showing strange designs and pictures.

"We have had it up once before on this trip," explained La Perouse. "That was in Lima. I hope it will ascend now!" he said anxiously.

And at last it did. Slowly it staggered into the air.

Everyone regarded it with amazement. Some of the Indians muttered, and several old women prostrated themselves on the ground. Accompanied with a chorus of incredulous ejaculations it rose the full length of the cord that tethered it, then, as a fresh late afternoon breeze puffed in from the sea and threatened, it was brought down again.

"Per Dios!" exclaimed the Governor of California, greatly pleased and amazed. "Mil gracias to you, Senor el Conde, for such a miracle! A balloon raised from the shore of California! It will never happen again, and will be something to remember all our lives."

"And it will be something for me to remember all my life, that I have visited your California. More, I can not say. And now . . ."

"And now," replied the Governor with a slight formality which he assumed to cover his real feelings, "and now my friends, I suppose the time has come for us to say, as you French put it, adieu!"

"Your Spanish word, adios, is the same, Monsieur le Gouverneur. Both speed the parting guest in the care of God."

"Yes, we must say those words. For we must not hinder your departure with our curiosity, and there are things I must attend to at the presidio. But be sure, Senor el Conde, that at whatever hour you call we shall be here on shore, watching you as far as we can see. And wherever you shall sail, you will be in our hearts. Thank you for visiting us."

The two men gripped hands. La Perouse was frankly moved.

"Thank you for everything. The friendliness, the courtesy, the hospitality and your gifts of fruit and wine. We will appreciate those, surely. And even for the goat and the chickens, and . . . Mon Dieu I can not say more. My feelings . . . pardonnez moi . . ."

He turned to Eulalia, who was standing quietly beside her husband, her eyes on Dagobert.

"And, to you ma Reine de Californie, my respects for your fortitude and loyalty in being such a wonderful woman in the midst of such a remote country."

Eulalia's lips moved, but her remark were inaudible as the Count kissed her hand. There were other farewells, then the Governor, followed by his soldiers and Indian bearers, his wife on one hand and his son at the other, moved away from the camp on the beach.

As they rode the Governor and his wife were each very silent, busy with their own thoughts. Young Pedro prattled beside them.

Observe 150th Anniversary of Cincinnati At Carthage Fair

The sesquicentennial of the Northwest Territory will be celebrated along with the 150th anniversary of the founding of Cincinnati with festive programs at the eighty-third annual Greater Cincinnati and Carthage Fair, at Cincinnati, Tuesday through Saturday, September 13 to 17, according to plans announced by former Governor Myers V. Cooper president of the Fair Board.

In the honor of the anniversaries an additional night has been added to the customary four days of the Carthage Fair. The gates will be thrown open at 6 o'clock Tuesday night, September 13—and that occasion will be observed strictly as an occasion for revelry. It has been designated as "Carnival Night." It will be a holiday for masqueraders, cash prizes being offered for the best costumes. All persons in costume will be admitted free. There will be a great parade around the race track, in the best floats. A Queen of the Carnival will be chosen —her prize will be a trip to the New York World's Fair, with all expense paid. Drum corps and drill team contests will be another highlight of the evening.

A free circus, featuring Rauml's seven show and the Red Devil Drivers, and fireworks will be de features. Smith's Military Band will provide continuous every afternoon and evening.

Grand Circuit horses are among those that will compete for the rich purses at the daily harness races Wednesday to Saturday, inclusive. Some of the finest show horses in the Middle West will be presented in the horse show, starting Wednesday night, and continuing every afternoon and evening thereafter. Four clubs will stage a night program featuring a demonstration of Old Folk Dances and Quadrilles.

Three colorful parades will be staged during the Fair. The first will be the Carnival Night Mardi Gras parade; the second the "million-dollar live stock parade" on Thursday; the third, a Children's Parade on Friday.

Highlighted among the new features in the agricultural displays will be a competitive exhibition of hybrid corn—the first time this newly-developed corn will be shown at the Carthage Fair.

Wednesday will be celebrated as Agricultural and Industrial Day; Thursday as County Commissioners' and Public Officials' Day; Friday as Northwest Territory and Children's Day; and Saturday as Cincinnati and Sesqui-Centennial Day.

Children under 15 years of age will be admitted free on Friday as guests of Governor Cooper and the Fair Board.

OHIO EDITOR TAKES SNAPPY COMEBACK

Each week Editor and Publisher prints a special feature column entitled "Short Takes" which recounts humorous happenings in the O'Farrell Estate. A recent edition contained this rather amusing item:

Robert H. Reynolds, editor of the Lakewood (Ohio) Times was on an inspection tour of the local asylum. An inmate came up to Reynolds and said:

"What are you in here for, Buddy?"

The editor decided to humor the patient. "I tried to make money in the newspaper business," he told the man.

The lunatic looked at the editor and said: "Buddy, you aren't crazy, you're just a plain damn fool!"

NORTH KY. WEEK SET FOR SEPT. 19-26

Purpose of the week is to acquaint consumers with the services performed for them by the retail merchants and to bring about a more thorough realization of the stores and is a National drive of retail merchants.

To lend their support to the movement several of Northern Kentucky's leading bankers and business executives issued statements commending the movement, and recommending that the public make their purchases now before prices advanced this Fall. The war scare in Europe may cause a slight rise in price of imported goods, and now is the time to buy. Among the statements released to the press are the following:

"Business in Northern Kentucky reflects the faith that our citizens have in the future of our Nation. I heartily commend the movement and recommend that our people take full advantage of the unusual opportunities to be presented next week."

—Edward A. Vosmer, President, First National Bank and Trust Co., Covington.

"The merchants of Northern Kentucky are happy to join with business leaders of the Nation in a move to increase the purchases of its citizens and thereby aid in national recovery. We are glad to endorse this worthy cause and wish to extend to the people of our community our sincere cooperation in the present 'back-to-work' buying campaign program."

—Dieke State Bank, Chas. W. Thompson, Cashier, Walton.

"The People of Northern Kentucky should take full advantage of National Recovery Week; money will never buy more than at present and your dollar will start wheels of industry. Join it wholeheartedly today."

—C. A. Moorman, President, Peoples-Liberty Bank and Trust Co., Covington.

In planning the week, a representative group of Covington and Newport merchants met Friday and again Monday afternoon. William Macklin is chairman of the committee in charge of the special week.

During this week the new fall fashions will be unveiled. Retail promotions and window displays will be tuned to tell the romance of retailing in northern Kentucky. The importance of the business recovery movement and the growth of local retail payrolls will be brought to the fore. Next week the public will be in on the secrets of what transpired six months ago to enable milled to be served with a new fall outfit of clothing or to step to the counter and buy the latest fashion novelty in toilet goods. What was the buyer and stylist doing to determine in New York six months ago what men would wear this fall and what would be the leading fabrics for the fall ensemble? This just another of the phases of their fascinating story which the local merchants will be telling you during the big week beginning September 19.

With the "Reds"

By Leland G. Allen

The battling Cincinnati Reds are now making their last swing through the East, well aware that this trip will settle their pennant ambitions. Eighteen games will have been played before the Redlegs return to Crosley Field on September 30 to meet the league-leading Pittsburgh Pirates.

To complete their play with the East this season, the Reds will play a three-game series with the Giants at the Polo Grounds, with the first game scheduled for September 20. They will then go to Pittsburgh to play a most crucial series of three contests with the Bucs, and then journey to St. Louis for a similar number of tilts with the Cards.

The Reds will meet the Pirates at Crosley Field on September 30 in a double-header and a single game on October 1 and 2. This latter game will sound taps for the 1938 season. It is entirely possible that this final series with Pittsburgh will settle the hectic National League race. Seven significant games between the Reds and Pirates remain to be played and on their outcome the crop for the flag will depend.

Tickets for the Pittsburgh series will be on sale at the Struss Cigar Store, Sixth and Walnut Streets, by September 23.

STAFFORDSBURG MISSIONARY SOCIETY MEETS

The business meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. Barkness. The members voted on sending a box to Miss Betty Allen. Mrs. Dawson Ballenger was appointed leader for the next meeting which will be the second Thursday in November. We wish to welcome all the ladies from our church to come out and join us.

KENTUCKY UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION NEWS

Payments made by workers to the Kentucky Unemployment Insurance Fund can not be repaid to the estate of a deceased worker, V. E. Barnes, Executive Director of the Kentucky Unemployment Compensation Commission, declared today in response to several inquiries received by the Commission.

"The Kentucky Unemployment Insurance Law differs from the Old Age provisions of the Social Security Act in this respect," Barnes explained. "In the case of Old Age Insurance, where a separate account is maintained for each worker which accumulates until the worker reaches 65 or dies prior to that age, it is possible to pay death benefits without affecting the rights of other workers as each have similar accounts."

"In the case of unemployment insurance, the procedure is different and there are no separate accounts for each employee, for if the worker received an unemployment benefit only what he and his employer paid in his behalf, it would take the worker years to accumulate enough money to be of any material assistance if he became unemployed.

"Accordingly, unemployment insurance acts upon the same risk features as govern commercial insurance. In other words, it is contemplated that of 100 men employed only a certain percentage will be unfortunate enough to lose their position. The amounts paid by all if necessary, be used to pay benefits to those becoming unemployed. The solvency of the fund will not be affected by the principle, as is attested by the soundness of commercial insurance companies as a whole, and the fact that the law covers over 300,000 workers. No one can picture a depression in which all of the 300,000 workers would become unemployed at the same time.

"The whole principle of unemployment insurance would collapse if the Commission were required to hold in trust contributions paid by workers, this fund to be paid to the estate of the worker upon his death. The Commission could not pay benefits for unemployment for it would be necessary that all money collected be held pending the death of the worker."

To Curb Speeding Through Elsmere And Erlanger

Acting on request of petitioning residents, Kenton county constables are patrolling Dixie Highway in and near Elsmere and Elsmere.

The move was sanctioned Tuesday by the Northern Kentucky Division of the Cincinnati Automobile Club "as long as no attempt is made to create a 'speed trap'."

Three motorists were arrested late yesterday by Constable Jack Spicer on improper driving and speeding charges. Constable D. D. Scott and Constable John Ralston also will assist in the attempt to break what some residents describe as "a terrible situation" in the two towns.

Marshal Fred Hauer, Erlanger, said the town board at its last meeting requested him "to do something about improper traffic flow through the city. It will be discussed at a board meeting Wednesday night, he said.

Mt. of his work is as a foot patrolman, and it was thought wise to seek traffic patrol aid from a state highway department motorcycle officer. However, since two weeks ago the status of the state patrol is dubious.

Consequently, residents along the highway petitioned the constables asking them to come into the cities and enforce the traffic laws.

The constables in a statement Wednesday said it is not their intention to make a speed trap out of the two towns.

"Motorists driving at a reasonable rate of speed through Erlanger and Elsmere, say about 35 miles per hour will not be cited," they declared.

FORMER RESIDENT DIES SUNDAY

Mrs. Christine Owens Buried Wednesday

Mrs. Christine Owens passed this life at Christ Hospital, Cincinnati, Sunday, September 18, after a serious illness of 18 days duration. She had, however, been in declining health since last January.

Mrs. Owens came to Walton as assistant cashier of the Dixie State Bank, January 1931. For the last five years she has made her home with Miss Lovelia Edwards, South Main Street, Walton, Ky. During this time a most intimate and beautiful friendship developed between these two ladies surpassing that of most sisters.

Since coming to Walton, Mrs. Owens has won and made many friends, both in the church and the community. She was a devoted and active member of the Walton Christian Church, however, she was liberal in her views toward other churches and made many friends among the members.

She was efficient in her work as assistant cashier of the banks in which she labored, having been thus employed in the Southern Exchange Bank, Latonia, Ky., at the time of her break down in health.

She is survived by her son, Arthur Owens, now living with his uncle in (Continued on page four)

WORLD SERIES TO START OCTOBER 5

Unless the National League race ends in a tie, the 1938 World Series will open on Wednesday, October 5, with the first two games scheduled in the home of the National League.

The third, fourth and fifth games will be played in the Yankee Stadium, with the sixth and seventh, if necessary, returning to the National League city.

This was decided at a conference between Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis and Representatives of the five clubs involved—the American League, and the Pittsburgh Pirates, New York Giants, Cincinnati Reds and Chicago Cubs, from the National. Ford Frick, president of the National League, and Will O. Harridge, head of the American League, also attended.

All games will begin at 1:30 p. m., standard time, unless there is a Sunday game in New York, in which event hostilities will start at 2 p. m. (E. S. T.).

If the National League race should end in a tie, which is unlikely, the blue ribbon event of baseball will be started the third day after the tie is decided. It would be up to Frick to decide when the tie should be played off. He indicated today the play-off would be held on Tuesday following the close of the season on Oct. 2.

PERSONAL PROPERTY SALE AT GLENCOE

Jesse Webster announces this week that he will sell his personal property at his residence in Glencoe on Saturday, October 1 at 1:30 p. m. A large lot of farming implements and household goods will be disposed of. Col. Matthew Flynn of Walton will be auctioneer.

ADVERTISER CONTEST BRINGS MANY FAN ENTRIES

Many Entries Received To Late For Judging

It is very true that the readers of the Walton Advertiser take delight in joining the "True or False" fans of the nation. It is also true that a number of them dug down in dictionaries and encyclopedias for their questions sent in this week. The lists came in from every point in the Advertiser's circulation, and the judges were "stymied" in selecting the right entry for the brand new dollar bill given as the prize.

After closing the entries on Tuesday night the judges selected the list of ten "Is It True or False" questions and answers submitted by Roland Glenn, Kinston, N. C., a former Walton baseball and basketball star, and the first bright, shining new dollar goes forward to him for this week's prize winner.

The Advertiser appreciates the efforts of those who did not win the prize, and suggests that you send in another set this week. It costs nothing to get in the race, and you may be the lucky person next week. Entries close Tuesday night of each week. There were several lists that were received too late for the judges to consider this week, and they will be entered in the next judging.

It's really fun to hunt up the questions and answers—because the question does not have to be true. It's a fascinating fun for young or old, and there is no age limit for contestants, six or sixty. It makes no difference, for it's the "Is It True or False" entries that count. More than one list may be submitted at a time.

Suit Asks Barring Of Barkley's Name On Election Ballot

Suit was filed last week in Franklin Circuit Court, Frankfort, Ky. seeking to have the name of Senator Alben W. Barkley, Democratic nominee for re-election, stricken from the November election ballot. The action was filed by Charles E. Lester and Lawrence Riedinger, Newport attorneys.

A judgement for the plaintiffs might mean that Senator Barkley, and possibly Governor A. B. Chandler, defeated by Barkley in the primary, would not be permitted to run on the Democratic ticket and that both Senator Barkley and Governor Chandler would be candidates on an independent ticket in the November election, according to the two attorneys.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA ACCEPTS BRITISH-FRENCH PEACE TERMS

Germany to Annex Sudeten Area Soon

Czechoslovakia's leaders at Prague surrendered to Great Britain and France Wednesday, ending their defiance of Germany.

It was announced semi-officially the cabinet had agreed to accept the British-French plan for dismemberment of the country, subject to approval of the Coalition Committee representing government parties in Parliament.

The cabinet's decision was flashed immediately to Paris and Berlin—to be relayed to Godesburg where Adolf Hitler was to receive today (Thursday) the British-French-Czechoslovak surrender to his demands for cession of the Sudeten German area of Czechoslovakia.

Not only had Czech leaders feared they were condemning their people to death if they defied the great powers; they feared the people themselves might rebel if they surrendered.

Knowing the shock the country faced, the government suspended trading on the stock exchange indefinitely in a decree issued as the parliamentary committee met.

Community Chest to Get Proceeds of Welfare Day

MRS. JOHN CONRAD PASSES SUDDENLY

Active Church and Community Affairs

Mrs. John W. Conrad of Edwards Avenue, wife of John Conrad, mayor of Walton, died suddenly Friday evening, September 16, after being in failing health for several months. She was very active in social circles in Walton, and took special interest in the Parent-Teachers Association of the Walton-Vernon school.

She was an active member of the First Christian church of Walton for many years and was a kind and loving wife and mother.

Funeral services were held Monday at the Christian Church in the presence of a large audience of relatives and friends. Reverend J. M. Ervin, was the officiating minister and conducted the services in a very impressive manner.

Beautiful music was rendered by the choir, Mrs. Livia Wills accompanied.

She leaves to mourn her passing: her husband, a son, Harold; two daughters, Majorie and Wanda; her mother, Mrs. Sophronia Farrell; two brothers, Lawrence and John Farrell. Interment was in Highland Cemetery. The floral offerings were numerous and beautiful.

Funeral arrangements were in charge of Chambers and Grubbs.

Latonia Jockey Club Donates Racing Day To Aid Unfortunates

The horse, "man's best friend," is going to do his bit for helpless children. The Latonia Jockey Club has turned over to a civic committee headed by Timothy S. Goodman its entire racing plant for Monday, September 26, the entire proceeds to be turned over to the Community Chest. The occasion is to be known as Child Welfare Day at the Latonia Races. The Community Chest has agreed to distribute the funds thus raised among the child caring institutions of Cincinnati and Northern Kentucky.

Not only the gate receipts, but the track's usual percentage on the mutuels, the profits of the clubhouse restaurant and all concessions, will be included in the proceeds to be over to the Community Chest. Even the Latonia employees are assisting the cause by donating their services for the occasion—in other words, contributing a day's salary to the cause.

According to Clifford R. Wright, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Community Chest, this means that more than 3,000 children now being cared for by the various child caring agencies, will benefit through this action.

Revival Season

For the past few weeks, and for the next few, too, the citizens of our community have had and will have the opportunity to hear the Lord's Messengers in great revival meetings in Walton and the surrounding communities. The spiritual uplifting of our citizens is one that few people can afford to overlook, for it is the church and its teachings that wield its great influence for good citizenship in this country.

The Baptist Church closed their revival Friday night with thirty-three converts and others renewing their faith. Twenty-one were baptized Sunday evening by Reverend Arnold in the local church in the presence of a large audience.

The Christian Church revival, under Reverend J. M. Ervin, pastor will start their soul-saving crusade September 26 with Reverend Lee Davis Fisher as the evangelist. With your help this campaign can deliver great results for our community.

Warning Given Drivers

Kenton County constables have been requested by the citizens of Elvenger and Elsmere for protection from the speeding motorists that "zip" through their communities. The desire for stricter enforcement follows on the heels of a campaign for traffic regulations that were inaugurated early this year.

The letter, in part, presented a real plea for the prevention of accidents, and to eliminate the reckless driver. From it we select the following excerpts:

"The situation is such that it is impossible to cross the highway in safety at any hour of the day or night. Our children cannot go to school anywhere in safety no matter how careful they may be. We feel that drastic conditions such as certainly exist in our communities should be met with drastic measures."

Officers have issued new warnings that 30 mile speed limit will be enforced through these communities, and 40 miles per hour in other sections.

Owen County Son Is Honored

One of Owen County's prominent sons received greater honors when Governor Albert B. Chandler appointed James W. Cammack Jr., as Judge of the Court of Appeals of Kentucky. Judge Cammack fills the vacancy caused by the death of Judge William Rogers Clay.

Judge Cammack has received much acclaim in the past few years—following his graduation from Law school of the University of Kentucky—and was serving as a member of the Public Service Commission when elevated to the Bench.

That Governor Chandler has a high regard for the ability of the young jurist has been manifested on various occasions. Judge W. Cammack, has served his native state with undivided devotion. His background is sufficient to warrant the belief that he will acquit himself creditably as a judge of the state's highest tribunal.

Political Pot Is Boiling

Intense national interest in primaries and elections are due to the fact—well recognized in Washington—that political realignments are taking place inside the old parties. The Democratic party has been split into two national factions, the "Liberals" who are followers of the President, and the "Conservatives," or those who wish to preserve our nation on a conservative basis.

On the other hand the Republican party is being unconsciously divided—one-half progressive—one-half conservative, again. In that part former President Hoover, Landon and Vandenberg are the most visible leaders.

Somebody asks whether President Roosevelt will support the nominee of the Democratic party of 1940? Another asks "Will Hoover, Norris, Landon, etc., pull together in 1940?"

What are we going to do about this? Well, you say: There are tens of thousands of hybrids and miscellaneous sorts of politicians. They'll come out for identification during the next two years. The Nation will wait patiently.

—And Sudden Death

Last year a state trooper of my acquaintance stopped a big red sedan for speeding. Papa was obviously a responsible person, set for a pleasant week-end with his family—the officer cut into papa's well-bred expositions: "T'll let you off this time, but if you keep up on this way, you won't last long. Get going—but take it easier."

Later a passing motorist hailed the trooper and asked if the red sedan had got a ticket. "No," said the trooper, "I hated to spoil their party." "Too bad you didn't," said the motorist "I saw you stop them—and then I passed that car again 50 miles up the line. It still makes me feel sick at my stomach. The car was all folded up like an accordion—the color was about all there was left. They were all dead but one of the kids—and he wasn't going to live in the hospital."

Maybe it will make you sick at your stomach too. But unless you're a heavy-footed incurable, a good look at the picture the artist wouldn't dare paint, a first-hand acquaintance with the results of speed and bad judgement, ought to be well worth your while. I can't help it if the facts are revolting. If you have the nerve to drive fast and take chances you ought to have the nerve to take the appropriate cure. You can't ride an ambulance or watch the doctor working on the victim in the hospital, but you can read.

"Wagner Act Sound"

Editorials From Daily Press

Senator ARTHUR VANDENBERG, of Michigan, speaking at Grand Rapids, declared the Wagner Act sound in protecting labor's right to organize and bargain collectively, but says it should be modified to restrict Federal control.

This declaration, from a leading Republican and ardent critic of the present Administration, doubtless not his first virtually leaves friendless those conservatives who still cling to the old-time idea that collective bargaining should not be fostered by Federal laws.

Those who oppose unionization are not confined to one political party. Some declare themselves Democrats. Others are Republicans. Neither group can vote under the emblem of a political party that shares their views.

There isn't a party which would go before the people of the United States in the fourth decade of the Twentieth Century and oppose collective bargaining, supported by law.

The Wagner Act may have to go through the wringer from time to time for its improvement.

Its improvement may not be what Senator VANDENBURG believes it should be. But public sentiment will not support recession from the position that workmen are entitled to liberty and pursuit of happiness when they want to form unions and relieve themselves from a system under which the power of the employer is autocratic.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Live Wire Briar Hopper

DIXIE STORIES, ANECDOTES, SAYINGS; SOME OLD, SOME NEW, SOME ORIGINAL AND SOME OTHERWISE

By WILL S. NORRIS
5582 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio

Before the World War our country was having trouble with Mexico. We had a friend who had an only son in college. When they were drafting the best young men, out of our colleges, or wherever they saw fit to take them from, my friend said his wife could not eat or sleep, for fear they would draft her son, as they had already drafted his college room-mate.

We took the stand that we thought all wars were wrong, especially to send some of our good boys to be killed to protect the money interests of the millionaires. My friend took issue with me, saying we would protect our American interests. My reply was the capitalists went there for their own selfish interests knowing they were taking chances.

In fact, greed, aggrandizement and increase of power to control are the foundation of most wars and after quite a heated argument, I reminded my friend that he had told me that he and his wife were both very much disturbed because of the fear their boy would be drafted. I said to him that he was willing for the other mother and father to give up their boy to be sacrificed but were unwilling for their boy to go. In other words the shoe was on the other foot.

He finally said he supposed there were two sides to this war business. I said, "No brother, there is only one side. Every mother, father, brother and sister in this grand country of ours should oppose war. I am glad to hear over the radio Protestant ministers, Catholic Priests, Rabbis are opposing war more and stronger than ever before, which we think all churches and good citizens should unite on. We'll say further, that all nations should encourage the great World Court conference that meets regularly as a means of bringing about world peace."

The Wages of . . . ?

CYCLE OF HOUSES—I

First the log house, then the boxed house, then the framed house—that would summarize a family that I have known and at the same time summarize three whole periods of American history. In the very nature of things this order is the one to be expected; our stage of development could not have decreed otherwise.

When the pioneers came to Kentucky, forests were nearly everywhere. Saws were then unknown, partly because of the accessibility of the great tool of civilization, was the companion of the gun. From the native forests the trees were cut and built into a cabin, rude and small at first but growing, as easier times came, until one might build a log mansion. Such a one is the home of the late General Simon Bolivar Buckner, in Hart County. Between these two extremes are all the combinations of the simple log pen, the two rooms in front and dog-trot behind, the two-story front with an L. When saws became more common and especially saw mills, weatherboarding and ceiling covered over many a log house that today maybe on the fashionable street of a good-sized town.

The boxed house rapidly grew up partly because of the accessibility of sawed lumber and partly because of the ease with which such a house could be built. With some cut nails and a hammer, almost any amateur carpenter could build such a house. The simplest form was made of undressed lumber and stripped. There is still something very gratifying about the sight of such a house when it is properly built, a something that has made it reappear in many a summer cottage in our own times. More elaborate boxed houses were weatherboarded and celled, and even painted. Some parts of the state today have many of these houses, ranging from very small cottages to really elaborate houses.

With increasing ease of life and desire for comfort, men began to build frame houses. Local customs largely determined the size, plan, and materials. Whole areas are or were regions of the standard "big" house: two rooms in front and a hall between, both upstairs and down, with an L of one story. In New England the gambrel roof was common, but in this part of the world it is rarely seen. This sort of big house usually had a chimney at either end, with fireplaces on each story. There is nothing rare about this kind of house, for the carpenters did their work so well that hundreds of these symbols of respectability and rural prosperity are everywhere.

The furnishings suited the type of house. Americans have been forever changing from the older to the newer. The log cabin had its crude and meager furniture, the boxed house added somewhat to this; the frame house would have been ashamed of itself if it had not been furnished in the latest style. Rather humorously some of the best furniture that Kentuckians ever had was discarded as old-fashioned when the family moved in to the frame house, furniture that was later found in the store rooms or smokehouses and valued as antiques.

Of course, the brick and stone houses came along in the natural course of events, but they have never been, until recently, any very large part of Kentucky rural life. Hardly a neighborhood exists that does not have some one or two old brick mansions, rare in their early days and quite as rare in some parts of the state today. For all practical purposes Kentucky until the last few decades has been the place of the log house, followed in turn by the boxed and the frame.

FARMERS PROVIDE HUNTING

GROUND, SAYS DEPARTMENT

The only hunting grounds that could be made available to the general public without the wholehearted support of the farmers would entail the purchase of great tracts of land, to be managed by government officers at a great expense. This is a fantastic picture, even in this era of most active sportsmen are more interested in gaining the cooperation of the farmer by insuring him real benefits from game.

Every farmer knows game is of value to him in various ways. He better than anyone else, understands that every form of life is dependent upon many others. He can see the quail, dove and other birds, too, devouring the grasshoppers, crickets, cutworms and beetles that would otherwise destroy his crops. He appreciates this to the extent that he can overlook an occasional raid on cultivated food.

As for those values that cannot be weighed in dollars and cents, rare is the farmer who can turn under a bird's nest with his plow without its many forms lends to his existence a richness that makes his labor at least a little lighter. In another very personal way game and fish mean much to him. In the past three or four decades many a farmer has sadly taken leave of his boys just as they were coming into manhood. The city with its many attractions had lured them away. This is, of course, bound to continue to some extent and, if the farm loses any more of its appeal, it will be harder for the farmer to keep his sons around him. Every normal boy loves to hunt and fish. But if wildlife is allowed to be completely destroyed, this hold, too, on the boy will be lost, for what would farm life be without a chance to bag a few rabbits or catch a string of perch or bass during the occasional free hours.

There are, of course, many problems to be working out, but where sportsmen and farmers have joined together in sincere cooperation, practicable game management plans satisfactory to both groups have almost invariably been devised. The Division of Game and Fish urges this cooperation between the sportsmen and the farmers and asks both parties concerned to put their shoulders to the wheel to make Kentucky one of the best hunting and fishing states in the Union.

HOMEMAKERS TO HAVE PROMINENT PART IN RURAL LIFE MEETING

Sessions of special interest to homemakers will have a prominent place in the program of the annual convention of the American Country Life Association at the University of Kentucky at Lexington Nov. 1-4.

Nov. 2 the national conference on the rural home will be held as part of the National Rural Forum in connection with the Country Life Association meeting. Miss Grace Frysinger, senior home economist of the extension division of the United States Department of Agriculture will preside. Following a general session addressed by Carl Taylor, noted economist, eight discussion groups will be formed. Each group will consider phases of the problem of country-city relations. A summary of findings will be presented at the general meeting the following day.

On Tuesday, November 1 the national Master Farm Homemakers Guild will meet in Lexington, with representatives from every state. Miss Beas Rowe, of The Farmer's Wife magazine that originally sponsored the homemakers' guild movement, will have part on the program. Members of the Kentucky guild recently met to form plans for the day.

The National Home Demonstration Council, made up of home demonstration leaders and agents, will also meet Nov. 1. Among problems they will consider will be ways in which women can further the cause of world peace. At a dinner in the evening, Dean Thomas P. Cooper of the Kentucky College of Agriculture will be the speaker.

HOT SOUP WILL HIT THE SPOT THIS CRISP FALL WEATHER

By MARIE GIBSON,
Courier-Journal Food Editor.

"Let's have soup!" It's a familiar chorus these days... every member of the family welcomes a savory steaming bowl.

Why not work out your luncheon menu on a three-point plan with soup as the first course? Add a sturdy sandwich and a fresh, crisp salad—and presto, the meal is complete, palatable and nutritious.

It's very fashionable to serve the soup from a tureen—it's sensible, too, for the servante's home. Just place the tureen on the table, serve the bowls and pass them to your guests. Try some of these simple menus for lunch:

Vegetable Soup Melba, Toast, Toasted Peanut Butter and Jelly Sandwiches, Fresh Fruit and Marshmallow Salad, Milk

Cream of Tomatoes Soup, Toasted Salines, White Cream Cheese and Cucumber Sandwiches, Pineapple Gelatin Salad with Whipped Cream Dressing, Hot Tea

Cream of Mushroom Soup, Cheese Wafers, Club Sandwich, Olives, Waldorf Salad, Almonds, Coffee

If you make your own soup you'll want to clip these recipes for your files:

CREAM OF TOMATO SOUP

Five medium tomatoes, 1 small onion, stalk with a few cloves, 1/4 teaspoon salt, bit of bay leaf, bit of red pepper pod, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1-2 cups evaporated milk (1 tall can).

Cut tomatoes and cook with seasonings slowly until tender. Press through a sieve. There will be about two cups. Scald milk. Blend butter and flour. Stir into hot milk and cook over boiling water until slightly thickened. Add hot tomato pulp and serve at once. Yield: Four to six servings.

CREAM OF MUSHROOM SOUP

One and one-half cups canned soup, 1/4 cup cream, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon minced onions, 1 teaspoon minced green peppers (optional), 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon paprika, 1-3 cup milk.

Mix soup and cream. Heat until "smoking." Add to butter which has been melted and in which onions and peppers have been slightly browned. Let simmer for two minutes. Add remaining ingredients. Heat until hot. Serve.

And speaking of soups—have you ever tried toasted cheese pinwheels as an accompaniment to onion soup? Just slice a loaf of bread lengthwise about one-half an inch thick, spread with a mixture of sharp cheese, creamed, roll as you would a jelly roll and wrap in a piece of wax paper. Roll in a damp towel and place in the refrigerator. Leave in the box about one hour, then slice crosswise, fasten each wheel with a toothpick and toast on both sides. Serve immediately.

NUT BREAD

Have you ever thought that all good breads had to be made stiff and with yeast? If you have, let's depart from this traditional loaf and try the following:

THE GARDEN WINTER STORAGE FOR VEGETABLES VI

By John S. Gardner,
Kentucky College of Agriculture

Last week, was discussed the best possible way to prepare a garden for the winter season, that of sowing a cover crop of small grains preferably with a hardy legume added. Supposing, however, that it is not feasible or easily possible to put in a conventional cover crop, there is one other, namely the greens of the cabbage family and which, though they lack in volume of matter to turn under, and fall short in complete hardness to grow through the winter, are better than nothing.

The suggestions so far are for those gardeners who cannot have the manure their soil needs to keep it in first-class condition, and a majority of gardeners fall in that class. There is, however, a lesser group who do not have that difficulty, but who find each year enough stable manure to cover their gardens thickly, with the result that their humus problem is no problem at all. These should so continue, but perhaps change their practice slightly as follows.

When gardens are level or only slightly sloping, so there is no serious run-off, breaking should be done in late fall, after there have been several severe frosts. The land should not be turned completely over, but the furrow slices should be left on edge.

Breaking at this time, the weeds and crabgrass are given all winter long to rot down. This cost of dry weeds is sometimes a liability, turned under just before gardening is to begin. There is, too, the aesthetic value of putting the debris out of sight.

Breaking after cold weather has driven the insects to winter cover interferes with their plans, turning up the deep-lying ones to freeze, and burying so deeply those that hibernate just at the soil surface that they fail to reach the top again.

Likewise, many garden diseases are controlled, in part, by turning under the spore-laden vegetable plants as they rot down; many disease organisms are destroyed.

Again, with the garden surface rough, winter rains and snows are more readily absorbed, this moisture becoming of service next season.

If the stable manure is spread early in the winter, its soluble plant food is leached into the broken soil and its fibers are softened so that it rots down readily to become humus. Instead of perhaps plaguing the gardener by making soil "drouthy," spread just before spring-breaking. A fall-broken garden may need plowing again in the spring, though not always. Often merely a deep, disking is enough. In fact, a garden broken in the late fall and disked, simply in the spring may be earlier, by several weeks than a garden whose spring plowing is delayed by unsuitable weather.

That is to say, plow your garden in the fall, if the humus source is stable manure, but spread the manure soon after plowing. If manure manure. Preferably let it be rye or wheat or perhaps barley in combination with the legumes, hairy vetch or crimson clover, where the latter is safely winter hardy. But the time to sow a cover crop is slipping by. Thus ends the gardening season for 1938.

Noted Speaker Urges Merchants To Find the 'Sizzle'

ARTHUR C. HORROCKS

Arthur C. Horrocks, widely known industrial relations authority of Akron, O., gave his auditors including a number of Northern Kentucky merchant leaders food for thought in a straight-from-the-shoulder address Friday noon at the Chamber of Commerce Forum luncheon.

The speaker suggested that merchants find the "sizzle" in their business and give customers the facts. The speaker illustrated the difference between good and bad salesmanship and during his talk emphasized the necessity of an awakening from lethargy, the tackling of problems and the overcoming of obstacles.

The theme of his talk was that "pop" sizzle and brains were essentials—that there are plenty of opportunities and a great purchasing power awaiting distribution when the business men of the country people generally "quit sitting down and taking things easy." Horrocks averred that "all most people want to do is to sit down and wait for the clicking of the cash register." During his talk, Horrocks paid tribute to Helen Keller the blind genius, to Edison and to Glenn Cunningham the great runner, whom he said overcame great obstacles.

The speaker insisted the country is better off today than in 1929 and he flashed a glittering array of figures from the Department of Commerce to prove his point.

E. J. Goodenough, president of the Chamber of Commerce, presided.

The Methodist church of Florence announced that the chicken supper that was to be held on September 24, has been postponed to a latter date in October.

SEARS' INCREASES SPENDING IN KENTUCKY

Expenditures of Sears, Roebuck & Co. in the state of Kentucky increased four per cent during last year to reach a total of $3,285,211.

Mr. Francis R. Veir, Manager of Sears store at Covington made known today.

Mr. Veir's figures were taken from a report sent out by Sears' executive offices in connection with the company's 52nd Anniversary celebration with began Thursday September 15 and will continue for 15 days.

Of the total expenditure $2,306,000 covered the cost of manufactured goods purchased from thirty-seven (37) sources located in eight (8) cities and towns. In addition to its expenditures for Kentucky made merchandise, Sears spent the following: for wages and salaries of resident employees, $703,405; for newspaper advertising $149,979; and for rents and taxes, $125,231.

For the past several years it has been the custom of our executive offices to send out this annual report in the various states, said Mr. Veir. Naturally, we at the local Sears store have come to await the report with great interest for we are always anxious to learn the amount our company has contributed towards the betterment of business in this state.

Largely as a matter of personal interest for the members of my staff, upon the receipt of this latest report I made a compilation of Sears expenditures in Kentucky for the past five years, 1933 through 1937 I found that the average yearly expenditure for that period amounts to $2,178,438.

Undoubtedly this sum has proven of great benefit to business in this state during that five year period said Mr. Veir. But in addition it is particularly interesting to note that the company's 1937 expenditures were fifty one per cent higher than the yearly average. This fact in itself indicates that Sears is spending increasingly large sums within the borders of Kentucky.

The executive group of the Kenton County Council Parent-Teacher Association held a school of instruction at the all-day meeting held on Monday, September 19, at the Simon Kenton School, Independence. The meeting opened at 10:00 o'clock, with an address of welcome by Prof. R. O. Hinesdill, principal of the Simon Kenton School, after which the president, Mrs. Rodney Bryson, conducted the business session. The program chairman, Mrs. A. H. Bates, had arranged for a solo to be given by Mr. Winfield Thakes, music director of the school; group singing was led by the council. Other speakers were: Mrs. Clarence Vernon Jones; Mrs. C. T. Walters took for her subject "School of Instruction"; a speech on "Safety" was made by Mr. O. W. Davis of Dayton, safety chairman for the state and Sixth District; "Homemaking" by Miss Mary Louise Williamson of Frankfort; "Parliamentary Talk" by Mrs. Mary Vosmer, state parliamentarian; "Guiding Principles" by Mrs. A. SEARS' INCREASES SPENDING IN KENTUCKY

Expenditures of Sears, Roebuck & Co. in the state of Kentucky increased four per cent during last year to reach a total of $3,285,211.

Mr. Francis R. Veir, Manager of Sears store at Covington made known today.

Mr. Veir's figures were taken from a report sent out by Sears' executive offices in connection with the company's 52nd Anniversary celebration with began Thursday September 15 and will continue for 15 days.

Of the total expenditure $2,306,000 covered the cost of manufactured goods purchased from thirty-seven (37) sources located in eight (8) cities and towns. In addition to its expenditures for Kentucky made merchandise, Sears spent the following: for wages and salaries of resident employees, $703,405; for newspaper advertising $149,979; and for rents and taxes, $125,231.

For the past several years it has been the custom of our executive offices to send out this annual report in the various states, said Mr. Veir. Naturally, we at the local Sears store have come to await the report with great interest for we are always anxious to learn the amount our company has contributed towards the betterment of business in this state.

Largely as a matter of personal interest for the members of my staff, upon the receipt of this latest report I made a compilation of Sears expenditures in Kentucky for the past five years, 1933 through 1937 I found that the average yearly expenditure for that period amounts to $2,178,438.

Undoubtedly this sum has proven of great benefit to business in this state during that five year period said Mr. Veir. But in addition it is particularly interesting to note that the company's 1937 expenditures were fifty one per cent higher than the yearly average. This fact in itself indicates that Sears is spending increasingly large sums within the borders of Kentucky.

The executive group of the Kenton County Council Parent-Teacher Association held a school of instruction at the all-day meeting held on Monday, September 19, at the Simon Kenton School, Independence. The meeting opened at 10:00 o'clock, with an address of welcome by Prof. R. O. Hinesdill, principal of the Simon Kenton School, after which the president, Mrs. Rodney Bryson, conducted the business session. The program chairman, Mrs. A. H. Bates, had arranged for a solo to be given by Mr. Winfield Thakes, music director of the school; group singing was led by the council. Other speakers were: Mrs. Clarence Vernon Jones; Mrs. C. T. Walters took for her subject "School of Instruction"; a speech on "Safety" was made by Mr. O. W. Davis of Dayton, safety chairman for the state and Sixth District; "Homemaking" by Miss Mary Louise Williamson of Frankfort; "Parliamentary Talk" by Mrs. Mary Vosmer, state parliamentarian; "Guiding Principles" by Mrs. A. MISS VIRGINIA STIVERS BARTLETT

The Count had given him a silver medal which had been struck off by the French Government to commemorate the great expedition of La Perouse around the world. On one side was an effigy of Louis XVI, and on the other two olive branches tied with a ribbon, and a scroll which read:

"Les fregates du roi de France, la Boussole et l'Astrolabe, commandés par Mm. de la Perouse le 2 de Langie, parties du port de Brest, en Juin 1785."

The child rapturously polished the bright coin on his jacket, and asked his mother to translate it for him. She did lifefully.

The Governor sighed and spoke. "At dawn, on the tide, they sail for all the seven seas. And I," he chuckled suddenly, "I will escort you home, my Lady, then ride over to the Mission Carmelo to talk with Fray Lasuen about this new Mission Santa Barbara. For that is the next great thing to happen to our California."

"Ah! So you will not be home this evening?"

"No, my love. I shall sup with the good fathers, but will return early. You will pardon me?"

"For a long moment she looked at him intently, then gazed straight ahead.

"Certainly, your Excellency," she said at last. When at the gate gate to the presidio young Pedro elected to go with his father, she seemed in a strange mood.

"Go with your father, my son," she said, "but kiss me adieu!" The boy looked startled, but pecked his mother hurriedly on the cheek.

Eulalia watched them until their figures and that of the servant who followed were lost around a curving hill. Then she spurred her horse and rode rapidly across the parade-ground to the palace.

"Certainly, Your Excellency," She Said at Last.

Late that evening, the Count de La Perouse, working with some of his scientists in their rude laboratory on the beach, was amazed when an attendant told him that a woman, with a baby in her arms, wished to see him.

And when the companion of La Gobernadora strode in, unabashed, he was still more surprised. With no preamble she told her story.

"And here he is," she said finally. "My baby, my Chichi. You will take him, will you not, where he will be well, and live?"

"But of course, Madame!" exclaimed the Frenchman, his eyes bright with amusement. "I will see that he has the best of care, and I will look him in the most beautiful jungle I can find, I assure you."

He was astounded to see the woman's harsh face begin working with emotion. "Here," she squeaked, "there is a little bundle of clothes I made him. He has needed them here where it has been cold, and before he reaches his jungle. See," perhaps he will need them again she explained, holding out a tiny pair of trousers, and poking her finger through a hole, "see, his dear little tail goes through here."

La Perouse had taken the monkey in his arms, but Augustus reached for him, strained him passionately to her breast. The little animal put out a tiny paw and stroked her face with queer little noises. She held him away from her, and stared into the worried human eyes, then thrust him back at the startled Frenchman.

"Take him quickly," she said. "Be good to him. . . he is my all. . . my baby."

Before La Perouse could say another word she stumbled out of the tent into the dark.

"Nom du nom du Dieu singe!" roared La Perouse. "Here, Dagelet, you seem monkey and unoccupied. I give you this animal to keep in your charge, and to watch and ward, and put his dear little tail through the hole in his pantaloons until we land on a tropical isle! Mon Dieu, quelle femme."

Dagelet picked up the monkey dolefully.

"And you think I have nothing to do!" he muttered. He walked away from the tent, carrying the monkey and his bundle of clothes to a spot where a boat was moored, and an oarman sat as though waiting for someone.

"Take this," barked Dagelet. "I will return."

Augustus, blinded with her tears, staggered through the sand until she reached firmer ground, then she made her way toward the presidio, sobbing and talking to herself.

"Chichi, my baby," she grieved, holding her empty arms to her breast. "my baby, my baby."

With the "Reds"

By Leland G. Allen

The Cincinnati Reds, hustling through the East in their final road trip, remain in the thick of the season chase for the National League pennant.

The Reds were to move to the Polo Ground Tuesday for three single games in as many days with the New York Giants, defending league champions. The Reds have already won their season's series with the Giants. The Reds will shift to Pittsburgh Friday for another three game series with the Pirates. Pie Traynor's club has been leading the league since July and promises to be in a hostile mood to defend their first place margin.

Following an off-day on September 26, the Red will go to St. Louis for their final road games of the year. Three games, all single affairs, are scheduled there, starting on September 27.

Bill McKelchnie's warriors will return to Crosley Field on September 30 for a double-header with the Pirates. Single games on October 1 and 2 will close the 1938 campaign. It is entirely possible that the outcome of the pennant chase will depend upon these final games in Cincinnati.

This season's race has been one of the most bitterly contested in the history of the National League. It is possible that the pennant winning team will have less than ninety victories to its credit, showing how severe the competition is in the senior circuit.

NEW OFFICERS PRESIDE AT VERONA CLUB MEET

The Verona Homemakers Club met Thursday afternoon at the Verona School building with a good attendance.

Miss John Myers took the subject of the food leaders of the club in the county to Kalm's Clubbing House and Kroger's Baking and candy factory.

The project for the afternoon was glove-making. Members interested in glove-making purchased material in grey and blue kid from Miss Gillespie and cut gloves for future making.

The next meeting will be an all-day session October 7. A covered-dish luncheon will be prepared by members of the club. The subject for the next meeting will be "Removing Old Finish From Furniture."

We wish to welcome any ladies interested in homemaking.

Czechs Accept

In its not or last night, the government told Britain and France their proposed revision of the frontier would create constitutional difficulties, since under the constitution only the national assembly could approve and that it was unlikely that in the present circumstances a majority could be obtained. It argued that it would be best to maintain the integrity and dignity of the state.

The government pointed out the sacrifices it was being asked to make, that it would become a puppet state without foreign policy, defenses or independent commerce.

It made definite hints that the government would appreciate it greatly if France and Britain tried to obtain better terms from Germany. It referred to the Czechoslovak-German arbitration treaty of 1926.

Soviet Russia tried to save Czechoslovakia by offering to fight if necessary, but France refused to stand by its treaty obligations. Maxim Litvinov told the League of Nations Tuesday.

The Soviet foreign commissar, deploring the surrender of Britain and France to Adolf Hitler's demands warned they merely had avoided problematic war to make certain a large-scale war in the immediate future.

Tobacco Pool Plan May Be Formulated at Meeting

Kentuckians Join In Plan With Other Growers

Kentucky burley growers who have poor quality tobacco or who have crops in excess of their quotas, may market them through a burley pool. Kentuckians joined with planters from several states in an attempt to make a plan to produce an "even-normal granary" in the tobacco industry.

The charter of the co-operative association is to be drawn at a meeting Friday in Louisville. Not until that time will names be obtained to insure the proper operation.

Leading in the movement are J. L. Thurmond, Hopkinsville, chairman of the Organization Committee, and Ben Kilgour, executive secretary of the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation.

Fifty-five delegates from Kentucky, West Virginia and Indiana, joined in the first discussions. This year, those men were told the burley belt faces a probable surplus of 46,000,000 pounds.

This pool will enable those planters who have exceeded their assigned quotas to turn their product over to the pool to be sold when a scarcity exists or when the quotas are lifted.

According to Mr. Kilgour, money may be borrowed from the Commodity Credit Corp. to pay for half of the farmer's product pending the sale.

Plans for dues, which will be used to pay the operating expenses, will be $3 for landowners and $2 for tenants.

The marketing agreement, it is said, will be in as close harmony as possible with the A.A.A.

Hamilton Free Fair October 7

The Eighth Annual Hamilton Free Community Fair will be held at Hamilton school, Friday, October 7th, according to R. Z. Ashby, chairman of program committee.

The largest display of farm and home products is expected.

Exhibits of the community's best from far and wide will be on display during the day. The displays will include everything from corn, pumpkins and tobacco to pie, cakes and fancy quilts. Special programs will be featured by the 4-H club, the school, P.T.A., and other co-operating organizations.

Committees in charge of the event include Prof. R. Z. Ashby, chairman of school program; Prof. Garland Huff, chairman of games and contests committee; P. H. Seebree, chairman of fruits and vegetables; Melvin Moore, crop committee; Mrs. Orin Edwards and Richard Schwenke, chairman women's work; Kenneth Aylor, chairman poultry committee; Mrs. J. L. Jones, Jr., H. R. Finkner, Jack Dye and Mary Hood Gillespie 4-H club committees.

Lebanon Presbyterian Church Sunday, October 2, will be preaching day again at the above church, and it will be Communion Sunday, when the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered at 11 a. m. hour. Freshing again at 7:30 p. m. Everybody invited—Rev. Chas. W. Anderson, Minister.

The Race Is Already Started

The 1939 gubernatorial race is already reaping much promise from the press of Kentucky, and many names are being mentioned as aspirants, with and without support of the various factions of the Democratic party in this State. Leading among those courted is Senator M. M. Logan, with John Young Brown as running mate as Lieutenant Governor. This ticket will be backed by Barkley, Rhea, Brennen, Seldon Glenn machine, and will probably come in as winner.

When Senator Logan is elected Governor he will appoint one of his backers to fill out his unexpired term in the United States Senate, thus returning the favor for support. John Young Brown will then be in line for Governor in 1943 barring unexpected changes in political patronage.

With so many of Governor Chandler's political friends aspiring to succeed their present chief, there is rumor of split-ups to favor several departmental heads, among who are Frederick A. Wallis, Chas. D. Arnett, Hubert Meredith, John Buckingham and of course Lieutenant-Governor Keen Johnson. At present Keen Johnson is the outstanding contender of the Chandler faction for the high honor this state's voters can bestow.

With a united front the Democrats of Kentucky can win an easy victory in 1939, but by wasting valuable time and money fighting among themselves they may give the Republican party the opportunity of presenting a better "sales argument" to the voters of our State.

If the guarantees given Czechoslovakia 18 years ago have been invalidated of what worth will new guarantees be to them?

And Sudden Death

The automobile is treacherous, just as a cat is. It is tragically difficult to realize that it can become the deadliest missile. As enthusiasts tell you, it makes 65 feet like nothing at all. But 65 miles an hour is 100 feet a second, a speed which puts a vicious unjustified responsibility on brakes and human reflexes, and can instantly turn this docile luxury into a mad bull.

Collision, turnover or sideswipe, each type of accident produces either a shattering dead stop or a crashing change of direction—and, since the occupant—meaning you—continues in the old direction at the original speed, every surface and angle of the car's interior immediately become a battering, tearing projectile, aimed squarely at the incapable. There is no bracing yourself against these imperative laws of momentum.

It's like going over Niagara Falls in a steel barrel full of railroad spikes. The best thing that can happen to you—and one of the rarer things—is to be thrown out as the doors spring open, so you have only the ground to reckon with. True, you strike with as much force as if you had been thrown from the Twentieth Century at top speed. But at least you are spared the lethal array of gleaming metal knobs and edges and glass inside the car.

Hitler has now turned his eyes to the rich oil deposits and wheat lands of little Roumania.

The War Against Depression

The United States has had a lot of experience in waging war against depressions and post-war conditions in recent years. The Government is employing the same measures at this time that proved effective the last time.

The method is more direct than that which falls to the responsibility of big and little business and that immense part of the American public, to whom it concerns. By way of illustration, it is evident that if an automobile manufacturer is prevented from producing cars that he will not need tires from the great rubber industry, or trainroads of steel, or the greatest part of cotton that goes into any one manufacturing industry; not to overlook the fact that glass, upholstery fabrics, copper, wood, brass and other products of agriculture, the mines and factories are supplied from every State in the Union—to go into automobiles.

Dealers and merchants in all lines of business are calling for more goods. To fill these orders the manufacturers are buying raw materials.

No statement could be more important than that General Motors, Chrysler and Ford expect an improvement in business for 1939. The automobile industry "pulled the country out of the last depression."

With all the natural advantages that the Nation enjoys there is reason for encouragement in this outlook, confirmed by official and unofficial statistics, there is an upward turn for the better in these affairs of the Nation that are of most concern to our people.

The old time farmer worked the soil, while the modern farmers works the Government.

"I—Hitler"

The world sat breathless at their radios Monday afternoon while Adolf Hitler, strong-man of Germany, raved and ranted to the democratic nations of this generation, daring them to knock the chip off his shoulder so he could show the strength of his army and navy. He found ways and means of placing the blame on Premier Banes of Czechoslovakia for the present unrest of Europe, and called on the German people to face the facts with true devotion.

Hitler demanded the immediate surrender of the Sudeten area, and to hold a plebiscite in the disputed section at once.

He assured the world that if the Sudeten area were annexed to Germany that the German people would never seek any further expansion, and thus guarantee the peace of the Continent. It is now up to the Czechs as a people to decide the destiny of this ominous demand.

"I now lead my people as their first soldier and let the world know that a different people and a different nation march than that in 1918. Victory must be grasped at any cost," said Hitler in closing his radio broadcast.

The League of Nations might have earned the price of its keep by settling the Nazi-Czech dispute.

By and by every little town will have a Postoffice Building all its own.

A Live Wire Briar Hopper

An Explanation! Why I am having my Briar Hopper stories reprinted; all but a few of my original stories were lost in the flood, having a great many requests for the stories I am having them reprinted with the intention of putting them in book form with other interesting matter.—Will S. Norris.

DIXIE STORIES, ANECDOTES, SAYINGS; SOME OLD, SOME NEW, SOME ORIGINAL AND SOME STRANGE

By WILL S. NORRIS
5552 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio

In the hills of Powell County, Ky., where they have crooked rail fences, huge briars and red briar hoppers, a briar hopper had a bad job cutting briars on a real hot August day when old Sol was shinning his best, not a cloud in the sky and the thermometer registering 100 in the shade. The briar hopper was taking full benefit of the shade of a large oak tree by the roadside, leaning on his briar scepter and wondering and wishing if there was not some way to get rid of the briars without so much hard work and labor. A neighbor riding up to the fence and seeing the briar hopper in deep slumber said: "You seem to be puzzled as to how to get rid of your briars. Do you want me to tell you how to do it?"

The briar hopper said: "I would be glad indeed and would be very much relieved. If you will give me the remedy I will be your ever-loving friend." The neighbor said: "The sure way to get rid of them is to die and leave them." I can imagine that the briar hopper decided not to take the remedy. While his briar patch was a hot place he feared the neighbor's remedy might put him in a hotter one. He decided the best and only way to get rid of the briars of life is to face the issue and cut them and not depend on an easy way.

This reminds us of the colored man who was hoeing his watermelon patch on Sunday morning. The preacher came by riding on his way to church and halted the colored man, telling him he should not work on Sunday.

The colored man said: "It is the only time I have to work on Sunday." The person said: "Go to church with me and trust to Providence." The colored man replied: "Providence lives down the road. He doesn't work in his own patch."

SQUARE MEALS

When meat soars so high that any of us could believe that the owl really jumped over the moon, I get waterings of the mouth as I think of the days of the square meal, an institution that is certainly less common than it used to be. Just why it was called square I do not know, unless that word signifies something well filled in all directions. If one named it according to the way one looked and felt, and an encounter with a square meal, the word round would be more appropriate. But square it was called, and square it will remain, with all of its delightful associations.

Scientists talk about atrophy of certain organs, that is, they grow weaker or smaller through long periods of time. I fear our digestive tracts have weakened greatly since the old days, when a square meal three times a day was supposed to be the minimum of what was expected of any one who was up and about. If some of us were to indulge in such an orgy of eating as we were once used to, a half dozen doctors would have to be called in to save us. When I think of the actual quantities that I could handle in a rowing lanky, youthful body after a plowing all morning, I actually wonder why I did not pass away in early youth, like so many of the boys in the fearful stories that we read in those days.

LOST PAGE OF BOONE COUNTY HISTORY RESTORED

By C. SPENCER CHAMBERS
One hundred and twenty years ago, Boone County was visited by Alexander Wilson, probably the greatest ornithologist of all time. In making his drawings and collection of bird skins, he stopped on his way down the Ohio river to make a short inland journey to Big Bone Springs. While there he nearly lost his life in the quagmire, when he was pursuing a wounded duck.

Parquets abounded most freely at that time, as he referred in his diary to the killing of twelve.

This lost page from Boone County's history was brought to light by the unearthing of the diary of the great naturalist, in the Edinburgh College Museum, in a search for material to complete a thumb-nail biography of Dr. Edwards.

A visit to my old friend, the Biblical scholar, resulted in some information very few of the younger people have any knowledge of and too many of the older ones know little about. We talked his concerning the Apocrypha—the books considered of insufficient importance by some savants, and regretted by other not to have been given a place in the Bible. According to this old patriarch, who rules his clan as in the feudal days, the deleted books contain 183 chapters, 6,081 verses and a total of 152,185 words. That books voted out and do not appear in your present Bible are: 1. Tobit, 14 chapters; Judith, 16 chapters; The rest of Esther, 6 chapters; Wisdom, 19 chapters; Ecclesiasticus, 51 chapters; Baruch, with the epistle of Jeremiah, 6 chapters; The Song of the Three Children; The Story of Susan-

Passing a residence in a Southern Kentucky town which we frequently visited as a youngster we were reminded of the first telephone installed in that entire section. It was a constant source of wonder to the hillbillies and to many of the other inhabitants, the former regarding the contrivance almost as black magic. The "phone" was installed between a Doctor's residence and his office, some quarter of a mile apart. The wire-line course was stretched on poles as is done today, but the boxes were simple and crude. At the office and resident the wire was attached to a box which happened to be a small cedar box, near the size of a small cigar box, and covered with tightly drawn rawhide. In the very center of the leather box, and covering was a large bone button, and run through the eyes of the button was the copper wire. When one desired to call a party at the other end of the line, he rapped on the button with a finger and the party thus signalled would respond in a like manner, and then the conversation would begin. The phone was crude compared with present day systems worked; and it saved distinctly and it saved the Doctor and his family many a weary step.

In a few days both political parties will have their orators on the stump and the welkin will ring. Senator Barkley, the Democratic candidates for Congress and others who have a desire to point with pardonable pride to the achievements of the National Administration and tell all and sundry of the various laurels brought here only because of their efforts at Washington. At other places Judge John P. Haswell, Republican, and the Republican Congressional candidates will view with much apprehension and downright alarm the tremendous outlays of the Government and predict disaster sooner or later.

The voter after hearing both sides and weighing neither will go to the polls and vote as he pleases. Except for the staunch dyed-in-the-wool partisans in both camps, there will be few votes cast not motivated by their bread and butter. It is probably an unpopulous commentary, but true as evidenced by several elections in recent years. The day of free and (Continued on page six)

Lesson for October 2

THE ONE TRUE GOD
LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:2, 3. Isaiah 45:18. Mark 12:29-34. Colossians 8:6-7.
GOLDEN TEXT—And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, with all thy mind, and with all thy might.—Deuteronomy 6:5.

Today we begin a series of studies which should be of unusual value, a consideration of the Ten Commandments in the light of the teachings of Jesus and the New Testament passages. It is appropriate to point out that, far from being outmoded, the Ten Commandments are really the basis of all moral law. They need a diligent re-study and re-emphasis in our day of disregard of moral standards. As interpreted by the Lord Jesus and applied to our daily living, the truth of these commandments should be brought home to every boy and girl and man and woman in our Bible schools.

The lessons begin at the right point, for the first commandment properly deals with our conception of God. What a man thinks about God determines his entire outlook on life. We begin right when we declare that there is but one God.

1. The Truth Stated—There is One True God (Exod. 20:2, 3).
"Jehovah means 'will be what I will be' or 'I am that I am'." (Exod. 3:14). His very name declares one. How infinitely gracious then is the use of the word "thy" in verse 2! He—the great I AM—is my God.

There are many things concerning Him we do not speak dogmatically. There are even Christian doctrines about which spiritual and earnest men may honestly differ, but regarding God we say with absolute assurance and complete exclusiveness—there is but one true God. If He is not He claims to be, if God is not to be declared to be a liar, then it is beyond the realm of possibility that there could be any other God. Hear it, ye men and women of America who in an enlightened land and age bow down in heathenish worship "before the god of gold, the god of self, the god of wine, the god of success, the god of fame, the goddess of pleasure, the god of licentiousness." The one true God says, "I am Jehovah. . . thou shalt have no other gods before me."

2. The Truth Explained.
1. God is our Deliverer (Exod. 20:2). He who brought Israel out of the bondage of Egypt is the one, and the only one who can deliver men from the bondage of sin. If you think that a sinner is not in bondage read Titus 3:3 and Romans 6:16 and then read the verses following. He is our God, and we are not only to see but follow the way of deliverance.
2. God is our Saviour (Isa. 45:22). Again note: "there is none else" who can save. "Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is

A cannery established at Cloverport to give farmers an extra crop and to provide work for local persons received 41 tons of tomatoes in one day, according to County Agent Will B. Ray. A large number of farmers in Breckinridge and adjoining counties grew tomatoes on a commercial scale this year.

Well-fleshed pullets produce better than thin ones. Feed plenty of grain with the mash. A good source of protein, such as meat scrap or a combination of meat scrap, milk and soybean meal, is necessary to maintain growth and encourage production.

growth of asparagus standing until it dies down in the fall, or even until spring, as this growth helps protect the roots through the winter. Rhubarb also should be allowed to develop good top growth before going into the cold months.

Proper moisture in the air of the storage cellar is necessary to keep apples from shriveling or wilting. An earth floor that is kept damp will generally provide sufficient moisture. Where the floor is concrete, a tub of water will provide moisture.

The feed-egg price ration is expected to continue favorable to poultry raisers, due both to the prospective large supplies of feed grains and the advancing prices of eggs. Chicken prices are not expected to continue favorable to poultry raisers, due both to the prospective large supplies of feed grains and the advancing price of eggs. Chicken prices are not expected to be as good as in 1937.

Serve foods at the evening meal which are easily digested, such as creamed soups, creamed or buttered vegetables, souffles and scalloped vegetables, fruit or vegetable salads, eggs, cottage cheese and simple desserts.

More than $500 in awards were given at the Germantown fair to 4-H club members and PFA members from three counties.

Molded Ham Salad Gay Party Food!

In the Fall, parties, too, take on Fall-like colors. The refreshments themselves must be gay and colorful and even the most substantial foods come to the table disguised in frivolous raiment.

Such a party food, substantial yet light and tempting, is the molded ham salad. Colorful bits of minced ham, finely chopped green peppers and parsley show through the delicate cream-colored mold. The mixture depends for subtlety or flavor on the addition of mayonnaise or a salad dressing which is a combination of old-fashioned bottled dressing and mayonnaise.

Despite the festive appearance of this Fall luncheon salad, its preparation is a simple matter. The mixture is made as follows:

It is impossible to decide whether spring picnics or late summer ones are more enjoyable. Early fall seems just the time to pack a lunch box with substantial food, call a few good friends and go off to the woods to cook your meal over a roaring log fire.

A few last-minute hints for the picnic hostess should be timely just now and Miss Lea Menzies, 414 E. Main St., Madison, Ind., suggests this "dogs a la Coney Island." The recipe will make enough to serve twenty-four people.

DOGS A LA CONEY ISLAND

Two pounds hamburger, one medium-sized can tomato puree, one large onion, one large mango, six tablespoons fat, one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon red ground pepper, one-half teaspoon black pepper, one tablespoon paprika, one medium-sized can large kidney beans.

Use a large iron skillet for cooking the mixture. Chop onion and mango fine; place in skillet with fat and cook until tender, but do not brown; add ground hamburger, stirring often so meat will not be cooked in lumps. Add all seasonings, stir well, then last pour in puree which should be diluted with an equal amount of water. Turn flame low and cook until mixture is fairly dry. Drain beans and rinse with cold water. These may be added just before you are ready to serve.

To serve, split a weiner bun, put in a steaming weiner and add a heaping big spoon of the mixture.

Another suggestion for serving frankfurters: Prepare a good barbecue sauce at home, allow each guest to reheat a frankfurter on the end of a green forked stick; then just as it becomes puffy and breaks the skin dip it in the hot sauce. Place between buns and serve at once.

As a variation of the usual picnic sandwiches, here is an idea: Lay a thin slice of mild cheese on a slice of soft bread. Over it place a slice of ready-to-serve meat and roll. Slip onion rings over the roll and toast until browned.

This Scout's delight is an easy-to-pack dessert for picnics and it gives each guest an opportunity to make his own:

SCOUTS' DELIGHTS

Sixteen graham crackers, one chocolate bar (flat square-marked), one package (one-fourth pound) marshmallows.

Cover crackers with sweet chocolate and one that place two freshly-toasted creamy marshmallows; then cover with another cracker. The toasted marshmallows melt the chocolate and you can't imagine anything more delicious. This makes eight.

Another picnic hint—take along slices of bread about one-inch thick in which you have cut a one and one-half hole in the center, plenty of butter and the desired number of eggs. Place slices of bread in a heavy frying pan containing generous amounts of butter and break an egg in the center of each slice. Fry bread slices until golden brown, then turn and brown other side.

Plymouth First to Present New Models for 1939

Here's the first of the new 1939 automobiles, presenting an impressive array of added features for greater comfort and luxury in the lowest price field. The latest models now on display at Plymouth showrooms here confirm the forecasts that stronger "eye appeal" would highlight new auto designs for 1939. Inside and out, this newest Plymouth is completely "revised," stated Mr. Hampton, of Hampton and Pettit owners of the Florence Garage, Florence. Headlamps and tail lights are streamlined into the fenders, and a new Vee-type windshield adds more than six inches to body length above the belt. Built on a longer wheel-base—now 114 inches—brand new features include base—now 114 inches—brand new features include softer-riding coil springs of Amola steel; new high-torque engine performance; remote control gear shift up on the steering post, and a new "safety-signal" speedometer that flashes traffic lights right under a driver's eyes. "The new Plymouth rides better, handles easier—and prices are still lower this year," added A. Jaegers, Plymouth dealer at Independence.

Independence Baptist Church Observes Tenth Anniversary

At this slightly belated observance of the tenth anniversary of the dedication of the Independence Baptist church building we present this brief history of the church. It is being prepared by those who have only the inadequate records of the church, and if there are errors, they are unintentional.

A year or more prior to the organization of a Baptist Church at Independence, Rev. W. A. Wood, field worker in North Bend Association, had begun the work of a Sunday school and preaching services at the court house. Preaching services were held on second and fourth Sundays. During this time Bro. Wood was busy getting 100 men to pay $13.00 per front for the lot on which the building now stands.

April 18, 1927, is the date of the first minutes of the Independence Baptist Church. This first entry states that on Monday evening, April 11, Rev. C. L. Breland, then pastor of Walton Baptist Church, began a series of meetings at the courthouse. On Monday evening, April 18, a church was organized with 25 charter members from 12 Baptist churches. As field worker Bro. Wood ministered to the church as its first pastor.

At the 1926 meeting of North Bend Association Bro. Wood invited the association to hold the next annual meeting at Independence where he thought a building would be ready by time of meeting.

August 6, 1927, in business meeting this entry appears: "All male members are to meet at the church lot August 13 to prepare for the corner stone laying."

The building was not in readiness for the 1927 meeting of the association. The meeting was held in the Independence High School building. At this meeting the Independence Baptist Church applied for membership and was received into the association. By this time the organization had grown to 54 members.

March 11, 1928, was the first business meeting in the new building. At the business meeting April 8, April 29 was set as the day for the dedication. Thus if the dedication proceeded as decided upon, we are about five months late for the tenth anniversary celebration.

The original cost of the building is as follows:

Lot, $1,300.00; Contract, $11,466.00; Chairs, $800.00; Art glass, $763.00; Furnace, $570.00; Pulpit furniture, $100.00; Light fixtures, $123.00; Kindergarten chairs, $22.50; Folding chairs, $27.50; Walks, $170.00; Song books, $15.00.

At the August 12, 1928, business meeting Rev. R. H. Turner was called as full time pastor of the church to live on the field. He began his duties the first Sunday in September. It was thought that the church at this time could go onward of its own, and too, the duties of Bro. Wood elsewhere were heavy enough to demand all his time. The church moved forward doing a good work and but for the depression could probably have continued her program. At business meeting, July 6, 1933, Bro. Turner tendered his resignation to take effect the first of August.

August 3 Rev. W. A. M. Wood was called as pastor for two Sundays per month, salary paid him to be applied on the indebtedness, as he was paid a salary by Mission Board.

October, 1930, the North Bend Board notified Bro. Wood that he should give up the work at Independence the first of the year, as his services were needed elsewhere and the Independence Church should be self sustaining at this time.

November 14 the Independence Baptist Church called to the pastorate Rev. Shirley Spahr. He assumed the pastorate the first of the year 1931 for half time services. The first Sunday in September a program of full time services was entered upon. At present we have prayer services each Wednesday evening, our goal is $500.00 for our building fund this year and we propose to support the Cooperative Program of Southern Baptists.

Additions to the Church during its history have been in addition to the charter members:

By baptism, 87; by letter, 145; by statement, 12.

Present membership of the church is 172.

The indebtedness of the church following the dedication was $9,500. The Independence Bank carried $4,000 of this, and a bank in Erlanger, $3,500. During the months of August, September and October, 1934, by the herculean efforts of Bro. Wood and other churches and friends the Erlanger indebtedness was lifted.

The application of Bro. Wood, salary during his second pastorate, together with funds received from other churches of the association and friends reduced the principal of the obligation to the Independence Bank during the last three years by the amounts of $1,000, $1,000, and $500 annually. The present indebtedness stands at slightly less than $3,500.

The deacons are M. M. McClung, H. D. Roberts, R. A. Cornelius, J. W. Rusk, John A. Payne, Louis Lee, and Herndon Thomas.

These have been deacons: Amazon Graham, George Fisher, Sanford and C. E. Rector.

Sunday School Superintendents have been R. H. Williams, Herndon Hurt, Olin Keeney, C. L. Herbert, Thomas, J. N. Sams, Olin Keeney, H. V. Hayes, and Louis Lee—the present Superintendent.

Church clerks have been C. E. Rector, M. M. McClung, and Alfred B. Hymer—the present clerk.

Pastors have been Rev. W. A. M. Wood on two occasions, Rev. R. H. Turner, and Rev. Shirley Spahr—the present pastor.

We, of the Independence Baptist Church desire to express our appreciation to the officers, pastors, and churches of North Bend Association for their assistance without which our church would not have been possible.

Traffic engineering and modern highway construction that eliminates every possible road hazard all contribute to the reduction of automobile accidents, according to F. Stanley Krug, Traffic Chairman and Consulting Engineer of the Cincinnati Automobile Club. But the far reaching effect of a stern judge who hands out justice fairly but sternly is necessary, according to Mr. Krug, to eliminate the reckless, careless, drunken, road-hogging driver who causes the majority of the accidents.

"Engineering, can never eliminate the accidents caused by the driver who ignores the rights of others and has no responsibility either to himself or others in the car," Krug stated. Y. W. C. A. ENTERTAINS TEACHERS WITH PICNIC

The Independence Community Y. W. C. A., sponsored a picnic meeting Thursday evening September 15, at the Independence Elementary school gym for the teachers of our schools and the husbands of our members.

A large number of teachers, members and guests assembled and spent the evening talking and renewing friendships. At 7:00 p. m. a table loaded with ham, chicken, vegetable salads, pickles, cakes, drinks, etc., was soon surrounded by those present and justice was soon meted out to this delicious food.

After lunch the evening, until a late hour was spent in various ways and games. The evening was especially enjoyed by many as they volley ball. We are glad to welcome the teachers to our community. The regular meeting of the Y. W. C. A. is the first Thursday night of each month. Any one interested in this work is cordially invited to become a member. Dues are fifty cents per year.

Valley seeking cooperation in reducing accidents. There is no thought of influencing anyone to aid any motorist who is guilty, it was stated, but the quickest way to rid the highway of a bad driver is to take away his driver's license.

The Cincinnati Automobile Club now has more than 15,000 members in Southern Ohio, Southeastern Indiana and Northern Kentucky. Highway improvements, grade crossing elimination, the posting of warning signs, the education and equipping of the 6,000 members of the Auto Club's School Safety Patrol are only a few of the services rendered to club members and the public. Motorists may join the division of the Cincinnati Automobile Club in the community in which they live. Each separate division handles the automobile club work applicable to each community.

In conversation we will relate a conversation with a man whose vote could not be purchased with money. He comes of a large family who were never known to scratch a ticket, but there's a great change. He said: "Unless given a job or some benefit I will stay away from the polls this fall, or vote for the opposing candidates. "Asked why he stated many of his friends were in good jobs or receiving some Government subsidy and apparently living the life of Riley. He was sick and tired of it all, and his back had to be scratched or he would go to the reservation. This man is a sample of what is coming to be very common, will increase in the years to come. It's a sad plight and for genuine Americans to reach.

With the "Reds"

By Leland G. Allen

The Cincinnati Reds, battling valiantly in the hectic pennant race, reaches its most vital stage, were to open a three game series in St. Louis, Tuesday, while the other pennant scrapers, the Pittsburgh Pirates and Chicago Cubs, were to play a similar number of games in the Windy City. The Reds were to meet the Oss House Gang in single games Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. Friday the Reds will return to Crosley Field for a four-game series with the Pirates that will ring down the curtain for the 1938 season and will probably determine which National League club will meet the New York Yankees in the World Series. The Reds and Pirates will square off in a twin bill Friday. On Saturday there will be a single game, which will be the last ladies' day of the season. The Sunday game will close the season, and this game has been designated as Jim Weaver Day. Fellow Kentuckians will be in attendance to honor the big hurler.

The rise of the Reds from their cellar finish in 1937 to a position among the pennant contenders in 1938 has been the sensation of the National League season, and the Reds are closing their most successful campaign in twelve years.

HORSE DISEASE IN ADJOINING STATES

A disease among horses commonly known as sleeping sickness, which has been moving eastward across the United States, is now prevalent in Illinois and Missouri, according to information which the Horse and Mule Association of America sent to Kentucky College of Agriculture.

The disease is thought to be spread principally by mosquitoes, although flies and other biting insects also probably carry it. Twenty-five to 30 per cent of the afflicted horses have died in states where the disease is prevalent. The chief control to date consists of protecting horses from mosquitoes and flies by keeping them in the barn and spraying the animals and their quarters.

Symptoms of the disease are dullness, sluggishness and droopiness with the eyes tending to close. The animal also shows inability to control its legs, and stumbles about as though blind. It may try to sit down, carrying most of its weight on the hind legs.

Horse owners are advised to call a veterinarian, if any symptoms are observed. Until the veterinarian arrives, give the animal cool, fresh water. Get the horse in the shade in a stall or pen where it cannot hurt itself after it gets down. Feed little grain, but instead green corn stalks, out fresh at each feeding with the ears removed.

Since paralysis of the throat often follows in 24 to 36 hours, it is important to have the animal drink as much water as possible before it becomes unable to swallow.

1. Tobacco that was allowed to get in high case had darkened even though heat was used to dry it out later.

2. The consensus of opinion of leading growers was—tobacco is in danger of changing color and darkening as long as it is hanging in the barn. Color and quality resulting from color are changing factors.

TOBACCO MEETINGS HELD STUDYING CURING PRACTICES TOBACCO CROP INJURED BY WET WEATHER

Numerous farmers are reporting the wet weather has darkened the quality of tobacco according to H. R. Forkner, county agent. Previous to this period the quality of tobacco in the barn was considered the best in years.

Each time the cured leaf comes in high case and goes out the color of the leaf is darkened. Heat is the only practical means of controlling the case of leaf hanging in the barn. A large number of Boone County farmers are using coke heat for the first time.

A committee of Boone County growers composed of William Hill, Olan Elliott, Sam Blackburn, Joel Gray, S. B. Scott, H. E. White, J. D. Rennacker, W. A. Brown, J. J. Kloppe and H. R. Forkner, visited a number of Fayette county farmers on last Wednesday, who were following improved methods of curing their tobacco crops. The committee also visited the Experiment Station farm and studied some of the tobacco variety breeding work being carried on by Dr. Valleau of that institution.

Two tobacco meetings are to be held in the county on Wednesday of this week. A meeting will be held at William Hill's farm near Idlewild at 10:00 a. m. and a second meeting at the farm of James Pennington of near Walton at 1:00 p. m. Mr. Russell Hunt, Tobacco specialist from the college will speak at each of these meetings.

To fire their tobacco, Davies county farmers used coal coke, charcoal and oil coke, getting good results.

Social Security Statements to Be Given to Workers

An announcement was received today by Frank B. Decker, Jr., Manager of the Covington, Kentucky Field Office, Social Security Board that any worker for whom an old-age insurance account has been established obtain from the Social Security Board a statement showing the amount of wages credited to his account for 1937 on the basis of reports made by employers.

For the convenience of those who want such a statement, the Board has sent to all its field offices postcards which have printed on them the request for wage information. Space is left for the wage earner to write in his name, account number and address. The card should be mailed, either with a 1-cent stamp, or in a sealed envelope addressed to the Social Security Board, Chandler Building, Baltimore, Maryland. A second form has also been made available at all field offices for the use of anyone who believes that he earned wages that were not reported. On this form the wage earner should list each employer for whom he has worked, how long he was employed by each, and the wages he received.

Mr. Decker stated that Field Office managers have been instructed to suggest to all individuals requesting wage information that they use the postcard form, since request made by letter cannot be handled by the Bureau of Old-Age Insurance as rapidly as those made on the forms.

Request for statements of wage accounts already have been received from many workers in the area, according to John J. Corson, Director of the Bureau of Old-Age Insurance. The Bureau, he said, had replied to those making such requests and had received in return an almost negligible number of complaints that the statements of wages did not include all the wages they had been paid.

The only cases in which it was impossible to provide applicants with statements of wages received were those in which the individuals had been engaged in employment not covered by the old-age insurance provisions of the Social Security Act, such as railroad work, farm labor and domestic service, Mr. Decker added.

NEW MELON VARIETIES DISEASE RESISTANT

Boone County melon growers the past six years have been experimenting with new watermelon varieties resistant to wilt. Wilt is a soil borne disease that destroys thousands of melons each year. The growers this year tried three resistant varieties that produced good crops of high quality fruit on vines that were free from wilt, according to Jack Dye, assistant county agent.

These farmers experimenting with the new wilt resistant are A. H. Cook, L. W. Rogers, Howard Huty, Eddie Rogers, F. H. Brown and J. J. Kloppe. Three farmers who have reported to date on resistant varieties grew Thurmond Grey, Kleckley No. 6 and Stone Mountain No. 5. None of these were affected by the wilt, though on two farms 75 per cent of the plants of other varieties planted beside them died from the disease. On the third farm there was no wilt because melons had not been grown on the ground before.

The resistant varieties were found to be equal in quality, flavor and yield to the no resistant varieties grown. Thurmond Grey was the resistant variety with the best quality and flavor and Kleckley No. 6 yielded heaviest.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

Requiring that they be well-fattened, Ben Parker, Hopkins county, took pigs to Evansville free for the sale for 4-H club members. Premium prices are being received for eggs from six registered, carefully-managed flocks in Edmonson county.

Charley Spencer and C. B. Hieronimus, Lee county, have applied 4,900 pounds of phosphate to their grass fields.

Liming Pastures for Erosion Control

Ground agricultural limestone promotes not only good crops but productive pastures as well, and a good pasture soil means erosion control, as this Grant county farmer knows. John Reed, Crittendon, is liming this hilly pasture.

When she was quite near the presidio gate she noticed a figure moving hurriedly in the direction of the beach. It seemed to be the figure of a woman. Angustias slipped behind a tree and watched. The woman came closer and Angustias could see a large bundle balanced on her head. Every few feet she turned around and looked back toward the presidio.

"Indiuelia!" gasped Angustias. "What is she doing? Ah, the vixen, she is running away with some French sailor, I'll be bound. Well, we can't have that. I've always had my suspicions of that one. Que la doncella honrada la virtuous quebrada y en casa (The virtuous maid and the broken leg must stay at home)," she muttered. She took a few steps toward the girl, then stopped. If the hussy was intent on joining some French lover, she would use violence rather than let Angustias stop her, she reflected. She needed a man to help her. As she hesitated, her eye still on the flying girl who was zigzagging through the sand, she heard the sound of horses. She ran toward them as they came in view. Then she saw it was the Governor.

She stopped. She must not let him see her. She had disobeyed him. He would reprimand her, she, Angustias, whom he had always called "a good soldier." She started to step behind her tree again, but was too late. The Governor had seen her. So she took matters in her own hands and ran toward him. "Your Excellency!" she gasped, "look, see that woman running toward the beach! With the bundle on her head! It is Indiuelia! She is running away to join some French lover on the ship."

Pedro Fages looked after the figure that Angustias pointed out. She did indeed seem to be fleeing, her erratic course took her now from one tree to another, and she was avoiding the open spaces. "Very well, Angustias, you return with Pedro to the mansion. I will attend to this. Go with them," he ordered the servant.

He spurred his horse lightly and cantered toward the girl. As he drew near he saw she had staggered and dropped the great bundle from her head. She was leaning over it, sobbing with exertion when he caught up with her.

As he jumped from his horse, she turned away from him, and tried to cover her face with the rebozo that swathed her head.

Fages spoke very gently. "Mi chiquita," he said, "my poor little one. Why are you running away from us all, and from your home, and those who are concerned in your welfare? Did you not say you loved the Governor, and were grateful for all he had done for you? And now you run away, Indiuelia!"

The girl suddenly became dynamic. She straightened and faced the Governor boldly, tearing the rebozo from her head.

"So!" she screamed. "It is Indiuelia you love, is it? Indiuelia whom you follow after in the starlight! Indiuelia, is it! Indiuelia!" Pedro Fages put his hand to his eyes, then brushed his eyes as though he doubted his sight.

"Eulalia!" he said. "Eulalia! You were running away."

She stooped over her bundle and tugged at it. "Of course I am running away! And you can not stop me. Indiuelia is not leaving you," she panted, "so you will be happy." She lifted the bundle and staggered a few steps.

Don Pedro watched her as though he were viewing an incident in a dream, with drugged senses that could not react.

"I am leaving everything behind that you love," she said through her teeth.

"You let me alone!" she exclaimed stridently. "I will not stay another minute here!" Pages lifted his hand and rapped a stinging slap across Eulalia's jaws.

She put her hands to her face, and her mouth fell open in pain and surprise.

"Now, get on that horse," said the Governor sternly.

She hesitated just a second for the strong hand that was usually her mounting block, then scrambled quickly into the saddle.

As she passed the sentries at the presidio doors, she covered her head and bent low. The sentries looked after them with lively curiosity.

At the door of the mansion Angustias' scared face met them. "Go to bed," said the Governor shortly. With a gasp of understanding Angustias scuttled away.

Eulalia cast herself on the bed, trembling and fearful, but the Governor did not even look at her. She rubbed her stinging cheek tenderly a moment, then undressed, and slipped beneath the covers. Still the Governor did not speak, nor make any move, only stood with folded arms, looking at the floor.

At last, with a sigh, he stirred himself, and sank, a dejected dusty figure, before the Madonna.

MILFORD RAY ODOR

Milford Ray Odor was born March 29, 1920, to become a member of the happy family headed by Myria and Dewey Odor, two brothers, Dewey Lloyd and Ralph C. He became a member of Paint Lick Baptist Church under the pastorate of Rev. Roy Johnson in 1935 and he led a most consistent Christian life of 16 years, 5 months and 15 days. Milford Ray passed away on September 13, 1938. His life was a righteous one. Nothing can be said that would soothe the aching hearts of the bereaved more than reviewing his life while on earth. Besides his sorrowing parents and brothers, he leaves his grandfather and grandmother, also grandfather and grandmother Cayton. A lot of other relatives and a large number of friends to grieve his passing. There is something in the parting hour with chill and warmest heat, yet kindred comrades, lovers, friends are fated all to part. But this I've seen and many a pang has pressed it on my mind That the one who goes is happier than those he leaves behind.

Ah! The world knew not thy value The shady paths thy feet have trod. Led thee by the quiet waters, Flowing by the house of God.

Ray, how we'll miss thee in our broken band, miss thy voice so full of sunshine and the ready helping hand. There's a Happy meeting awaiting us we hope and know, and how weary is our waiting and the dawning tears still flow. But we say as sunset gathers Golden Glory in the West. We are one day nearer to thee, one day nearer to thy rest.

Funeral services were conducted at Paint Lick church, 2 o'clock by Rev. Roy Johnson and Rev. Henry Beale. Interment in I. O. O. F. cemetery at Napoleon. C. L. Carlton and Son had charge of arrangements.

National Fox Hunt To Be Held Week Of Nov. 13

Advance registration of guests and members, indicate that the 46th Annual Meeting of the National Fox Hunter's Association, which will be held in Winchester, Ky., during the week of November 13th, will draw the largest crowd ever gathered to participate in the Annual Field Trials.

Winchester, a city of 9,000, situated in the center of East-Central Kentucky, picturesque hunting country, 18 miles east of Lexington is renowned to fox hunters for its beautiful scenery, traditional hospitality and for the abundance of foxes found there.

Supplementing its hotel accommodations for the hundreds of out-of-state guests will be scores of spacious residences, rooms in private homes, apartments and Tourist Homes and Camps. The Housing Bureau for the Trials, has been set up in the chamber of Commerce offices in Winchester.

The 18th Chase Futurity, most important national field trial for foxhounds, has closed with 237 entries the greatest number in the history of the event.

L. & N. INSPECTS RAILS WITH NEW SPERRY DEVICE

Since it has been demonstrated that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, the Louisville and Nashville Railroad periodically tests the steel rails in its main track for hidden defects. The ingenious contrivance that does the testing, the Sperry Rail Detector Car, is now on the lines of the L. & N. and examined the rails through Walton several days ago.

This mechanical diagnostician, equipped with the most modern devices for testing rail in track, moves along at a speed of about 7 miles per hour under its own power, hunting and finding existing flaws, if any.

It employs a low voltage electric current, created by two gasoline driven generators, to set up a magnetic field around each rail the car passes over. Conditions within this field are recorded on a chart within the car by a pen which traces a straight line in the absence of flaws. When an irregularity disturbs the field, the pen deviates from its straight course and simultaneously an automatic paint gun spray a spot.

of paint on the rail at the point where the disturbance occurred. The operator stops the car and makes a hand test with a delicate meter to determine the extent and nature of the flaw, makes a report to railroad officials who immediately have the defective rail replaced before the flaw can assume dangerous proportions.

Sperry Detector Cars have been testing L. & N. rails periodically since 1930. The last previous inspection was completed February 1, 1938, when 234 miles of main line track were gone over. The present examination, which will cover 2,400 miles, is expected to be completed about December 1, 1938.

During the first six months of 1938, the Sperry fleet tested 36,476 track miles, an increase over previous corresponding year. Their method of "safely" the rails is gaining favor steadily with railroads in America, Canada and Europe. It is characterized by rail officers as one of the greatest contributions to safety assurance yet developed.

The L. & N., along with other American railroads, takes great pride in its Safety record, and is constantly striving to improve it, both in respect to patrons and employees. There were only three fatalities as a result of train accidents on American railroads in 1937; there has not been such a fatality on the L. & N. since 1917.

JEWS WELCOME TEIR NEW YEAR, 5699

Crowded temples and synagogues of Greater Cincinnati welcomed the Jewish New Year Monday—the first day of Tishri in the year 5699, according to the Jewish ecclesiastical calendar.

The Rosh Hashanah (New Year) messages at opening service Sunday evening urged patience and faith that the intolerance of today will reach an end.

The holy day also marks the beginning of the 10-day period of reflection on past sins which culminates in Yom Kippur (the Day of Atonement) on October 5.

Local Girl Wins
True-False Prize

This week the efforts of Miss Margaret Kaub will be rewarded with a dollar bill, and the fourth week of this interesting game was closed. The questions are getting more complicated, and the answers are more elusive than ever. At the same time, the readers are showing more interest in this pastime, and several have expressed their intentions of entering their list next week.

Entries from other states are pouring in, and those close at home are bringing them in, sending them in, and mailing them in, until the judges are swamped with lists to pick from. Sometimes it becomes difficult to choose the winner, and the judges have to go into the famous "football huddle" to select the best entry.

The answers to the questions of "Is It True or False" appears each week in the Classified ad column on the back page. Look for them.

ERLANGER MAN HELD ON FUGITIVE CHARGE

James K. Hicks, who authorities say is wanted in at least six states, was arrested at his home Saturday night as a fugitive from justice. It was alleged the jumped a bond of $1,000 after being arrested on a charge of having passed a worthless check for $250.

Special Deputies Modesta Gentilini and John McCann of St. Louis traced Hicks to Erlanger. They and Kenton County police caught his arrest. Hicks had been sought on a bench warrant issued in Kenton County Court after his indictment last February on charges of obtaining money under false pretenses.

Habes corpus proceedings were instituted by John T. Murphy, attorney, to effect the release of Hicks. Gentilini and McCann had been given power of attorney by the persons who had signed Hicks's bond at St. Louis. Under the law a bondsman may return without requisition papers a person to the place where the bond was signed. When this was brought up yesterday, Judge Northcott held that the bondsman could not transfer this right by power of attorney, but could enlist aid in having the person returned to the court in which the bond had been given.

In the interval, Gentilini and McCann have endeavored to wear requisition papers forward. William

RISING SUN PLANS
CARNIVAL OCT. 14-15

The annual Legion Carnival which has been staged in Rising Sun for the past several years, has been converted this year into a Fall Fun Frolic which will be held in this town Friday and Saturday, October 14 and 15. Giving promise of being something different in the way of public entertainment, huge crowds are expected to attend the two-day event.

In addition to the usual carnival rides, the celebration will feature a local contest that has never before with a Soap Box Derby being scheduled for the high light of the second day. Radio talent, contests of all kinds in which everybody will have an opportunity to join, and on old fiddlers' contest are only a part of the full two-day program planned.

The Rising Sun Rotary Club is co-operating with the Noah O'Banion Post of the American Legion in staging the affair, and other organizations and clubs of the city are making plans to aid in making it a success.

The Soap Box Derby, the only one to be held in this part of the country this season, will be open to contestants of nearby counties with the only regulations being those of the National Soap Box Derby contests. Generous prizes, which are to be announced later, are to be given to the winners.

Advertiser Offering Huge Dictionary at BargainHighway Patrol
Retained by State

The state highway patrol, suspended last month, has resumed with a force of 80 men, rather than the 20 who formerly operated under it. It was announced at Frankfort Monday.

Meanwhile, the Highway Department and attorney general's office was expected to get together and work out details so that the patrol can function on an equitable basis.

It also was learned here that members of the patrol will not work out of the military department, but will be under the control of Robert Humphreys, highway commissioner.

Their duties under the new setup, it was said, will be confined entirely to highway problems. Gambling, raids and acting as chauffeurs for political aspirants will not be looked upon by members of the force, it was understood.

Explains Road Program at Petersburg Road Meeting

O. M. Rogers Speaks to North Kentucky Motor Club Meeting Tuesday

A road-building program for Boone and Gallatin counties, a part of which already has been started, was outlined by O. M. Rogers, Commissioner, before members of the Northern Kentucky Motor Club, meeting with residents of the two counties in Petersburg Tuesday night to discuss completion of a road between Petersburg and Bellevue.

"If the property owners along the road will cooperate in giving rights-of-way that the state will accept, you will see the road constructed next year," Rogers said. Dr. R. W. Bledsoe, President of the club, opened the meeting.

Rogers was the first speaker. He asserted that road building was the biggest question confronting Kentucky, if not the nation.

Rogers declared construction of primary highways must have first consideration. He said the state is not making as much progress as he would like to see.

"While we have many good roads, highway building in Kentucky is in its infancy," he said.

Rogers said that work on seven miles of the Constance-Sand Run Road would be resumed in the spring.

He added that it was planned to find an outlet for this road to State Route 20. He advocated construction by the state of a road, approximately four miles long, between Burlington and Union in Boone county.

Rogers told the Gallatin county delegation that the Verona-Glenoe and Sugar Creek-Glenoe Roads, both of which are under construction, will be completed as rapidly as possible.

The Motor Club, on a motion by John H. Klette, directed that a resolution be drawn urging the Highway Department to complete the Petersburg-Bellevue road at the earliest possible time.

Tobacco Marketing Quota Meeting Held

Series of Community Gatherings Start Friday

A series of community meetings of the 1938 AAA tobacco marketing quotas will be held beginning Friday of this week and carrying thru next week, according to H. R. Foraker, county agent. Growers will be notified by mail of the meetings in all respective communities.

The 1938 and 1937 tobacco sales from the farm must be secured before the 1938 tobacco marketing quotas can be set up for any farm. A series of all day community meetings beginning this Friday will be held over the county. Each farmer attending these meetings will receive personal attention in filling out his quota forms.

Growers will be notified by mail the date and time of the meeting in their community. Those attending are requested to bring the sales of farm account records bills from their farm for the 1936 and 1937 years. The 1938 quotas to a large extent will be based on the average yield per acre sold from the farm the past three years times the number of acres grown this year.

The Carrollton warehouses have sent Boone County growers' weights to the county office. Growers selling their tobacco at other warehouses and who have lost their weights should write for same. The county office is glad to be of any help possible in this work.

Fire Prevention

The National Board of Fire Underwriters, in co-operation with every small insurance agency, are stressing the need of more adequate fire insurance during the period between October 9th and 15th. Radio broadcasts, the printed word, and the messages of many thousands of individual representatives will aid in spreading the word to every home and business.

During this week it would be a good idea if you would check up on your fire insurance policies covering your home, your furniture, car, other buildings, and your business. One small blaze may wipe out the fruits of years of careful saving and without the proper type of insurance, your loss may increase.

Now the war scare being diminished, why not get business going?

A Timely Warning

Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, who as Chairman of the Finance Committee of the United States Senate is a potent factor in government spending, has issued a note of warning concerning the vast appropriations made by Congress, and the rapidly mounting federal debt.

Addressing the State Democratic Committee on the subject recently, and using the WPA as an example of excessive spending, he said:

"We realize that we've got to take care of the starving and the homeless, but you know and I know there are thousands on the WPA rolls that have no business there. It isn't making for a better citizenship of the country. We've got too many people in America who think the Government exist primarily to take care of them."

While praising the President as a great humanitarian leader and serving new notice of his independence of the administration in major fiscal policies, Senator Harrison declared that "extensive federal spending must cease."

He thanked the State Democratic Committee for their recent reference to him as good presidential timber and said that he had not been "touched by the presidential bee."

He added, "I regret to say that I do not believe any man from the deep South will ever be president."

Almost four million pounds of relief flour in Kentucky is not an aid to the small mills.

Mistakes Are Teachers

Progress is determined, to a large degree, upon mistakes. "Show me the man who has made no mistakes, and I'll show you the man who has done nothing."

Our dependable friend, Noah describes a mistake as "The result of taking or understanding wrongly." To make a mistake, it is self evident that we did do something. We were trying to accomplish a task. There's enough ego in the humblest of us to want to be right, all the time.

Through the lesson we learn from a mistake we make, we become cognizant of the difference. The more previous the error, the less likely will be the continued repetition of the same blunder. A mistake may be irreparable but no mistake was ever made that was void of some good. Perhaps the benefits are not immediately discernable but in some measure they are there.

For us to find them is to fortify ourselves. The exercise that makes us tired is the exercise that makes us strong. If at the first drop of perspiration we discontinue, our efforts toward a more fitful body is valueless. So it is in our daily routine.

A blunder now and then is most certainly not to be desired, but—if our faculty does express itself occasionally, we can, with proper self-diagnosis do as the doctor who uses an antidote of poison to save the life of a poisoned person. Use the error as a guide to avoid the continuance of the same error in the future.

Let's ask the four-power arbitrators to get busy and cook the Spanish omelet?

Our Own Standards

Prosperity or depression? Employment or unemployment? Lines of men in industry or lines of men at breadlines?

What makes a job for a man or an industry? A demand from a person or group ready, able and willing to buy—in short, a market.

The United States is the best market—for here is the highest wage scale, the highest standard of living in the entire world.

But American industries are not selling all they can to this richest market because the degraded conditions of workers in other parts of the world can produce more cheaply.

When we buy a dinner plate made in the Orient we may be keeping an American potter away from his bench; when we buy copper mined by a 50-cents a day native in equatorial Africa we are keeping an American copper miner away from his work; when we buy paper made abroad we are keeping American lumbermen and papermakers away from their trade.

When we allow cheap materials to come into this country, we are tending to lower our own wage rate and our own standard of living—and in so doing we are lessening our own market, which is composed of and values cannot be deserted and left to the whim of foreign exporters.

People who formerly believed Santa Claus, added was the North Pole are now convinced it has been changed to Washington.

DIXIE STORIES, ANECDOTES, SAYINGS; SOME OLD, SOME NEW, SOME ORIGINAL AND SOME OTHERWISE

By WILL S. NORRIS

582 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio

We are hearing a great deal about elections and this reminds us of a Tennessee story about a man running for Congress. He was highly educated and a lawyer, coming from a wealthy family. He did not know much about the needs and wants of the common people, whom he aspired to represent, but wanted position and honor.

If elected with his legal knowledge, he thought he could help pass laws that would help lawyers and his wealthy clients, but he had to depend upon the common people for votes. Remembering that Abe Lincoln had said the Lord loved common folks for he had made so many of them, the candidate got into his high powered automobile to go out and solicit votes of the dear common people.

He drove up to a farm house, asking the good wife where he would find her husband. She answered that he was down at the hog lot feeding the hogs. Mr. Candidate went down to find the farmer working hard wondering if his hogs would bring enough to pay taxes, interests and other necessary bills, and wondering why there were so many laws for the favored few and so few for the common people.

few and so few for the common people. would bring enough to meet taxes, interests and other necessary bills, and wondering why there were so many laws for the favored few and so few for the common people.

Mr. Candidate was very affable telling him the many things he intended doing if elected. He tried to make a good impression, and tried to show he knew something about hogs.

In the lot there was an extra-sized outstanding stag. Mr. lawyer asked with a great deal of imaginary hog knowledge and wisdom, "How many hams will you get out of that large hog?" The farmer passed it up as best he could, not wanting to embarrass the man who aspired to go to Washington to make the laws for the farmers and the other dear people.

But he told his wife: "My boy John, 16, knows more about the needs and wants of the farmer than that man who wants to go to Congress to make laws for us."

or insignia to be recognized as superiors, loyalty and obedience and oblige myself to execute all commands carefully and without personal regard, because I know my leader does not ask anything unlawful of me." It is reported the Bund membership in the United States is more than 400,000, all under oath to Hitler, and yet we are told over and over again there's no danger of America from these foreign organizations.

That the Japanese are extremely clever in business matters as well as diplomacy has never been questioned by the informed, yet a recent move accentuates their astuteness trade. America was said to have been boycotting a certain article manufactured in Japan. It was being particularly hard hit, and the little brown men sat up nights devising ways to combat the falling off in trade. One bright idea conceived and carried out was to change the name of the town the article was manufactured in to USA. Of course, such a change in fairly large letters "Made in USA, Japan," the latter word being printed in as small letters as possible to make it legible. And it is said, many who were in on the boycott are being taken in by the subterfuge.

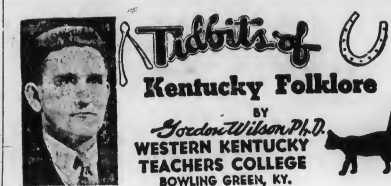

An Ohioan who visited Kentucky was asked by his friends on his return what was the most typical of Kentucky that he saw or heard on his recent visit. He replied the expression, "Take two and butter them while hot, was most typical. In the household where he visited the hostess was passing the biscuit platter, filled with beautifully textured, light flaky biscuits that literally melted in one's mouth. To the guest she remarked "Take two and butter them while hot." It struck him as superlatively hospitable, giving him the feeling of welcome and solicitude which is required to make a perfect visit. This expression while probably not used but little in the North, is one heard frequently in Kentucky.

The Christian Science Monitor, probably the leading independent newspaper of the United States; says: "Many people are beginning to wonder if it is ever going to be possible to beat an administration that is spending as much money as the New Deal." The writer having close-ly observed the worth of these expenditures in elections has been amazed the people have not protested in such volume as to bring about a change in manner in which the huge sums are expended. Until a different plan is adopted, in our humble opinion, there is no hope of the old adage of "Never bite the hand that feeds you" being violated, and if another bromide is needed, just remember it is not yet fashionable to "Shoot Santa Claus."

It is estimated that 13,000,000 families in the United States are receiving from the Federal Government, subsidies in one form or another, totaling that approximately 40,000,000 people are subsisting, partially so, by being wards of a beneficent administration. We do not assume that anything like all these people are partisan New Dealers at election time, but we do believe that an overwhelming percentage may safely be counted upon to support that side.

Much is heard of the German-American Bund in these times. It has been in frequent conflict with the American Legion and other patriotic organizations. Upon affiliating with the Bund it is requiring that the Nazi salute be given, and the following oath taken, so we are informed. It pledges my faith to my leader, Hitler. I promise Adolph Hitler and those put in charge by him and well-known to me or be means

AMANDA Aldrich's private school. Fritz King walking a rope. John Connor and Al. Arnold playing checkers. McFlation and Blanton giving prizes. Legrand Brooks clerking for "Charley" Myers. WASHINGTON BEHIND THE EARS

Dante pictured many phases of punishment in this inferno; I wonder whether his mother or his sister ever washed behind his ears on Sunday morning. If he had suffered some such torment, why did he not put some of his worst enemies in a pit in the hereafter where ear-washing was forever going on. Probably Dante himself was too humane to subject any one to this sort of misery all through eternity.

Society had decreed that a boy must be clean when he presented himself at Sunday School. If I let a place on the front of his head but never where he could not see, just as he blacked the toes or even the sides of his shoes. But Mother or Big Sister came into the picture and did her part of keeping the family name and the family ears clean. Though it was a long time ago, I can still feel the agony of having a week's accumulation of dirt being removed by pressure. My sister got as a washrag the cuff of a sleeve or leg of winter underwear, ridged just to scrape skin and dirt off together. Somehow she always rubbed the wrong way, both physically and mentally. I let out such squeals as I now bitterly condemn in my son when he is enduring a similar agony. School I would know the wisest man. But a few minutes later at Sunday school, he was the strongest man, who built, the ark, and all the rest of the questions without a trace of the agony I had gone through. Probably the reason I always listened when the preacher told of the indefinite extension of pain in the hereafter was the experience I had just gone thru. I certainly did not want to take any chances on having some torment for a million years at a stretch.

Now washing one's feet was almost pure fun, at least in the way that I washed mine. I cannot recall having been small enough to have them washed by any one else. We had, as all good homes had, those days, a little wooden tub that seemed especially designed for foot-washing. It had been the container of maccheroni, a strong sort of dish that my father and other men of the neighborhood liked. The tub fitted our feet perfectly and held the requisite amount of water. I am afraid, looking back a third of a century at the whole thing, that we merely soaked our feet a few minutes and rubbed off some of the outer layers of dirt on a meal-sack towel. Anyway, we could do our own washing and could hop into bed without any further inspection. To have washed one's feet gave a feeling of self-righteousness that I somehow never feel now; there were said to be bad boys who actually went to bed with dirty feet that had washed dust or mud all day.

The only other agony that I can recall that somewhat approximated washing behind the ears was having the finger nails cut. Sister was the inquisitor in this agony, too. She seized a small pair of scissors that father had used in his earlier days as a surgeon and had discarded; she pressed down the corners of the flesh and made me feel like St. Lawrence, I am sure. He was the saint who was flayed alive, I believe. I fully expected to die from nail-cutting and probably hoped I would and thus wring my sister's heart for her torture; but I escaped, as youngsters still escape, and wonder today why it was such an agony. Dirty claws and still dirtier ears were lots of fun when nobody interfered.

KENTUCKY IS SECOND PLACE AMONG 19 TOBACCO STATES
Kentucky held its place as the second largest tobacco-producing state in the nation in 1937, putting 366,190,000 pounds of leaf of all types on the market, Department of Agriculture, records showed Monday.

North Carolina topped the list of 19 producing states with 566,530,000 pounds last year and 637,770,000 in 1936. Kentucky's 1936 output was 216,438,000 pounds. The average price a pound paid for Kentucky tobacco in 1937 was 17.6 cents, compared with the nation's average of 30.5 cents.

The Bluegrass State's output was almost one-fourth of the entire nation's yield of 1,553,045 pounds last year.

Historic Hoaxes

By Elmo Scott Walton

Anti-Brassiere Campaign

WHEN the late Halbert L. Board, editor of the Jefferson County Union, approached some of his friends in Fort Atkinson, Wis., with a request that they sign a petition which he had prepared, they didn't hesitate. They knew his paper advocated some very good things and they were willing to help "Bert" along by signing this:

"The undersigned note with alarm the news we regard with horror eyes at an amendment, the woman suffrage law. We note many more women wearing brassieres than before. We can stand that, but this new fad—slab-sided dresses, flat in front—showing women in the fashion pictures as flat-chested as men, we regard with horror eyes at an infringement."

We ask that the Congress of the United States do its utmost to break down these brassieres. We ask that it make the future well-being of society that they had been a little hasty. Their womenfolk told them they "ought to be ashamed" and that they "should mind their own business." But a Welfare League in a city nearby took the matter seriously and passed a resolution supporting the campaign.

Then an official of the state board of health issued a statement saying that brassieres caused rickets in babies. Whereupon Mr. Board wrote an editorial in which he said:

There are cow-milk-fed babies right in this city that are gasping for breath, the doctor at his feet and in noisier than properly. They could live on monkey's milk, because monkeys are related, but they are not monkeys around except with the deadly brassieres and few of those are giving milk.

Before the uproar over this matter died down, Halbert Board was known from coast to coast as the valiant crusader against the "dead-end" brassiere—because of a hoax which some of his obliging friends helped perpetrate.

GIRL RESERVE NEWS OF SIMON KENTON

The Senior Girl Reserve Club was organized on September 20, 1938. The following officers were elected: President, Betty Kennedy; Vice-President, Verno Colough; Secretary, Dorothy Hasenstab; Treasurer, Minnie V. Daugherty; Corresponding Secretary, Elizabeth Roberts.

We have the club divided into committees. The chairman of these committees are: Program, Hazel Sowder; Jo Ann Rupert; Worship, Bonita Russell; Personality, Mar. Harrell; Recreation, Anna K. Butler; Membership, Ethel M. Riley; Historian, Martha Cookrell; Publicity, Stella Sterling; Hospitality, Virginia Lee Klein, Welfare, V. G. Erwin; Finance, Jenny L. Hillard; Handicraft, Ruth C. Parham; Publicity, Alma Gaskin; Hobbies, Dorothy Rankin; World Fellowship, Betty Farmer. We plan to have more committees but have not selected them as yet.

Junior Reserve Clubs all helped in donating flowers for St. Elizabeth's Hospital. They were taken down by Miss Taylor and Mr. Hall. The girls assisting Miss Taylor were: Verna Colough, Ethel Mae Riley, and Betty Kennedy. The flowers were taken to the old ladies ward and special bouquets were taken to Sammie Glass and Kathryn Kempfhouse. Several of the girls acted as hosesses and pages at the Kenton County P. T. A. Council dinner held at Simon Kenton.

FUTURE FARMER BOYS BUY GOOD LIVESTOCK

The Vocational Agriculture boys of the Simon-Kenton High School have made a good start toward securing some good livestock. Since last spring the following list of livestock has been brought into the county for project work in agriculture. One hundred and seventy western ewes of Hampshire-Rambouillet cross-bred were secured early in June. These sheep were brought cooperatively by eleven boys, and shipped directly from the Black foot Indian reservation in Montana. Each of the following boys secured ten, fifteen, or twenty of the sheep: Nolin Mullikin; James Murphy, Robert Jackson, Jack Hays, Otto Frothingham, Lewis Trapp Morris, Henry Schuster, Jas. Hammans, Paul and Roy Rust. Each boy has secured a purebred Southdown ram. Results at the experiment station show that the best grade western ewe bred to a purebred Southdown ram produces the best market lamb of any sheep.

In addition to the western sheep Robert Jackson bought an excellent registered Jersey heifer from the Spindletop farm at Lexington and a registered Jersey male at a large Jersey cattle sale in Boone county. George Wolsing has bought a registered O. I. G. gull, Lewis Trapp bought a registered Spotted Poland-China gull from one of the largest stock farms in Indiana. And Harold Soden bought a registered Duroc-Jersey gull. This was a prize winner in open competition with fifty gulls, from four states, at the Kentucky State Fair, and whose sire and dam have both been Grand Champions at the State Fair. At least two of the boys are making plans to buy registered hogs. This may be a small beginning, but it is a good start in the right direction. Let us hope that the boys keep this up. Interest is sure to increase as they go along, and as a result there should be quite an improvement in the quality of livestock in Kenton county within a few years time.

SIMON KENTON SENIOR HI-Y CLUB

The 20, of September, twenty boys met in Room 201 to effect the organization of the Senior Hi-Y Club for the current year.

The following officers were chosen: Robert Jackson, president; Ray Mullins, Vice-president; Roy D. Trapp, secretary; and James H. Moore, treasurer.

The regular meeting time is Tuesday from 12:10 to 12:30. The programs thus far have consisted of singing, Bible Reading, prayer, reading of constitution of Hi-Y Club, and planning for the year's activities. Tuesday, October 11, Mr. Charles Freeman of the Covington "Y" spoke to our club.

Thursday, October 6, Mr. Moore and Kenneth Kelly attended a northern Kentucky Hi-Y council dinner at the Covington "Y". This is the second year of the council's functioning it merits the support of the Hi-Y Clubs of Northern Kentucky. Following the dinner an instructive and inspirational program was rendered. The climax was a swim in the "Y" pool. The annual Hi-Y Conference will be held at Owenton, October 21-23. We propose to have a delegation with our sponsor there.

We expect to have a father-and-son banquet this year. We have now twenty-three members.

BOY SCOUTS ORGANIZE SCOUTING CLUB

The Boy Scouts at Simon Kenton have been organized a scouting club which meets each Thursday during the extra-curricular period. The hour is devoted to the discussing of the problems of scouting and to the planning of various activities in the scout troops.

Both the Simon Kenton and the Piner troops have had meetings this year and are constructing comprehensive programs in scouting during the winter. While much of the activity is based upon the out-of-door program, the inside program for both the individual scout and also the scout troop is almost unlimited in its scope.

Last Tuesday after school boys from Troop 10 met outside and cooked supper. Some of them passed parts of their Second Class requirements for cooking. This is one of the most interesting tests in the program since each boy must cook meat and pork without using utensils. Steak or pork is placed on a stick between layers of bacon and onions and cooked until it is thoroughly done, and the bread is also baked by wrapping layers of dough on stick which is rotated until the bread is brown.

Meetings of the Simon Kenton Troop are scheduled for Wednesday, after school, and will probably last for two hours. Any scout may remain later if he wished to pass tests or to secure instruction. The two hour program will consist of some of the various phases of scouting such as: hiking, cooking, games, first aid, nature study, signaling, and merit badge work.

A number of boys have expressed their desire to become members of the scout organization and all boys twelve years of age or older are eligible to join when they pass various requirements.

CABINET MEETING

Ethel May Riley acted as hostess, assisted by Elizabeth Roberts, in her home at the first monthly cabinet meeting of the Simon Kenton Girl Reserve Club on October 4. A buffet supper was served and followed by a short devotional given by Bonita Russell and Anna Katharine Butler. Those attending the supper were: Miss Elma Taylor, Miss Helen Richardson, Doris Hasenstab, Verna Colough, Minnie V. Daugherty, Hazel Sowder, Bonita Russell, Mary Harrell, Anna Katharine Butler, Martha Cookrell, Stella Sterling, Virginia Irwin, Jenny Lee Hellard, Ruth Carr, Alma Gaskin, Jo Ann Rupert, and Dorothy Rankin.

Plans of the Club for the near future include: chicken dinner for inmates of old Ladies Home, Covington, Kentucky; flower day at Booth's Hospital; and surprise boxes for students.

The first inter-club council meeting of greater Cincinnati at the Cincinnati Y. W. C. A. Saturday, October 8. Those attending from Simon Kenton were: Martha Cookrell, Verna Colough, Hazel Sowder, Elizabeth Roberts, Alma Gaskin, Louise Stephens, Betty Kennedy, and Miss Elma Taylor.

KENTON COUNTY FARM NEWS FARMERS BUSY SEEDING COVER CROPS

Agromony Leaflet, "Cover Crops" issued by Extension Division of College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, Lexington, gives the following information about cover crops:

Reduce Erosion and Leaching. Provide Cheap Feed. Improve Soils.

"Cover Crops. Protect the Soil. The term, cover crop, as used here means a crop grown during fall and winter to provide a protective covering to land which otherwise would be bare. The crops commonly used for this purpose are wheat, rye and barley. Crimson clover, vetch and other winter crops are sometimes used.

The failure to use cover crops in Kentucky has been the major factor contributing to the loss of soil and plant food. It is estimated that this loss in Kentucky exceeds 35 million dollars annually. It is further estimated that over 1,000,000 acres of land in this State, or 1-5 of the cultivated land area, has been so badly eroded as to render it unfit for farming, and another million acres are rapidly reaching that point.

Cover crops not only prevent erosion but experiment conducted at the Kentucky Experiment Station show that they also reduce the loss of plant food by leaching. The loss of nitrogen, one of the most expensive plant foods, was over twenty-five times greater on unprotected soil than where a cover crop occupied the land during the winter.

It has been estimated that it requires hundreds of years for nature to produce one inch of soil from parent rock. This amount is sometimes lost in one year by leaving the land uncovered thru the winter. It is of greatest importance. The slogan, used by paint manufacturers, "When you save the surface, you save all" applies very forcibly to our soil. Cover crops save our surface soil from being washed away.

PLANT COVER CROPS!

Why? Reduce erosion. Reduce leaching. Provide feed. Enrich the soil. Increase profits.

What? Rye. Wheat. Barley. Crimson Clover. Vetch and others.

FOLLOWING:

Where? Corn. Tobacco. Sorghums and cowpeas. All other cultivated crops. Legumes seeded without a grass.

When? As soon as preceding crop is harvested.

TO IMPROVE WOODS

Lee county farmers will earn soil building allowances by improving timber production, notes County Agent T. H. Jones. Herman Denton is working in a 7-1-2 acre tract of woods. One Spencer on 5 acres of trees, while Henry Spencer will clean up and thin out 5 acres of woodland. Several other farmers hope to improve smaller tracts of timber land.

Gardens are helping Miss Mary Louis Scott, home demonstration agent in Breathitt county, Kentucky, combat pellagra, that deficiency disease that still persists in some regions. Vegetables and fruit will prevent pellagra, and Miss Scott conducted a year-round campaign in the interests of more and better gardens and orchards.

Making more effective the health work of Miss Scott, the Robinson Experiment Substation, a branch of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station located in Breathitt county, has demonstrated that good fruit can be produced on the hills of Eastern Kentucky. Many kinds of large and small fruits are being successfully grown on the Experiment station land.

Miss Scott has been stressing late gardens, so that fresh vegetables may be had until winter. Her program of home canning goes on from mid-summer through late fall. Last some family fail to have good garden, Miss Scott visits hundreds of farm homes to give more or less personal supervision to vegetable production, and to the canning of the surplus products, in order that there may be no "winter" diet which too often means pellagra for both children and adults.

CHAPTER XXIII

"Now I will sing to my well beloved a song of my beloved touching his vineyard."

My well beloved hath a vineyard in a very fruitful hill—

Fray Fermín Lasuen, sitting beside the Governor on the north bench beneath a great oak on top of a hill, repeated the words of Isaiah as they watched the Indians picking the ripe grapes that burdened the gnarled and twisted vines.

It was the last day of the vendimia. The fruit had been allowed to hang beneath the burning sun until the last possible minute when rich juices would strain the purple skins to the utmost, without beginning to dry. Only a few stragglers remained in the vineyard. The festa de la vendimia was already starting as a bustle and stir in the direction of the barbecue pits, shouts and songs from the workers came into his mind again. "Poor little thing. . . like a little frightened animal caught in a snare, goaded into gnawing off a foot, rather than to be held in a trap. Ave Maria!" He beat his breast softly, despairingly. Then he slipped his hand beneath his leather jerkin and drew out the scapular made from the hair of St. Peter's fish.

In his hands was some comfort. Timidly he lifted it to his lips and kissed it.

"Poor little thing. . . That was all his thoughts could form. 'I understand, I, too, if I did not love this strange California, would wish to sail away. Even with my love, I have the loneliness of the wilderness. Ave Maria! What shall I do now? God help me, holy Master Jesus, help me, Santa Maria, help me, holy Father Serra, intercede for me!'"

He had crouched so long, lost in prayer and bitterness, that when he raised his head, he saw it was already dawn. From the parade ground there came the sound of a bugle's notes, and of horses' hoofs. Sharply he remembered he had ordered a guard to accompany him to the beach to witness the departure of the French ships.

He pulled himself stiffly to his feet, and looked across at the bed. Eulalia was asleep, one hand still curved over her outraged cheek. Tenderly he bent over her a moment then tiptoed out of the room.

On the beach blazed a huge fire of driftwood. The sand was marked with the prints of many feet. There were bits of refuse and scraps left by the departing French sailors. Fages looked about him. Here the tent which was the laboratory had stood, with its strange fascinating instruments. Here were the blackened cinders of the fire where the balloon had risen.

Fages sighed and lifted his glasses. It was a thick morning fog moved in so densely he could scarcely see the water. He wondered if La Perouse could see the beauty of the fire he had built in his honor.

He thought of Le Pante Dagelet . . . and dismissed him, once and for all, from his thoughts.

He remembered what La Perouse had said, that on leaving California he must catch the Chinese monsoon into Asiatic waters. "My imagination must always precede my eyes," he had laughed, Fages envied him with all his heart.

Suddenly a breeze moved, and lifted the fog for a few moments from the face of the waters.

Don Pedro and the watchers on shore saw the spread sails and towering masts of the Boussolle and the Astrolabe, nearer than it had seemed they could be, putting out of the bay into the open sea.

They cheered, moved by the sight of the shadowy ships. From one of them, the flag-ship, came a burst of smoke, followed by a mist-muffled salute. The soldiers of the presidio guard fired a volley in reply.

Then as the fog moved down again they were lost to sight, and the fog did not lift again.

It was years later that the Viceroy of Mexico learned, by dispatches from Europe, that the Boussolle and the Astrolabe had made the Sandwich Islands, and there deposited with the captain of a home-bound English ship all of the findings of the Count Jean Francois Galois de La Perouse, concerning his expedition, and his visit to California, the fortitude of the Governor Don Pedro Fages, the kindness and piety of Pere Fermín Lasuen, and the hospitality of them both.

From the Sandwich Isles, the Frenchmen had sailed away, had been seen once again by men in New Zealand, then disappeared.

The Astrolabe, the Boussolle, the La Perouse, Monsieur de Langie, Le Pante Dagelet, the scholars, scientists, sailors and lovers, the delicate instruments, the botanical and zoological specimens which had been picked up in the Frenchmen's expedition, were all lost in the Pacific. And the manner of the disaster remained for ever a mystery.

and the flash of white teeth in her dark face was startling.

She said, "dark, dark as the earth, and from her rose an aura of fruitfulness, of ancient earth-mysteries, hidden, savage, impenetrable."

Pedro Fages' blood pounded. His heart felt choked. A temple veil rose and pulsed suddenly. His eyes saw, and his knees felt weak.

"Indiuel!" he called, but his voice broke suddenly. He cleared his throat as the girl looked at him, still smiling with a subtle understanding look in her eyes.

"I . . . I want to . . . speak with you . . . Sit down."

She sank on to the earth, and with a little gesture seemed to become a part of it. From swimming eyes she looked up at him.

"Sit, Senor!" she asked softly. Fages clenched his hands. "Fray Fermín has said," he burst forth, "that he wishes to arrange a marriage for you with Pio. What do you say?"

She looked at him mockingly, gravely.

"That old man should think of other things than marriages. It is not decent for his thoughts to dwell on such things. So I have been taught."

"Do you want to marry Pio?" the Governor asked hurriedly. "Do you love him?"

"I have also been taught to tell the truth." She bent over and patted a handful of earth into a little pile, and smoothed it as she spoke.

"I do not love Pio. I do not love any of the Indian boys, nor any of the soldiers." She looked at the Governor, with head suddenly thrown back.

She laughed. "You know, you have always known, as I have, that I am for you. No one shall have but my lord, my beloved master. I am his, to gather as he does the grapes from his vineyard, and to crush, as he crushes them."

Fages listened to the low voice that seemed to blend with the buzzing of the bees. What she said seemed natural, as though somewhere, some time, he had heard it before. As though in a spell he spoke.

"Yes," he said, in a voice not his own. The girl took a deep breath. "When?" she asked so simply.

"Now? This is the vendimia." (CONTINUED NEXT WEEK)

R. M. Giltner of Eminence filed a suit with sweet clover and a small amount of timothy and alfalfa clover, using molasses to help in the fermentation process. Some of this silage fed between the bluegrass and lespedeza pasture seasons was readily eaten by cows.

Hardin county dairy farmers plan to feed small grain of slightly inferior quality, rather than sell it and take a dock in price. Such grain is said to have practically the same feeding value as the first-class product.

A Clark county cover crop demonstration includes the growing of Italian rye grass and crimson clover on one plot, rye alone on another strip and wheat alone on a third plot. These clover crops will be plowed under and the land set in tobacco next year.

About 500 samples of soil were tested for the need of lime and phosphate, at a series of six meetings in Webster county. Agriculture agents of the Illinois Central and Louisville and Nashville railroads co-operated in the meetings.

Leaders of the foods project in Boone county homemakers, clubs made an educational tour in Cincinnati, visiting packing plants, bakeries, food shops, groceries, restaurants and other institutions making or distribution food products.

The Oldham county alfalfa acreage, which has been under cultivation for several years, was enlarged about 50 acres in August. All the land was limed and phosphated before seeding, and most of the seed was inoculated.

WARNING ISSUED

Is has come to the attention of the Covington field office of the Social Security Board, according to Frank B. Decker, Jr., Manager that a number of merchants have accepted the Social Security Account Number as a basis for issuing checks or extending credit with a resulting loss in funds and merchandise.

Just recently a number of merchants have caused trouble for a party who used his account number card as his sole means of identification. Mr. Decker, therefore, issued the following warning:

"The public is warned not to accept the account number as the basis for cashing checks or extending credit. It is possible for a man to go to one of our offices, give a false name and a fictitious address and thus obtain a Social Security number. Any one who cashes a check on this supposed identification is very foolish in my opinion.

The same is true in an even greater degree in the case of metal checks or other devices used as permanent records. We don't object to the use of any type of permanent record, but we do say that there is only one official Social Security card and that is issued by the Social Security Board through its field office.

Mr. Decker further added that the Social Security Board has not authorized any firm to sell metal plates on which permanent records of Social Security numbers are recorded.

KENTUCKY PICKLES PAY

A hundred acres of pickles added $7,000 to the income of farmers in Grayson county this year, according to County Agent R. T. Faulkner. Some of the growers, their acreages and returns follow: Bob Laseley, 1 1/2 acres, $286; Charles Skaggs, three-fourths of an acre, $110; William Pierce, 2 acres, $275; L. F. Stanton, 1 1/4 acres, $150.

SCHOOL DAYS MAKE NEW DEMANDS ON COOKIE JAR

By MARIE GIBSON

Courier-Journal Food Editor

With school days and bridge clubs starting all over again, we are making new demands on the cookie jar. Much has been said about this cookie and that, but housewives are ever looking for a new kind of crunch, crisp sweet to add to their collection.

A mixture of orange rind, coconut, lemon rind, sugar, shortening, flour and eggs makes these delightful cookies. And the convenient part about making them is that you need do no rolling or cutting. Just drop a bit of dough on the cookie sheet and press it out flat with the bottom of a glass covered with a damp cloth.

Decorate some of the cookies with chopped nuts, some with additional toasted coconut and others with chopped glazed fruits.

ORANGE COCONUT COOKIE

One cup triple-creamed shortening, one teaspoon salt, two teaspoons grated orange rind, one teaspoon grated lemon rind, three fourths cup sugar, two eggs, well beaten, two and one-fourth cup sifted flour, one cup shredded coconut, chopped.

Combine shortening, salt and grated fruit rinds. Add sugar, then beaten eggs, and beat thoroughly. Add one-half of flour, then thoroughly mix the remaining flour well.

Drop from teaspoon on greased baking sheets. (Or press through pastry bag). Let stand a few minutes, then flatten cookies by stamping with a glass covered with a damp cloth. Bake in moderate, hot oven (375 degrees F.) six to ten minutes, or until delicately browned. This makes four and one-half dozen.

DATED CHEESE JUMBLES

One-half cup shortening, one-half cup sugar, one-half cup cream cottage cheese, one and one-half cups sifted flour, one-half teaspoon salt, three teaspoons baking powder, twenty-four pitted dates.

Creamed shortening, sugar and cheese together until smooth and fluffy. (If cheese is dry, moisten with a little milk.) Sift flour with salt and baking powder, add gradually to creamed mixture. Shape in to thin discs. Press each date to a roll and chill in refrigerator. Cut between finger-tips or with a spatula until flattened, place on one cookie round, cover with another round and press edges firmly together. Sprinkle tops with sugar. Bake in moderate hot oven (400 degrees F.) ten minutes or until delicately browned.

Yield: Twenty-four small cookies

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANNING MEALS

A meal planning circular, issued by the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture, gives the following suggestions:

Distribute the protein, carbohydrate and fats throughout the day so no type of food does not predominate at any one meal.

Do not serve the same food twice in one meal as tomato soup and and poorly seasoned foods are not appetizing to most persons.

Serve light desserts, as raw fruits, fruit sauces or simple gelatin and ice, with a heavy meal.

Serve rich desserts, such as pie, steamed puddings, short-cakes and rich ice creams and rich gelatin desserts only with a light meal.

NEW POULTRY YEAR

STARTS IN OCTOBER

Persons who make a business of poultry raising begin a new year of record keeping in October. The pullets now are ready to begin producing eggs, and the periods of advancing prices is at hand. "Poultry Pointers for October," issued by J. E. Humphrey of the Kentucky College of Agriculture, indicates that feed prices are down considerably from last year. This fact helped poultry raisers make a profit in the year which ended September 30. Owners of 41 demonstration flocks reported a profit, compared with a loss for the preceding year.

Mr. Humphrey advises flock owners to give careful attention to housing, feeding and disease control. T layers should have comfortable and clean quarters. The best feeding method is to keep grain and mash in a hopper. Since eggs are mostly water there should be a clean supply always before the birds.

Overcrowding is a serious matter since it prevents proper feeding and laying and tends to spread disease. There should be 30 feet of hopper-feeding space for every 100 pullets, and a nest for every five or six birds.

Bluegrass, alfalfa or clover range reduces feed costs and makes a health and egg production. If not available, then supply alfalfa hay or some other green feed. Every effort should be made to control lice and mites.

State and National Business Showing Renewed Vigor

With the dissipation of the European war scare, business generally throughout the country entered the first week of October with renewed vigor, according to reports to the Department of Commerce from 36 key cities, just received by its Louisville District Office. One of the most significant features of the reports was the large number of cities showing substantial increases in building permits issued in September as compared with the same month last year. New York City led in this respect, with an increase of almost $10,000,000 in plans filed. Scattered reports gave evidence of increasing employment. Wholesale volume as a whole was better than at this time last year. Retail trade, however, continued to lag behind last year's comparative, and the month of September, as a whole, did not come up to expectations.

Louisville reported that sharp gain in retail trade over preceding week failed to raise volume to level of last year. Decline from last year ranged between 10 and 15%. Wholesale activity reported steady. Industry continued to advance operating rates cautiously.

Strike of 700 employees of automobile assembly plant at Evansville, Ind., stopped work of 1,500 other workers.

Kentucky Employment Service reported placements, 589, increase of 5.3% over preceding week.

Louisville bank clearings decreased 3.2% from year ago, Louisville showing least decline of 22 major cities.

Tobacco continued in curing stage much of crop now being ready for bulking, making this the earliest cured crop in several years.

State Highway Commission awarded contract for $200,955 for projects in Jefferson, Shelby, Kenton and Morgan counties, Ky.

New Theatre near completion in Erlanger, Ky.

Coal tonnage from Eastern Kentucky showing steady weekly increase and is expected to continue to climb until November at least. In 1 week, average of 2,700 cars were handled.

116-acre farm in Nelson county, Ky., sold at $76 an acre, making a total sum of $8,816.

Additional allotment of $86,000 announced for REA lines in Jessamine, Madison, Fayette and Woodford counties, Ky., also $162,000 announced for 145 miles of line in Garrard, Marion, Nelson, Lincoln, Lenoir, Boyle, Mercer and Washington counties.

From Market Items

Walton's tax burden based on the Kentucky per capita load of $61.43, is $52,461.22, according to a survey by the National Consumers Tax Commission completed recently.

Kentucky residents, the commission reported from its headquarters in Chicago, contribute an estimated $179,370,550 in taxes each year to local, state and national government.

The commission, which is fighting hidden and direct taxes that add to the burden of the consumer, said that more than sixty-three per cent of the tax load is paid in indirect levies that increase the price of all purchases, including the necessities.

The commission's crusade by the women of the nation is receiving great impetus from the enthusiastic support of hundreds of Kentucky housewives, according to Mrs. E. H. Heller, of Louisville, this state's representative on the commission's national committee.

"Residents of Walton pay a major share of their tremendous tax load without knowing," the report stated. "They pay heavy unseen levies through higher prices on everything they buy, prices that must be raised to cover taxes imposed on products from the producer to the store counter."

The commission expects women's units to be formed in every city and town in the state to join the nationwide hidden tax crusade, Mrs. Heller said.

Louisville Girl Wins True Prize

This week's few minutes of effort in the "Is It True or False?" contest running in The Walton Advertiser were rewarded with a dollar bill, and the prize winner was chosen as Miss Evelyn Shaw of 1784 Shawnee Road, Louisville. Miss Shaw is a former resident of Gallatin county.

The interest in this amusing game seems never to slack up, for more entries are coming in every week. There is no cost to enter—nothing to buy or nothing to sell—just submit a list of ten "Is It True or False?" questions similar to those found in this issue, and then send them to the Contest Editor, care of Walton Advertiser. Who knows, you may be the lucky person next week, and it only takes a small amount of effort to try.

NEW CHEVROLET ON DISPLAY SATURDAY

Sleek new aero-stream bodies suggesting fleetness and luxury combine with numerous mechanical advancements, at least two of which are major in character, to assure keen public interest in the new 1939 Chevrolet, which makes its formal bow Saturday in 10,000 dealers' showrooms from coast to coast.

The two new Chevrolet models, designed as the Master Deluxe and the Master 85, are offered as embodying not only distinctive style but an even finer aggregate of performance, safety and comfort characteristics than that which made their predecessors sales leaders in 1938. Two new models . . . a Master Deluxe four passenger coupe with many distinctive features, and a Master 85 business coupe available on both chassis . . . are added for 1939, the sport coupe and cabriolet being discontinued.

The major mechanical improvements for 1939 are the new vacuum gearshift with steering column control, optional on both series and the new perfected Knee-Action riding system on the Master Deluxe.

Dealers in Boone and Kenton counties are preparing to have the new models on display, Saturday. They are Bill Collins Chevrolet, Florence; Vest Chevrolet Company, Walton; and Kenton County Motor at Independence. These dealers invite you to drop into their showrooms and inspect the 1939 Chevrolet.

LOCAL MAN BUYS WESTERN SHEEP

O. W. Cleek and Oscar Chandler of Walton recently returned from the range country of Montana with 900 good black faced western range ewe lambs. Mr. Cleek received 450 head or one half the shipment.

These lambs should make real breeding ewes in another year. The men state they have made good connection in the west and another year will be able to supply Boone County farmers with good western breeding ewes. Our farmers don't want just western ewes but western range ewes because this type of western breeding ewe is found to be free from parasites and do much better than ewes from other sections of the west.

FREE WOOD OFFERED TO CHOPPERS

"Keep the Home Fires Burning" will become a reality if the offer of Joe Northcutt, farmer, of near Walton, is accepted by ambitious choppers. Mr. Northcutt has a quantity of good down wood that is more than he can use, and to get it cleared out of his way he is giving it away to those who will come and get it. His farm is two miles south-east of Walton.

In making the offer Mr. Northcutt said that he realized that many deserving citizens who did not have funds to buy fuel, but were in need of wood to heat and cook with this winter would be glad of the opportunity to get it free, and first come, first served.

Youths Apprehended In Local Burglaries

Local officials investigating the disappearance of four watches from lockers at the Walton-Verona High school, arrested two Walton youth Friday morning. After lengthy questioning, the boys confessed and implicated the ring-leader, Elwood Beech, 24, of Mt. Zion Neighborhood in Grant county. Following arrest of the older boy, several petty burglaries that had been going on for some time were uncovered, including the theft of tires and wheels valued over $30 from a car owned by C. C. Colliers of Mt. Zion.

The two Walton youths, Harry Wayne Hopperton, 16, and Ray Coyle, 14, gave officers directions for the recovery of missing articles, and the four watches were included in recovered goods. Beech arranged to have Grant county authorities held under bond. Hopperton and Coyle were taken to Williams-town, where the case was finally transferred to the jurisdiction of the Boone county court. Following conferences with officials at Burlington, Walton, Judge Parris and Grant county authorities, Rev. R. P. DeMoines offered to act as probation officer for the local boys to give them an opportunity to attend school, and they were released to him.

"Party Record Is the Tobacco Growers Urged To File Issue" Says Barkley At Opening Rally

Campaign Opened at Pikeville Saturday

Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley opened his campaign for reelection in November Saturday with a pledge to continue efforts "to make our Government flexible to meet the demands of a growing civilization without undermining the fundamental structure of our Republic."

The Senator, who termed himself a "progressive and a liberal Democrat," was introduced to a crowd of several thousand by Congressman A. J. May, Shackelford Miller, Jr., Louisville. Democratic campaign manager, introduced Representative May.

Senator Barkley said the issue in November is the "past record" and the "good faith and ability" of the Democratic Party.

Also involved, Barkley added, "is the utter incapacity of the so-called leadership of the un-regenerated Republican Party in the nation to offer any sensible or practical substitute for what they condemn in the present National Administration."

"No political organization in these times can restore the confidence of the people in it by merely making faces to those who are trying to do things," the Paducah Senator continued.

Parent-Teacher Week to Be Observed

By proclamation of Governor Chandler, the week of October 16-22 has been designated Parent-Teacher Week in Kentucky. There will be a special endeavor to bring the aims of the organization to the attention of the public, and a concerted membership drive will be launched.

The promotion of child welfare in home, school and community is the major objective of the Parent-Teacher Association, which strives to bring into closer cooperation the home and school, that parents and teachers may work in harmony for the right development of the child.

The Parent-Teacher Association in Boone county is endeavoring to aid teachers and pupils in solving their problems, and their efforts will be rewarded with better understanding between the parents and the school officials.

You owe it to your boy or girl, if of school age, to enlist in the local club during this special week.

Church memberships in the United States hit a high peak in 1937, another harbinger of better times to come.

Senator Barkley Opens Campaign

Senator Alben W. Barkley opened his campaign for re-election in the November primary at Pikeville Saturday with a pledge to continue efforts "to make our Government flexible to meet the demands of a growing civilization without undermining the fundamental structure of our Republic." He further added during his speech the issue in November is the "past record" and the "good faith and ability" of the Democratic party.

The merits, issues, and "mud-slinging" among the factions making up the Democratic party in Kentucky were all placed before the voters during the primary, and their choice indicated the great faith they have in the ability of the Senate Majority leader, thus leaving no room for any doubt but that he will be given an overwhelming "vote of confidence" at the polls in November.

Governor Chandler's pledge of active support of all the Democratic party nominees was received and read to the audience during the rally by Shackelford Miller, Jr., State Democratic Campaign Manager.

A Warning to Girls Who Go to the City

Thousands of girls from the agricultural areas and the smaller towns are marching upon the big cities of the United States, looking for jobs in their effort to become self-supporting.

The trek of girls into the larger cities has been going on for some years. Unfortunately, many of them go to the cities without having any position and without adequate money to support themselves. Some of them have sense enough to come home promptly, but, in other cases, the girls go up against a hopeless battle that ends in tragedy.

Recently, in the Good Housekeeping Magazine, Sarah Comstock analyzed the problems of working girls in six cities. She concluded that a majority of the girls, who go to the cities, have never directed their own lives. In their anxiety to "make good," they endure hardships that injure their health. Some cut down their meals while others burn the candle at both ends. Miss Comstock warns girls that they must take two things to the big cities—money to support themselves for several months without work and references that will aid them in securing employment. Her estimate is that a girl going to a big city without work should have about $65 a month. More have a position in advance or enough cash to live for a month without work.

Among the thousands of girls who have gone to the larger cities have been some from Boone county. There may be others who are now contemplating such an expedition. They will do well to carefully weigh the advice of Miss Comstock. While, occasionally, a girl, or a boy, may go to a large city without having employment in sight and land a lucky job, the vast majority of these youthful adventurers will find the going tough. They will be subjected to physical and emotional stresses that are not calculated to do them good.

While we are in thorough sympathy with the girl who has determined to make herself independent in an economic sense and accord her the same liberty to do so that society offers boys, sensible girls will easily recognize that, in a strange city, facing innumerable difficulties, they face problems and dangers that do not beset young men. Consequently, sensible young women will make plans carefully before going to larger cities for employment.

November 11 has been proclaimed Armistice Day by Governor Chandler, and should be observed by every Legion Post in the State and its other patriotic citizens.

Civilian Conservation Corps.

There has been much discussion in recent months about the value of the Citizens Conservation Corps camps in Kentucky; some of the discussion by those who know the facts, but most of it by those who have been taking the results for granted.

The true picture of CCC activities would fill several daily papers if recorded in writing, but the actual employment of 55,964 Kentucky enrollees between the ages of 17 and 23 and 4,500 non-enrolled personnel from this State since April, 1933, are facts worthy of any large scale rehabilitation work. Enrolled in the Corps from Kentucky during the period ending on June, 1938, were 6,902 young men in addition to an estimated 912 personnel consisting of supervisors and camp officials. On that same day there were 5,317 enrollees doing conservation work alone.

Among the many important work items completed by the CCC enrollees from April, 1933 through June 30, 1938 were: fire hazards reduced, 13,487 acres; fire suppression and prevention, 123,008 man-days; fighting forest fires, 56,543 man-days; forest stand improvement, 22,258 acres; 2,631,000 forest trees planted; 74,171 acres treated for erosion control; and 98,243 erosion control check dams.

Farmers and land-owners of Boone and surrounding counties have benefitted from all the activities of this federally-supported erosion control work done by the CCC force of the Walton camp under the supervision of a competent staff of supervisors and officers. The acres of farm lands saved through this valuable work cannot be estimated in dollars and cents.

Weekly payments of around $30 will be voted on in some states next month to the people over 50, all of which is in keeping with the times.

If, as claimed, the Kentucky State debt has been reduced from 24 millions to around 6 millions the Governor must be given credit whether on his side of the fence or not.

DIXIE STORIES, ANECDOTES, SAYINGS; SOME OLD, SOME NEW, SOME ORIGINAL AND SOME OTHERWISE

By WILL S. NORRIS
5582 Belmont Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio

In the days after the Civil War when people had real hard times and no money for luxuries, a silver dollar looked as big as a cartwheel. The voters of one of the back mountain counties in the hills of Kentucky decided they wanted a representative to go to Frankfort to help hold down unnecessary expenditures of money. They persuaded one of their good old-fashioned economical citizens, Mr. Johnson, to make the race for representative on an economy platform.

Mr. Johnson said he was not the man, as he was uneducated and could not read or write. Their answer was: "You are a successful economical business man. That is what we want and need to look after our interests at Frankfort, which we know you will do."

They elected him the ha-ha, saying: "You cannot read it; it is a free invitation to a banquet given by the Governor. He is willing to pay the bill." That morning, as soon as the House was called to order and the regular preliminaries were gone through, he was on his feet and said: "Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to this bill."

They gave him the ha-ha, saying: "You cannot read it; it is a free invitation to a banquet given by the Governor. He is willing to pay the bill." That morning, as soon as the House was called to order and the regular preliminaries were gone through, he was on his feet and said: "Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to this bill."

While that stand and principle is not popular, the uneducated legislator was right. Too much money is being recklessly appropriated and let for the country people to pay the freight. Our lawmakers, from the highest to the lowest, have acted as if the money grown on trees. The slogan will have to be economy from now on. If not, the taxpayers all over the country are going to rebel. We need more old-fashioned horse-sense legislators, from Washington down.

ON HIS TRAIL

KENTUCKY by HOMESPUN . . S. F. White

PLAYING SAFE

I sit at ease and read the news
Of the markets up and down,
And if you please I have no blues,
No looser's painful frowns,
I calculate just what they'll do
In tomorrow's market gamble.
I estimate, quite reckless too,
The way each stock will tumble.
If they go up, I slap my back
And praise my calculations.
"I told you so—I have the knack!"
I tell my near relations.
If they go down I swell with pride,
The markets true commentor.
I'm pleased because I stayed outside,
(I have no dough to enter).
—Exchange.

The writer was told the following story, vouched for by a reliable resident of a foothill county. A couple resided in his neighborhood many years ago who failed to get along amicably in double harness. She was a nagger of the irritating type, and the husband somewhat easy going and staid. He wanted of this, that and the other, continually harping on everything and everybody and the spouse in particular. His patience approached the vanishing point. One day when she was a little more irritating than usual, and following many demands, with the woodbox full, she snapped at him: "Get some more wood!"

He gave her a long, hard look, grabbed his hat and disappeared in the direction of the woodpile, but did not come back. Years went by, some thirty of them, and still he hadn't returned. In the meantime he had secured a divorce, remarried and buried the second husband. One day while rocking on her porch a stranger appeared in the lane leading from the big road. He came up on the porch and stood looking at the woman. After the usual interchange of salutations, he asked her what became of her husband. She replied the first man ran away and she had died. He asked her: "Do you know me?" The old lady peered and looked him up and down; she got around him, and shook her head, saying: "You look like somebody I have seen, but I can't rightly call your name." He stepped down to the yard, and as he started away said: "I am the man you saw after a load of stovewood more than 30 years ago," and kept going toward the road, out of her life for the second time. When this man left his home he went to Alaska, amassed a comfortable competence and returned to the adjoining county, purchasing a nice farm. He had lived for 18 years, not 20 miles from his former mate.

Both major political parties unlimbered their big guns in the first skirmish of the 1938 Senatorial race Saturday, the Democrats at Pikeville and the Republicans at Lexington. Senator Alben W. Barkley was the principal speaker at the Eastern Kentucky rally and was heard by hundreds of friends and admirers. The Senator, it is said, will probably make one or two speeches in each Congressional district, but will take time to help Senator Gillette of Iowa. It will be recalled that Gillette was on the Presidential purge list but won out, however, it is said he has been going in November. The Republican candidate, John P. Hawley opened at Lexington, and also heard was Congressman Ralph Brewster of Maine, who will be remembered as a Lincoln Day speaker in Kentucky a few years since. The Republican leaders evidently are not superstitious, for Lexington is a starting point for their campaigns has been called "the city of several years, yet they go back for more. Only about three weeks are left to whip the voters in line, and it begins to look like this will be a campaign minus the usual pyrotechnics. Frankly, at this time there is not a sign on the political horizon to indicate the least interest in the race, if one disregards the activities of the usual beneficiaries. And, would it be safe to say the shortness of the time in which to make the campaign, is something to be thankful for in politically infested Kentucky?

A story is told on a former employee of the Old Age Pension force in a Kentucky county. This gentleman is usually very efficient in all he undertakes, however, like all humankind occasionally slips up. It is said that a report was called for on a lady applicant in his bailiwick. He developed the raised a garden, a small patch of rye and about 50 chickens. The employee was crowded with work, and to his amazement a few days after this report was sent in he received a letter severing him from the payroll. At a loss for the summary action he made inquiry, and was referred to the copy of that particular report concerning the lady. He was dumfounded to find that it read, in part: Mrs. ———— owned an acre of rye and reaped 50 chickens.

Entering a postoffice, built within a couple of years, a few days ago I was confronted with a bronze tablet some thirty inches square bearing the following inscription: This building was erected during the administration of Franklin Delano Roosevelt. The statement absolutely true, but why the necessity of spending the taxpayers money to repeat information that all and sundry know? We recall thousands of signs telling of WPA projects, and larger ones advertising "This road was built by Happy Chandler, etc." The best sign coming to my attention is the one that was reported from Western Kentucky last summer read "This road was built by (so and so) and Happy Chandler and Keen Johnson did not have a ——— thing to do with it."

WOULD NEVER WORK

A man who calls himself "Smokey," wrote to the New York Evening Post and asked: "Why, in the name of a name, should anybody work, who does not have to? (I mean work for pay which might go to another.) I feel that all men and women who have independent incomes should retire from business."

If this suggestion were followed, the majority of the successful people in this country would quit work. The assumption of "Smokey" is that their jobs would be taken by other who would prove equally effective. But would they?

The chances are certain that they would not. In general the fact that a man has money in the bank and is paid a good salary indicates that he is a superior person. Businesses prosper because the management is good. If the management were taken over by second-rate men, the business would soon be in difficulties. More men would then be out of work, and a cry would go up for the old bosses to return—Imperial Exchange.

Twenty-seven ridge ventilators were built in Lewis county during the past eight months.

More western ewes and rams were brought into Todd county last month.

In Bracken county farmers have found that hybrid corn has shorter stalks with more ears to the stalk.

SLICKERS

Not many will recognize the title of today's essay as applying to anything to eat. More refined people called them, even in my time and place, dumplings. I can keep my mouth from watering for a while, I want to talk about them, call them whatever you desire.

Fried chicken is good, baked chicken with dressing is one of our standard foods, but stewed chicken with dumplings is, to my way of thinking, the best of the whole lot. Since it is nearly impossible to eat such things without making noises that are now forbidden in civilized society, and seldom sees this old delicacy. Again I do not know how to cook them, except to say that the bony parts of the frying-sized chicken are stewed in some salted water, and strips or gobs of ordinary bread dough are added to the water at the appropriate time, so that the whole concoction gets done together. What Mrs. Post would do with such a mess it is wild to surmise; I know how to tackle it, though, with or without manners. Get a spoon and a fork and wade in; use your fingers freely; make as many noises as you please; pile your bones on a plate or the edge of your bowl. That is sufficient, but what a thrill awaits one who has never tried slickers!

Please do not mistake this for chicken pie. That is well enough in its place, but it is a refined dish, capable of being served as just, with napkins and table manners. Chicken pie is baked; slickers are stewed. Some people regard them as food for semi-invalids, but a full-grown man with an appetite equally grown has found them in recent months as good as they were when he was a small child.

Chicken soup or squirrel soup may be invalid food. The only objection I used to have to this kind of food was its watery nature; it seemed a bit too thin to maintain life. It is true that after a few hard chills and the accompanying fever even this watery stuff tasted pretty good. But for a well person, good old chicken and dumplings! The next time you hear the old ballad that has been revived, "Shell Be Comin' 'Round the Mountain," make a resolution to taste chicken and dumplings before you sing it again; then you will know how welcome she was, whoever she may have been.

"Rare Old" Newspapers
F. WHILE going through an old trunk in the attic, you find a copy of the Ulster County Gazette, published in Kingston, N. Y., in 1800 and containing an account of the death of George Washington, don't get excited over your "discovery."

The chances are about 999,999 out of 1,000,000 that it's a "facsimile copy" of the Gazette of that date and thousands of them have been reprinted and distributed as souvenirs. It was first done back in 1828 in celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Declaration of Independence but most of them were produced for the Philadelphia centennial in 1876.

Naturally, in the course of time the paper becomes aged and yellow and brittle. So in that respect it's "old." But it's neither rare nor valuable, unless you can find someone who is buying "fake antiques." Even then he won't give you much for it.

The only known "genuine" copy of this famous paper is now in the Library of Congress. All of the thousands of others which bob up from time to time are reprints. Another "original" may be found some time. But it's very, very doubtful!

THE POCKETBOOK OF KNOWLEDGE

NATIONAL DAIRY SHOW HONORS DESCENDANT OF FAMOUS KENTUCKY COW

A new world's record Jersey that descended directly from a Kentucky cow was the subject of special honors at the recent National Dairy Show in Columbus, Ohio. The new champion, which produced more than 1,000 pounds of butterfat in 305 days, traces back directly six generations to Dolly's Valentine, a cow that produced 570 pounds of butterfat in a year at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station in 1899. That was the first world's record production for a Jersey cow.

In 1911, J. M. Dickson & Son of Oregon came to Kentucky in search of a good sire, and purchased a grandson of the famous Kentucky cow. Taken back to the western state, this sire produced 26 daughters that averaged 664 pounds of butterfat.

With this Kentucky blood as a foundation, improvement went forward, until the present champion nearly doubled the record of Dolly's Valentine. The champion is owned by an Oregon breeder, and was brought to Columbus especially for exhibition purposes.

Dolly's Valentine, the great Kentucky producer, was one of the famous herd established at the Agricultural Experiment Station at Lexington by Dr. M. A. Sowell, director of the Station from 1885 to 1912.

KENTUCKY 4-H CLUB NEWS

Sixty-three western yearling ewes are in the hands of club members in Todd county. Local assistance was obtained in financing their purchase. All the ewes were mated to registered rams. Many of the boys taking the ewes never raised sheep before.

John Elmer Kalmey, the Jefferson county boy who won the state championship in dairying at the Kentucky State Fair, also had the grand champion cow in the Kentucky classes. He won $57 in cash prizes. The Brainerd Rotary club honored four outstanding Kenton county club members. As guests of the club they made brief reports on sheep, pigs, camps, meetings and other activities of clubs in the state and the nation.

FOUR-H CLUB MEMBERS FINISH 1,010 CALVES FOR LOUISVILLE SHOW

Four-H club boys and girls in 39 Kentucky counties are fattening 1,010 head of calves for the 17th annual fall cattle show to be held at the Bourbon Stock Yards in Louisville, November 9-11. This is the largest number of calves ever prepared by the club for this show.

The 4-H club calves on feed include 583 Angus, 350 Herefords and 77 Shorthorns. Wayne county club members are feeding 106 head, the largest number in any one county. Seventy-six calves are in the feedlots in Pulaski county, 69 in Caldwell county and 63 in Garrard county. Counties in which calves are being fed by 4-H club members for the first time include Boyle, Carroll, Clark and Franklin.

Three carloads of calves will be exhibited by members of Utopia clubs, which are organizations of older farm boys and girls. They are in Caldwell, Garrard and Pulaski counties.

Many cash premiums and other prizes will be divided among owners of the best single calves and of carloads, and in other classes of the show. The state champion 4-H club member in the baby beef calf project will be selected at the show.

It is expected that the 4-H club calves will sell for nearly $100,000.

Cattle also will be exhibited and sold at the Louisville show by members of the Future Farmers of America, and by farmers in this and other states.

FARM PROGRAM YEAR CLOSES OCTOBER 31

Kentucky farmers cooperating in the agricultural conservation program are reminded by O. M. Farrington of Lexington, state executive director of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, that they still have time to earn full payment for achieving the soil-building goals for their farms, October 31 is the closing date for carrying out soil-building practices under the 1938 program.

While it may be too late to sow grasses and legumes, it is pointed out that provision for improving non-crop open pasture land is included in the 1938 soil-building goals.

for farms. This allowance can be earned by applying limestone or superphosphate to pasture land prior to October 31.

Most Kentucky land needs lime and phosphate, and Farrington says that "farmers are passing up a great opportunity if they fail to take advantage of the conservation program whereby they in effect will be paid for carrying out soil-building practices which enterprising farmers long ago have found to be profitable."

DAVIS REUNION

The nineteenth annual Reunion of the Davis family was held Sunday, October 2, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Parker, near Independence, Ky. It was an ideal day for such a gathering and as the noon hour approached the long table was set in the yard, it fairly groaned with good things to eat. W. E. HYBRID CORN DEMONSTRATIONS HELD

Two demonstrations of the high value of hybrid corn were held last week in Boone County at the farm of Grant Maddox near Florence and John Klogg, near Petersburg. Last May, these men planted 14 varieties of hybrid corn along with open pollinated varieties, consisting of Reids Yellow Dent and the corn they usually planted on their farm. Last Tuesday and Wednesday these plants were harvested and weighed.

The white hybrids developed by the Kentucky Experiment Station gave the highest yield in both demonstrations. Three of the yellow hybrids, Indiana 848, U. S. 44 and Kentucky 101 gave yields very close to those of the white. The best hybrids yielded as much as 25% more than Reids Yellow Dent and Pride of Saline. The white hybrids were about as early as Reids Yellow Dent in maturing while the yellow hybrids were from 1 to 2 weeks earlier.

The hybrids were superior to the other varieties in standing up. Only about 5% of the hybrid stalks were down or twisted while in Reids and Pride of Saline, 1-3 of the stalks were bent over or broken. Ohio points to which the hybrids were superior were soundness of corn and scarcity of barren stalks.

This corn has been kept separated and will be weighed again when it is well dried, according to Jack Dye, Assistant County Agent. Yields of each variety will be calculated and this information made public when the weighing has been completed.

F. S. HILL Appointed Governor of Farm Credit Division

F. S. Hill has been appointed Governor of the Farm Credit Administration at Washington, succeeding W. I. Myers recently named head of the Department of Agricultural Economics at Cornell University. Hill has worked continuously at the Farm Credit Administration since it was organized in 1933, and has been Deputy Governor since 1934, according to statement by Ernest Rice, General Agent of the Farm Credit Administration of Louisville.

Although only 37 years old, Hill is widely known for his work in agricultural economics and farm financing. His experience was drawn upon heavily by the Farm Credit Administration in perfecting the "normal value" appraisal policy which enabled the Federal land banks and Commissioner to refinance over two billion dollars of farm mortgage debts following the breakdown of agricultural credit in 1932-33.

Born on a farm near Kingman, Kansas, not far from the heart of the winter wheat belt, Hill lived until he was 12 years old when his family moved to 1500-acre farm near Davidson, Saskatchewan. At that time American farmers were homesteading new Canadian spring wheat land. While he was growing up, going to school and farming, what Hill saw of the boom and collapse in commodity prices and values during and after the World War period impressed him lastingly.

Seventy tons of alfalfa from 14 acres in three cuttings were obtained by Dr. Allen Shemwell, Livingston county.

ROTARY CLUB AIDS 4-H GIRL

The Fulton Rotary club has voted to give Miss Joan Collier $15 to help defray expenses in attending the National 4-H Congress in Chicago. She will represent Kentucky in the clothing judging contest.

The man trembled. He was under a spell. He must break it . . . quickly . . . He looked about him in a panic. The singers had finished their tasks, and now were clustered around the barbecue. Their voices seemed to come from a great distance. There was no one near. Heat shimmered from the earth, but the Governor of California shivered.

Yes, it was the vendimia. Why not? She was his. So utterly his. And he needed her. Not only his body, but his mind and spirit called for the fulfillment a blending with her would bring. But he fought the girl's witchcraft, and she sensed it. "I know. It is your woman. La Gobernadora. Pahl!" she spat. "That white one. That cold cruel Spaniard! Listen!" She leaned forward eagerly. "I know what happened when the Frenchmen were here! I know who brought La Gobernadora through the gates of the presidio the night before the Frenchmen sailed! We can do away with her!" She laughed triumphantly. "Look!" She slipped her hand in her bosom and brought out a little sack of skin. It was dry and something rattled in it.

"Look! This is magic. I got it from a witch woman. It is strong medicine. If I will it I can make her wither away and die . . . and then . . ."

The Governor unconsciously put his hand beneath his leather jerkin. "Junipero Serra . . . he muttered, feeling the scrap of sanctified cloth. He closed his lids to shut out the warm wonder of the Indian girl's eyes.

"Go away," he said gutturally. "Please, Indrueila, if you love me, go away."

The girl did not move. It was the Governor who rose and unsteady feet and staggered like a drunken man toward the festa.

In spite of the priests' moving about in their somber habits, the vendimia seemed a pagan festival. Beneath the ancient live-oaks, a crowd of merry-makers celebrated the vintage in manner traditional.

Among them Don Pedro noticed his guests from the Presidio at San Francisco and Santa Barbara, and a group of officers and sailors from the San Carlos which lay in Monterey Bay. They were wreathed with vines, and they were drinking wine from the last vintage, singing, laughing, dancing; uttering robust jokes, circling around the barbecue pits where slaying cooks were lifting the spiced roasted bull and hacking it into pieces.

Near by was the great vat where the grapes were poured to be crushed. A little stream ran near it, and there, all who wished to tread the wine washed their feet, then plunged into the purple pool with jocular shouts.

On a rough date, beneath a ramada, sat La Gobernadora surrounded by young laughing officers, who vied with one another in composing flattering toasts to her beauty, her wit, her distinguished position as Queen of the Californias. She was dressed in the Maja costume, in her lap a great basket of grapes, and on her head a wreath of grape leaves. At her feet a soldier sat, his head tied in a scarlet handkerchief, and across his knees a guitar. He was singing a song to her, and she smiled, as Don Pedro watched, and lifted her glass to the troubadour.

Don Pedro stared at Eulalia curiously, as though he had never seen her before. She seemed happy. This was what she loved, craved, after; all; flattery, admiration, adulation. He stopped uncertainly. For a moment he thought he would go back to the brown ardent Indian girl who still waited for him beneath the quiet sheltering tree. But young Pedro, watching the carving of the bull meat, saw him.

"There he is!" he shouted. "Now we can have the feast!" So the Governor was drawn unwillingly into the festivities. He took his seat beside La Gobernadora, ate, drank and replied absent-mindedly to all who spoke. It was only when he felt a slight touch on his shoulder, and looking up saw Indrueila offering him a cup of wine, that he roused for a moment from his reverie. She smiled at him reproachfully and moved away, the wine jug poised on her shoulder.

After the feast, one of the Governor's old Catalan soldiers clasped his hands for attention.

"Senores y Senoras! Senoritos y Senoritas! Caballeros y amigos! Padri! Padres y Indios! I will sing! I will sing a song of our illustrious Gobernador, el Senor Don Pedro Pages!"

"Viva! Viva!" shouted the crowd.

And the little white wreath on his head as the old soldier experimented with his guitar. "I will sing a song of El Gobernador concerning his prowess as a mighty hunter, and how he saved the Indians of San Luis Obispo from being eaten alive by bears! He saved his people from starving by giving them the bears to eat, and how his mission was founded because of all these doughy deeds!"

Then he began to sing a long series of coplas.

"No ships sailed into the bay. We were starving day by day. All the priests could do was pray. Ay-ee, Don Pedro!"

"All too weak to shoot a deer, Feeling all that Death was near, Filled with anguish and with fear. Ay-ee, Don Pedro!"

"But the mighty Catalan, Pioneer and fighting man, He will save if any can! Ay-ee, Don Pedro!"

"Ay-ee, Don Pedro!" chorused the merry-makers joyously.

"Give me strong men two," said he "Who will bravely come with me. We will shoot what we will see! Ay-ee, Don Pedro!"

"Forty went he, this man of might, Empty belly belted tight, Hunting far by day and night. Ay-ee, Don Pedro!"

Dozens of verses sang the old soldier, and at the end of each the audience shouted. "Ay-ee, Don Pedro!" The Governor sat with bowed head, covered with confusion, and listened.

The singer went on, telling of the frightened Indians, rushing through their village, afraid of the giant bears that were killing them one by one.

"But our brave Don was not afraid, With loaded gun and trusty blade, He stalked into the canon's shade. Ay-ee, Don Pedro!"

"He walked into the wild beast's lair And faced the savage grizzly bear, And killed him in a fight most fair! Ay-ee, Don Pedro!"

"And when he'd killed one awful beast, He killed another for a feast, And wiped them out from great to least. Ay-ee, Don Pedro!"

"The Indians with great delight Praised Don Pedro for his might, And feasted him a day and night. Ay-ee, Don Pedro!"

"And hungry priests and soldiers fed Upon the bears that he killed dead, 'Viva our hunter bold!' they said. Ay-ee, Don Pedro!"

"Ay-ee, Don Pedro!"

"Hala!"

"Viva el Gobernador!"

"Viva!" The party gathered in a circle around him, singing and shouting, toasting him in tilting wine-cups, creating more verses for the endless song.

The Governor stood by quietly until the song was finished, but when the circle broke, he slipped away alone to the tree on the hill, and threw himself down on the ground. It was sunset, and color rioted everywhere on land and sea. The voices of the singers seemed to come from a great distance. He closed his eyes.

"Ay-ee, Don Pedro!" someone said softly.

Indrueila dropped on the ground beside him.

CHAPTER XXIV

After the vendimia and the harvest the winter season settled down upon the Royal Presidio of Monterey and the Mission San Carlos at Carmelo. Winter meant rain, days and weeks and months of rain. The Rio Carmelo flooded its banks as it filled, and a hundred rills and streams sprang into being. The trees sighed and dripped dismally, and there was little life aside except the screaming seagulls that, driven from the ocean by storms, came inland to seek food, shrieking and wheeling in the gray skies.

In the Palacio of the Governor all was gloom. Angustias grieved for Chichil, and moved about like a gloomy wraith.

Since the departure of the French explorers La Gobernadora seemed frozen, all except her somber eyes that burned resentfully from her white face. Little lines appeared about her mouth, and drew the corners of her lips down in a perpetual expression of unhappiness that wrung Don Pedro's heart. She spent hours, days, lying upon her bed, staring at nothing, doing nothing, or huddled before the sputtering fire, looking at the flames with a blank far-away expression that frightened the Governor with its hopelessness, its despair.

She no longer spent hours over her hair, or the little cares of her toilet, but wore the same gown, day in and day out, and even adopted the habit of wrapping her head in a scarf. She shivered constantly in the damp abode house. Sometimes she would look out on the parade-grounds, churned to a muddy lake by the feet of horses and men, and catch sight of the wife of a soldier, a baby hugged close to her in a shawl, running from one house to another.

She almost envied these little soldiers' wives, with their endless chatter about nothing, their contentment with empty lives. Sometimes she thought wildly of running out into the rain herself. But if she did, where would she go? So she only shivered and drew her manton closer about her.

Pedro Pages was profoundly distressed. Living in the small palace with the unhappy woman Eulalia, loving her, sorrowing over her and unable to express one word of what he felt, for he had never referred to the dreadful night when he had struck her and dragged her back from running away, depressed his days and saddened his nights.

His only comfort was in reading over and over again the few books he possessed. "Las Sergas de Esplandian," "Sancho Panza" and plays of Shakespeare. Long hours he would read, then impatiently order his horse and ride for hours through mud and rain, somewhere.

There was only one light, one spot of warmth in his darkness, and that was not the clear warmth of the sun, or the pure cold ray of a star, but a light like a little fire shows from the depths of some murky cave. And that was Indrueila. Time and again he put the thought of the girl out of his mind, only to have her walk into his brain and heart, and through some witchcraft, take possession of him.

And so the winter pressed down on Monterey. But from the south, from Santa Barbara, came letters from Fray Fermín Lasuen, bubbling with a youthful enthusiasm, that rose perpetually in his old heart.

"Freezing Weather" Warning Issued to Nation's Motorists

WARNING motorists that first freezing weather is at hand, the American Automobile Association urges all owners to take immediate steps to improve, if possible, last year's good record of car protection.

"Last year, car owners poured some 40,000,000 gallons of anti-freeze solution into their radiators," the A. A. A. bulletin says. "Experience with the ravages that can result from freezing engines has caused motorists generally to act at the first hint of freezing weather."

Cars should have their cooling system cleaned and tightened, and all hose connections carefully inspected before any protective solution is put in, the engineers point out. Without this precaution there is grave danger of loss of anti-freeze, and many kinds of damage to engine parts beside that of freezing.

Damage by overheating through loss of anti-freeze solution, is one of the commonest winter motor ills in these days of high compression, high temperature engines. The only sure protection against both extreme cold and extreme heat is anti-freeze of the permanent, non-boiling type. This gives the modern engine the safe high temperature range needed for efficient operation, and at the same time prevents loss of protection through boiling-away of the anti-freeze solution.

Before having the cooling system thoroughly cleaned and tightened, the A. A. A. recommends a change to a lighter oil, adjustment of carburetor to provide a richer mixture, adjustments of the ignition system, particularly the breaker points, and checking of the battery, brakes and tires.

Contrary to popular belief, September brings first freeze-up weather to nearly half the states of the Union. October practically completes the first cold-spell visitation for all parts of the country. Only six states normally experience their first freeze as late as November.

Regular eating hours are more important for children than for adults. When they eat between meals, children often take the wrong kind of food, as well as destroy their appetite for the regular meals. Sweets between meals are especially injurious.

FIVE-IN-ONE RECIPE WORKS MAGIC IN CAKE BAKING

Standard Formula Is Easy to Vary Says Cooking Expert

By Marie Gibson
Courier-Journal Food Editor

Wise housewives are adopting the plan of developing a few "standard recipes" in their kitchen—recipes which can be varied, yet which are always dependable.

Such a recipe for white cake is this "Magic Recipe." The variations are given—and many more can be developed by a clever cook.

If you're making the cake for a party, you might try dainty cup cakes. Ice some with chocolate, some with white and some with butter-scootch frosting. Chop nuts for the topping of the chocolate ones, and a cherry for a highlight on the white ones and dip some of them in colored toasted coconut.

A nut cake may be made from this recipe by simply adding one cup of chopped nuts to the batter. And have you ever tried grated orange rind as a flavoring for such a cake?

Magic Cake
One-half cup triple-creamed shortening, one-half teaspoon salt, one teaspoon vanilla, one cup sugar, two eggs, unbeaten, two and one-half teaspoons baking powder, two cups sifted flour, three-fourths cup milk.

Combine shortening, salt and vanilla. Add sugar gradually and cream until light and fluffy. Add eggs one at a time, beating thoroughly after each addition.

Add baking powder to flour and sift three times. Add small amounts of flour to creamed mixture, alternately with milk, mixing after each addition, until smooth. Pour batter into two eight-inch greased layer pans. Bake in moderately hot oven (275 degrees Fahrenheit) twenty-five minutes.

Spread chocolate frosting between layers and on top and sides of cake.

Loaf Cake—Bake in greased 10x2-inch pan in moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) forty minutes.

Cup Cakes—Bake in greased cup pans in hot oven (425 degrees Fahrenheit) twenty minutes. Makes two dozen small cakes.

Spanish Cake—Add one teaspoon cinnamon in creaming shortening with sugar.

Nut Cake—Add one cup chopped nuts with last quarter of flour and bake in greased 10x2-inch pan in moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) forty minutes, or until done.

Chocolate Frosting
Two tablespoons shortening, one tablespoon butter, three ounces chocolate, five tablespoons hot milk, one and one-half cups sifted confectioners' sugar, one-half teaspoon vanilla, one-quarter teaspoon salt.

Melt shortening, butter and chocolate together over hot water. Pour hot milk over sugar and stir until sugar is dissolved. Add vanilla and salt. Add chocolate mixture and beat until smooth and thick enough to spread. Makes enough frosting to cover tops and sides of two eight-inch layers.

Here is another cake recipe which can be varied to suit your taste. This cake is especially nice when baked in a loaf pan, cut into squares and decorated with colored candy.

Novelty Squares
Two cups sifted cake flour, two teaspoons double-acting baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, two-thirds cup butter or other shortening, two cups granulated sugar, six eggs, well beaten, four tablespoons milk, one teaspoon vanilla.

Sift flour once. Measure. Add the baking powder and salt and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly. Add sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs and beat well. Add flour alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla. Bake in a greased pan in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for thirty-five minutes, or until done. Cut into two and a half-inch squares and decorate with colored candy.

May also be served plain, sprinkled with powdered sugar. Makes approximately fifteen squares.

Seven-Minute Frosting
Three eggs whites, unbeaten, two and one-fourth cups granulated sugar, seven tablespoons water, two and one-fourth teaspoons light corn syrup, one and one-half teaspoons vanilla.

Combine egg whites, sugar, water and corn syrup in top of double boiler, beating with rotary egg beater until thoroughly mixed. Place over rapidly boiling water. Beat constantly with a rotary egg beater and cook for seven minutes, or until frosting will stand in peaks. Remove from boiling water. Add vanilla, and beat until thick enough to spread.

Lesson for October 23

OUR DAY OF REST

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:8-11; Luke 13:10-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy.—Exodus 20:8.

Rest—how full of meaning that little word is when we recall that it means quiet for the struggling soul, calm for the troubled, repose for the weary, tranquility for the disturbed, cessation of labor for the worn-out one. God in His infinite wisdom saw that without rest man would soon destroy himself, and He made provision for one day in seven when labor should cease and man should be free for that recreation of soul and body which should fit him for the labor of the week. Men in their greed have coveted the time God gave for rest and have used it for themselves, and the ragged nerves and broken bodies, to say nothing of the impoverished spirits of our day, testify that it can be done only at our peril.

Our study centers around Scripture passages which have to do with the Jewish Sabbath, but since it was essentially a day of rest, and afforded an opportunity for the worship of God, the principles surrounding it are applicable to our day of rest—the first day of the week, the Lord's Day.

1. Why We Keep a Day of Rest (Exod. 20:8-11).

1. God commanded that there should be a day of rest—one out of seven—and that should be sufficient to cause His people to "remember" the day "to keep it holy." It is cause for grave concern that Sunday has become a day of swimming, hiking, auto-driving, golfing, and one might go on with the list almost indefinitely. Many men or women who have had built into their own character the stalwart virtues nurtured by family attendance at the house of God, have not only forgotten their own need and responsibility but are destroying every vestige of interest in divine worship in the hearts of their children. It is serious business to go astray oneself, but infinitely more serious to mislead one's own children.

Notice that the day of rest was to be not only for the family but also for servants and for visitors. The employer who operates his factory or office on Sunday violates this commandment. Note also that the man who is to rest on the seventh day is supposed to work on the six days. Some folk neglect to do both.

2. God's command is strengthened by the divine example (v. 11). We are not able to do all things that God does, but here we are privileged to follow His example.

II. How We Keep the Day of Rest (Luke 13:10-17).

The incident recorded by Luke does not give us an exhaustive list of things to be done with our day of rest, but it is interesting to note that our Lord was

1. In the house of God (v. 10). Jesus was in the synagogue. The distinguished apostle never became too great or too good to attend divine worship. We all need to go to church (if it is at all possible for us to do so) to fellowship with others in the things of Christ. Let us have a revival of church attendance, and not only on Sunday mornings, but also on Sunday night and for midweek prayer meeting.

2. Alert to the needs of others (vv. 11, 12). It is not indicated that the woman asked to be healed. Jesus saw her need and met it. We can not do what he did, but there are needs that we can meet if we are alert to see them and willing to help.

3. Active in service (v. 13). In spite of the criticism which He knew would come from the lazy and helpless standers-by, Jesus did the work of God. We may glorify God by being ready—yes, anxious—to serve in the church. Our daily work is set aside on the Lord's Day not that we should be indolent, but that we should be free to do the Lord's work.

4. Contending for the faith (v. 14).

14-17). Jesus met the unjust criticism (which, by the way, was leveled at the poor woman because the critic feared Jesus) by a masterly appeal to the law of the Pharisees (vv. 15, 16). But He did more than that; for He ably defended the rights of humanity as superior to the formalities of man-made law. The law is always supreme until the Lawgiver comes, and no law can hinder Him by its letter, as He fulfills its spirit.

We may not speak as Jesus did, that is to declare what the law is, but we may in His name, and by His grace and power declare the full counsel of God, defend it against its critics and withstand those who while bearing the name of Christian leaders only hinder the work of Christ (compare III John 9, 10). For such service we need His guidance, His wisdom, His power, and His grace.

the pay of 1000 School teachers Comes from the L & N

THIS MAY seem like a new idea to you, but it is an old story to the railroads. Each year the tax gatherer collects enough money from the L & N Railroad to help materially in maintaining your city, county and state government. Last year in the 13 states served by the road the total amount of property taxes paid was nearly four and a half million dollars. Of this amount about two million dollars went to support public schools.

At an average cost of $50 per pupil it is evident that the entire public cost of educating 40,000 children came from L & N taxes. One item of this cost is the salaries of at least 1000 teachers needed to tutor that many children.

All the railroads together pay taxes of nearly a million dollars a day. The portion of these taxes that go for school purposes is sufficient to pay for the schooling of over a million and a half children each year.

This is one very important reason why you should want to see the railroads prosper under private management. Under Government ownership the railroads would pay no taxes.

Although the railroads are today delivering the finest transportation service in their history, their future is being greatly handicapped by conditions over which they have no control. They need a different national policy. They need the help of a sensible program that will give them greater freedom in pricing and handling the only product they have to sell—transportation—a plan that will enable them to work out their own salvation under reasonable regulation and equal conditions as to competition.

The railroads have prepared such a program. You will find this entire program interesting. It gives a concise and clear-cut presentation of the needs of the most essential transportation industry in this country. Send for your copy today.

State and National Business Showing Renewed Vigor

The national business machine moved along at a somewhat accelerated tempo during the past week, according to reports to the Department of Commerce from 36 key cities, just received by the District Office. The high spot of the week was the strengthening of industrial lines following the set-up in motor industry production schedules, though as a whole, prospects for the future were brighter than the actual volume of present orders. Retail trade was again the laggard, due, according to reports, to unseasonably high temperatures, rather than lack of consumer interest. The lowered buying power. The statement frequently was made that the advent of cooler weather doubtless would stimulate purchases of Fall and Winter merchandise. The temporary slowing down in retail trade again adversely affected wholesale replacement orders, but this segment continued its general moderate advance. Prices were fairly firm and some increase in staple goods commitments was noted.

Louisville reported that department store sales increased sharply to level slightly above year ago. Wholesale dry goods lines expanded slightly. Furniture manufacturers reported some advance in sales and operating rates. Industry, as a whole, quickened.

Strike of 400 workers at Henderson, Ky., dress factory, over proposed 10 per cent pay cut.

Southeastern Indiana employment office reported payroll increase of 6.3 per cent since August 15.

Kentucky employment services reported placements for past week, 422, decrease of 8.8 per cent from preceding week.

Louisville bank clearing decreased 7 per cent from the same week year ago.

Conditions in Kentucky indicated good corn crop, unusually heavy hay crop, and generally good crop conditions except for dark first and dark air cured types of tobacco which were severely damaged by excessive rains. Burley tobacco, as a whole, in the State promised good production.

Contracts for $396,700 and $779,000 awarded for construction of bridge over Ohio River to connect Kentucky, Indiana, and Owensboro, Kentucky.

Federal Government, in conjunction with C. & O. Railroad and State Highway Department, will spend approximately $200,000 to build under pass at Coal Haven, Ky.

Boone Tobacco Growers Complete 1938 Marketing Data Sheets

AAA Allotment Cards Due Weed Farmers

One thousand ninety-seven Boone County farmers are scheduled to complete AAA tobacco marketing data sheets in preparation for the 1938 marketing allotment cards, according to H. R. Forkner, County Agent. The data sheets forms must be submitted to the State Office not later than Saturday, October 29. All growers who have not filed their tobacco marketing data information are urged to do so not later than Friday.

The AAA marketing quotas. Act sets up 350,000,000 pounds of the 1938 Burley tobacco to be marketed. An additional reserve of 2 per cent of 7,000,000 pounds is set up to adjust unmarketable allotments among growers. The total allotment is divided among all producers of Burley tobacco with each county receiving a proportional share of the allotment based on the production sales of growers during the past three years.

Growers who fail to file their allotment application in time will put the county to a disadvantage in securing a just proportion of the marketing allotment and in the delay the receiving of their allotment cards before the marketing season opens.

All tobacco growers whether town lot or ACP Cooperators or not should file application immediately if they have not already filed same. Applications should be filed at the county Agents Office in Burlington.
